SOCIETY WOMAN SHOT: VICTIM OF FLU

THIRD PARTY LOOMS WITH HEARST LEADER

Democratic Unrest Aids Movement.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Political developments of the last few weeks have brought to the fore as a serious possibility the appearance of a third party in the presidential campaign this year. Potential candidates of such a party are beginning to appear and indulge in the same rivalries as characterize the contests for the nomination in the Republican and Democratic parties.

Unrest in the Democratic party appears to be contributing most conspicuously to the third party movement. So far the Republicans seem to be little affected, the only insurgency being manifested by some of the irreconcilable Republican opponents of the league of nations who have threatened to bolt if their party should indorse the league even with reservations.

From Democratic Side.

It is from the Democratic side that one hears the most talk of the high desirability of founding a third party, and the schism caused by the differences of the Bryan faction and the Wilson faction over the ratification of the peace treaty appears to offer a fertile field for the cultivation of a crop of insurgency.

The New York World, chief newspaper organ of the administration, mourns the passing of the Democratic party of other days, concedes the superior administrative ability of the Republican party and proposes Hoover for president on either a Democratic, Republican or independent ticket. The World has not cooled in its ardor for President Wilson, but tacitly concedes that the Democratic party has not prospered under his leadership.

Hearst Cuts Loose.

William Randolph Hearst has cut loose from the Democratic party and is advocating the formation of a third party. He says that "Mr Wilson has killed the Democratic party, with the able assistance of numerous fool followers," but does not think that the "universal revolt against the Democratic organization means that the people have turned to the Republican organization with fresh hopes." He sees only disaster for the Democratic party this year, asserting that the "candidacy of any other Democrat to succeed Mr. Wilson will be only a joke."

Mr. Hearst calls upon all insurgents to get together in a new party and beckons to the Plumb Plan leaguers and other radicals who are trying to form a labor party, the committee of forty-eight which recently insurged in a convention at St. Louis, the Non-partisan league and the Irish-American organizations. All these elements, he thinks, "outnumber either the Republican or the Democratic voting strength," and he calls on these organizations to hold a "common convention, adopt a common platform and nominate common candidates."

Johnson a "Regular."

At one time it was rumored that Hearst had set out to organize a third party with Senator Johnson of California as its candidate for president. But Johnson is now contesting for the Republican nomination and giving every evidence that he intends to remain "regular."

The gossip among the politicians now is that Hearst is seeking his own nomination for president on a third party ticket. That the editor has long entertained an ambition to be president is well known and if his movement for the creation of a third party should succeed he would stand out as its most important sponsor with a strong claim on its leadership as its nominee.

In this connection it is regarded as significant that Hearst has displayed great antagonism for men put forward as logical candidates of a third party, notably Herbert Hoover.

Has Ridiculed Hoover.

Ever since the World launched the Hoover candidacy Hearst has been ridiculing the former food administrator in a manner tending to discredit Hoover with all those elements which naturally would be attracted into an independent party.

BULLETIN.

THURLES, Ireland, Jan. 31.—Prior to a meeting of the urban council the police arrested two of its prominent members as well as an unsuccessful candidate who is local organizer of the transport workers. One of the councilors arrested was afterwards appointed chairman of the board by the council.

DUBLIN, Jan. 31.—Many Sinn Fein leaders were arrested in a big round-up early today.

Seven of the newly elected members of the municipal council were among those seized. The military alone carried out the raid.

The wife of one of the men taken was informed that the warrant for the arrest would be read when the prisoner was taken to the barracks.

Joseph McGrath, Sinn Fein member of the house of commons for the St. James division of Dublin, was among those caught in the roundup.

More than twenty later were placed in Mount Joy prison.

The arrests caused great excitement in the city.

Ignore Sinn Fein Flags.

It appears the government has ignored the hoisting of republican flags on the city hall at the initial meeting Friday of the new municipal council, which is made up mostly of Sinn Feiners. The corporation officials say that the flags were flown from the buildings without their authority.

The feature of the council meeting was the complete domination of the body by the republicans, the temper of participants being manifested by angry protests at the town clerk's disqualification of Mrs. Wyse Power, who was elected to the municipal council, because she insisted on signing the roll in Gaelic. About half the members of the council answered the roll call in Gaelic.

U.S. HAS RIGHT TO GUARD ITS FUTURE: GREY

Reservations Justified, Envoy Says.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1920.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Viscount Grey of Falloden, who during the autumn was British ambassador to the United States and who recently retired and has just returned from Washington, today issued a statement declaring that the course of the United States senate in examining closely into the treaty "was not a betrayal of trust" or anything except the exercising of the right to safeguard American interests before committing the nation to international agreements.

It will be recalled that at the outbreak of the great war Lord Grey—then Sir Edward Grey—was minister of foreign affairs in the British cabinet under Mr. Asquith.

Viscount Grey's statement is in the form of a signed letter which appears in the London Times.

Text of Grey's Letter.

The letter follows:

"Sir: Nothing, it seems to me, is more desirable in international politics than good understanding between the democracy of the United States on the one hand and the democracies of Great Britain and self-governing dominions and, I hope we may add Ireland, on the other.

"Nothing would be more disastrous than misunderstanding and estrangement. There are some aspects of position in the United States with regard to the league of nations which are not wholly understood in Great Britain.

"I hope that as a result of my recent stay in Washington I may be able to make that position better understood. I venture to offer the following observations. They represent only my personal opinion and nothing more, and they are given simply as those of a private individual in Great Britain and allied countries.

Impatience Is Natural.

"There is naturally impatience and disappointment at the delay of the United States in ratifying the peace treaty and the covenant of the league of nations. It is perhaps not so generally recognized here that there is also great impatience and disappointment in the United States.

"Nowhere is the impasse caused by the deadlock between the president and the senate more keenly regretted than in the United States, where there is a strong and even urgent desire in public opinion to see a way out of that impasse found which will be both honorable to the United States and helpful to the world.

"It would be well to understand the real difficulties with which the people of the United States have been confronted in clear light of right understanding. What seemed disagreeable features of the situation will assume a more favorable and intelligible aspect.

"BAD FAITH" CRY UNJUST

"Let us first get rid of one possible misunderstanding. No charge of bad faith or repudiating signatures can be brought against the action of the United States.

"The senate, by the American constitution, is an independent body, an independent element in treaty-making power. Its refusal to ratify the treaty connot expose either itself or the country to the charge of bad faith or repudiation, nor is it fair to represent the United States as holding up the treaty solely from motives of party politics and thereby sacrificing the interests of other nations for this petty consideration.

"It is true that there are party politics and personal animosities in the United States. An American who saw much of England between 1880 and 1890 and that the present conditions of politics in United States reminded him of what he had observed in London when Gladstone first advocated home rule for Ireland—party politics and personal animosities arising out of them operate in every democratic country.

Delay Not "Partisan."

"They are factors varying from time to time in degree, but always more or less active, and they operate upon every public question which is at all controversial. They are, however, not the sole or even the prime cause of the difficulty in the United States about the league of nations.

"Nor is it true to say that the United States is moved solely by self-inter-

Mexico Holds 2 Yank Flyers as Prisoners

Laredo, Tex., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Seizure of Lieuts. E. F. Davis and G. E. Grimes, on orders of Gov. Gonzalez of Nuevo Leon, and their removal from Guerrero to Nuevo Laredo, en route to Monterey, for examination by Gen. Murguia, came as a surprise tonight. They are to be called on to explain why they landed in Mexico.

Both here and at Fort Brown it was understood that the two army aviators were soon to return to their posts, having been released by the civil authorities at Guerrero.

How Their Trouble Started.

They had landed near that city Wednesday when flying during a fog and having mistaken the River Solado, thirty miles inside of Mexico, for the Rio Grande. Shortage of gasoline forced them to land, and they were at a hotel in Guerrero under surveillance by civil authorities while waiting for gasoline and oil.

General Fortunata Zuazua, commander in the Mexican state of Tamaulapas, in which Guerrero is located, apparently had made no effort to detain the aviators.

The military authorities at Fort Brown, Brownsville, dispatches from that city say, were confident there was nothing to prevent the aviators' return.

Reassured by Zuazua.

Word came from Zuazua to Fort Brown at 3 o'clock this afternoon that matters were satisfactory and that the men soon would be returned. Earlier in the day Maj. Flores, from Matamores, which is opposite Brownsville, sent word to the officials at Fort Brown. That message was of a tenor similar to that from Zuazua. Both Americans then were at Guerrero and Flores' message said word was awaited from Murguia, Carranza commander in the northern zone. This was the first hint that the matter had gone to him.

News of Seizure Comes.

Later in the day came word from Randolph Robertson, vice consul at Nuevo Laredo, telling of the order for the removal of the aviators to Monterey. Robertson had gone to Guerrero to arrange for the flyers' release.

General Murguia, according to information from Brownsville, was at Piedras Negras, oposite Eagle Pass, today and it was from there it is assumed, that he ordered Davis and Grimes taken to Monterey.

Mr. Robertson telephoned from Guerrero that he was accompanying the flyers to Nuevo Laredo. They are traveling tonight by automobiles under escort of several Carranza officers.

They are due to reach Nuevo Laredo, opposite this city, about midnight and tomorrow morning will take train for Monterey, where they are to be examined by Mexican military authorities "as to their reasons for landing on Mexican soil."

DEFIANT FIFI

Philadelphia Heiress Who Escapes Mamma to Wed.

MRS. CARTER R. LEIDY.

[Copyright: Underwood & Underwood.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Miss Fifi Widener, 17 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Widener, was married today in Knoxville, Tenn., to Carter R. Leidy, son of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Leidy of 1319 Locust street. This announcement came from Mrs. Widener this afternoon after she had received word from Knoxville.

The youthful pair left this city early Friday morning. Further than the brief statement of the marriage neither the Wideners nor the Leidys would give information regarding the runaway marriage.

The parents of Mrs. Leidy have been trying to keep the young pair apart. Last summer Miss Widener was taken to the Berkshires and there sequestered surrounded by detectives. It is said that on her promise to see no more of young Leidy she was brought home and introduced to society. When the big ball was announced and she was refused permission to invite Leidy, the pair decided to run away, and society was surprised by the announcement that the event had been canceled.

42 BELOW GRIPS NORTH NEW YORK; NEW ENGLAND HIT

New York, Jan. 31.—All New England and New York state were tonight in the grip of the coldest weather of winter. New records for low temperature were reported in many communities, the thermometer registering from 8 to 42 degrees below zero. Late tonight it is 4 below in New York City and getting colder hourly.

The frigid wave which suddenly blanketed the east shortly after last midnight was most severe in northern New York state, where the low record of 42 degrees below zero was registered at Ava, fourteen miles north of Rome.

Along the New England northern coast harbors and channels are frozen, preventing the movement of shipping and supplies of foodstuffs. The inhabitants of several islands were reported to be isolated.

The extreme cold in Vermont is believed to have caused the wreck of the Montreal express of the Rutland railroad, at Hibbards Bay, early today, throwing a sleeping car of passengers into the icy waters of Lake Champlain. The train was derailed by a rail which had been snapped by the cold. All the passengers were rescued.

Mrs. Sarah Tabor Bound Over on Murder Charge

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 31.—Mrs. Sarah Tabor was bound over to Circuit court late today on the charge of murdering her daughter, Maude, and of burying her body in the cellar of the Tabor home at Lawton. No bail was fixed for the prisoner, who is 80 years of age.

MRS. FOLSOM SELF-WOUNDED IN HER HOME

Lawyer's Wife Is in Serious Condition.

Mrs. [illegible]rd S. Folsom, wife of the former corporation counsel, is in Michael Reese hospital with a bullet wound of dangerous character. She was taken secretly to the hospital after 1:15 o'clock yesterday morning following the discharge of a revolver in her room at the Folsom residence at 2917 Michigan avenue. She was alone at the time.

Every effort has been made to keep the facts from the public. From the time of the happening until late last night no report had been put upon police records, but the details had been transmitted privately to Chief of Police Garrity.

Hysterical with the Flu.

When some of the facts became known, it was at first explained on behalf of the family that the shooting was an accident. Later it was admitted that Mrs. Folsom had been a victim of the influenza, and had been hysterical.

Piecing together the story, the facts are:

Mrs. Folsom had been convalescent and had spent Friday evening with her husband at the automobile show at the Coliseum. They returned home. Mrs. Folsom retired to her room. Mr. Folsom went into his room. Mrs. Folsom's father, Gen. George M. Moulton, was in an adjoining room.

Bullet Near Her Heart.

Shortly afterward Mr. Folsom heard a shot. He rushed into his wife's room. Gen. Moulton also ran in. They found Mrs. Folsom on her bed, wounded in the region of the heart.

Dr. Emanuel Friend of the Windermere hotel was hurriedly summoned. He made a cursory examination and arranged for her an immediate removal to Michael Reese hospital. There Dr. Friend probed for the bullet. He found it had entered below the heart and passed through the left lung, leaving through the back.

Meantime Chief of Police Garrity had been called to the house by Gen. Moulton, with whom Garrity served in the Illinois national guard. All united in an effort to give every service to the wounded woman, and delayed seeking the explanation.

Mrs. Folsom was in no condition to talk at the time and Mr. Folsom and Gen. Moulton both said they could not explain it except as an accident.

Good Chance to Recover.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Folsom had improved greatly at the hospital and Dr. Friend announced that unless pneumonia set in she had a good chance to recover.

Mr. Folsom, it is said, has devoted himself to caring for his wife and has not questioned her or sought any detailed explanation. Chief Garrity, however, was a visitor at the hospital during the afternoon. It is known Mrs. Folsom remarked to him and repeated several times:

"I was hysterical; I am sorry."

She became cheerful and the hopes of her husband rose.

Mr. Folsom's Story of Shot.

THE TRIBUNE called Mr. Folsom on the phone.

"I cannot tell you just how it happened," he said. "I was in my room. Mrs. Folsom was in her room. Her father, Gen. Moulton, was in an adjoining room. I heard a shot. We rushed in, found her wounded, and the ndevoted every attention toward taking care of her."

"Did she make any explanation?" Mr. Folsom was asked.

"I asked for none. I have not discussed it with her, but there is no explanation excepting an accident."

Chief Garrity was asked if he knew of any reason for the shooting.

"I know she had been ill with the flu," he said, "but further than that there is no known reason. The family leans to the accident theory."

Married 15 Years Ago.

The Folsoms were married in May, 1905, at the residence of the bride, 2119 Calumet avenue. Mr. Folsom at that time lived at 57 Lake Shore drive. Their marriage, set for June of that year, was hastened when she and her fiancé witnessed the wedding of her brother, Arthur Moulton.

Mr. Folsom was corporation counsel during the first year of Mayor Thompson's administration. He was a college friend of State's Attorney Hoyne at Williams.

Mrs. Folsom is well known in Chicago society and has been active in charity and Red Cross work.

MYSTERY

Wife of Richard S. Folsom in Hospital With Dangerous Bullet Wound.

MRS. RICHARD S. FOLSOM.

A. W. GOODRICH TO WED FRIEND OF MANY YEARS

Fiancee Chum of Wife, Dead Two Years.

Albert W. Goodrich, 200 East Pearson street, president of the Goodrich Transit company and head of half a dozen other steamship and transportation companies, will be married on or about Feb. 11 to Miss Anna Ambrose, 3800 South Michigan avenue. The engagement has been quietly announced to friends of both Mr. Goodrich and Miss Ambrose.

Miss Ambrose, formerly a manicurist, is now associated with the Anna B. Adams company, toilet preparation manufacturers, which has establishments at 17 North State street and 3800 South Michigan avenue. She is 35 years old.

Friend of Fifteen Years.

Mr. Goodrich, who is 51 years old, met Miss Ambrose fifteen years ago. She was a close friend of his wife, who introduced them.

Two years ago Mrs. Goodrich died. It was three months ago, according to friends, that Mr. Goodrich began to woo Miss Ambrose and won her. Since that time he has filled her home with flowers and books and showered gifts of jewelry upon her.

The wedding will be private in the bride's home, it is said. Only a few of the closest friends and relatives will be present.

Club Member and Fire Fan.

Mr. Goodrich is a member of the Chicago club, the Saddle and Cycle club, the South Shore Country club and the Chicago Golf club. He was for years well known to Chicago firemen, being an ardent fire fan. He has a summer home at Harbor Point, Mich., and is extremely popular among the Chicago colonists there and among yachtsmen.

MARTENS FACES DEPORTATION AT END OF INQUIRY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, the "soviet ambassador," will be examined at Baltimore by federal immigration authorities when he is arrested after completion of his testimony before the subcommittee of the senate foreign relations committee. There has been a tacit agreement between the subcommittee and the department of justice that he would be taken into custody when the senators were done with him.

It is understood former Senator Hardwick of Georgia, counsel for Martens, is prepared to resist deportation proceedings. Arrangements to furnish heavy bail or apply for a writ of habeas corpus in case he is placed in jail have been made, it is said.

Harry New Appeals from Sentence to San Quentin

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—Counsel for Harry S. New Jr. today filed notice of appeal from a jury verdict finding him guilty of second degree murder for the slaying of Freda Lesser, his fiancee. New is under sentence of from ten years to life imprisonment at San Quentin, and it was reported today that he will leave for the prison early next week.

NEW BOMB AT AUSTIN HOME ROUSES DRIVE

Five Bellevue Place Houses Damaged.

The dull boom of an exploding bomb and the sound of shattered glass startled residents of Bellevue place, near Lake Shore drive, during the dinner hour last night.

They rushed to the street to find that bombers had left their calling card in front of the residence at 103 Bellevue place, formerly occupied by William B. Austin, broker and former president of the Hamilton club.

Windows in four houses nearest to the old Austin home were broken. This was the only damage, except that to the nerves and temper of the neighborhood. There was talk last night of forming a Bellevue place vigilance committee to protect the homes in the block. The explosion was heard in the homes of Harold F. McCormick, 1000 Lake Shore drive, and John Borden, 130 Bellevue place. The explosion brought persons from various homes along Lake Shore drive.

Bombed Last June.

Mr. Austin, who was made a bomb victim last June as a result of the feeling aroused over Chicago's race problem and his action in renting south side property to colored persons, escaped the excitement last night because he happens to be living at the Virginia hotel. The bombers neglected to look up his latest address.

Alphonse L. Drum, head of A. L. Drum & Co., consulting engineers, is the present tenant of the residence at 103 Bellevue place. The windows in the second story of his home were broken, the glass falling into the bedrooms. His little daughter was just preparing for bed when the bomb frightened her.

The house belongs to the Potter Palmer estate.

Blast Perils Women.

The greatest damage was done to the windows in the front of the residence at 105 Bellevue, occupied by Mrs. H. L. Whitmarsh and her nieces, the Misses Mary and Jennie Stearns. The three women were in a middle room on the first floor when their windows fell away and let in the bitter night wind. Windows in all three stories of this house were broken. Mrs. Whitmarsh and her nieces were trembling with nervousness an hour after the explosion. They were at home during the first bomb aimed at the Austin house last June. They expressed the hope that the bombers would show them some mercy in the future, as they feel they cannot stand much more, and the price of window glass is high.

Find Remains of Bomb.

The street in front of the Whitmarsh and Drum homes was covered with glass. The women, running to the front door, saw pieces of fuse or packing of the bomb burning on the sidewalk. There were several pieces on the steps of the Drum home.

Mr. Drum rented this house from a real estate firm last October. It still contains the Austin furniture. Mr. Austin moved to the Virginia about Oct. 21 last. It is said that he received threatening letters following the failure of the first bomb to do much damage to his home. One letter read: "We will get you even though you do live on the gold coast."

Mr. Drum said that he did not know of the first bombing attempt when he rented the house, as he was not in the city at the time. He was in Washington on one of the important war committees. He said he had never seen Mr. Austin.

No Recent Threats.

Mr. Austin was not to be found last night. His wife said he was out and she did not know where he was. She expressed sympathy with her former neighbors and said she did not know of any new reason why a bomb should be thrown at the house where she and her husband were supposed to live. No new letters had been received, she said.

Capt. Dennis Malloy of the Chicago avenue station and a squad of police responded to the call. Capt. Malloy said it looked as though the bomb was thrown from a passing automobile. There were no signs of it having been placed against the house, as in the first attempt. It appeared to have exploded in the air.

The testimony of two men who ran to the street at the first sound of the explosion, searching for some sign of the bombers, does not bear this out.

"This is my third bomb explosion," said Attorney James Clarke Jeffery, who lives at 101 Bellevue. "I was at dinner and knew what had happened at the first sound. I was here when the other bomb exploded and was in the postoffice during the big explosion there. I ran to the door and looked up and down the street, taking in everything. The street was absolutely empty. There was a machine standing near the curb at Lake Shore drive. I do not see how it could have been thrown. It is my opinion that it was a time fuse, that the men who set it came in a machine and got out of sight before the explosion."

There were pieces of glass and bits of the bomb packing on the porch of the Jeffery home. Francis Clarke Jeffery, 5 years old, had just gone to sleep. The bomb blew in a window in one of the top bedrooms of the house.

"Daddy, is the house on fire?" called the little girl in fright.

No Auto Seen.

H. M. Pulsifer, 111 Bellevue, was also one of the first on the street. He corroborated the statement of Mr. Jeffery that there was no one on the street. He said that a few seconds after the explosion a car came down the street going east.

H. R. Ross, 112 Bellevue, an assistant cashier at the First National bank, found a small piece of burned fuse near his house. This was given to the police, who are of the opinion that the bomb was of nitroglycerine and was not intended to do more than to act as a warning to Mr. Austin.

Two windows were broken in the house of John O'Connell, 107 Bellevue.

A policeman was left on guard at the Drum and Whitmarsh homes.

Dynamite First Used.

The first attack on the Austin house was the night of June 16, 1919. All the front windows were broken, but no one was injured. The explosive was a stick of dynamite, fitted with a time fuse, placed under the cement foundation of the front steps.

At that time Mr. Austin stated he believed the attack was an attempt to intimidate him because he had rented property at 4807 Grand boulevard to colored persons. That property had then been bombed twice. He offered a reward of $1,000 for information as to the bombers of the Grand boulevard property and $1,000 for information as to the persons who had planted the dynamite under the Austin home. He obtained no results.

An aftermath of the bombings came early last December, when George J. Williams, member of the South Shore Country club and of the Kenwood and Hyde Park Property Owners' association, declared that charges of "conduct unbecoming to a gentleman" had been filed against Mr. Austin with W. F. McWhinney, secretary of the club.

Mr. Austin, on being informed that the charges set forth that he "sold and rented his property in Grand boulevard to colored persons," admitted he had done so, but added that if "they expel me for that they will have to expel some of their best members, because I know of plenty who have done the same thing."

The charges were never prosecuted.

WOMAN WITH FLU SAVES ANOTHER WITH GOWN AFIRE

Mrs. Anna Hunter, ill of influenza at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. E. Ayers, 6356 Stewart avenue, leaped from her bed yesterday and saved Mrs. Frank Stout from probable death by fire by wrapping the bed covers about her.

Mrs. Stout, who lives at Tolona, Ill., was visiting at the Ayers home. She had been heating water for her 9 months old daughter, when her clothing caught fire. Her screams aroused Mrs. Hunter. Mrs. Stout was burned about the body.

Mrs. Anna Seymour's clothing caught fire while she was tending a furnace at 6336 South Ada street, and she ran to the rear yard. Mrs. A. Clark of 6338 South Ada street extinguished the flames by burying Mrs. Seymour in a snowbank. Mrs. Seymour was burned about the body.

Wilson Going South to Recuperate, New Rumor

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—President Wilson will go south within a short time for the later stages of his convalescence, it was said today. A Democratic senator was authority for the statement that a determination had been reached by the president's physician to have him spend a brief time in a mild climate.

THE TRIBUNE printed a dispatch a few days ago saying that the president was to be taken in the early spring on a sea voyage through the Panama canal to San Diego. The dispatch was based on what was said to be authentic information, though Secretary Tumulty later said he knew nothing about such plans.

GIVE AND TAKE MARKS HOLLAND-BELGIAN PACT

Scheldt Row End.; Awaits Final O. K.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 31.—The Dutch press today prints the text of the new treaty between Holland and Belgium, which has not yet been ratified. Its principal provisions, stripped of their official verbiage, follow:

Holland and Belgium to have joint control of navigation on the Scheldt river.

The question of the movement of Belgian warships from Antwerp and other problems likely to result in the event of war are left to the future decision of the league of nations.

Both countries also agree to the principle that the mouth of the Scheldt be free and open water; that two new large canals be constructed to give Belgium an equal outlet to the sea (one from Antwerp to Holland connecting with the North sea, and the other from the Rhine across the Meuse to the Scheldt to Antwerp, connecting Antwerp with the German Rhine, the latter to be constructed within seven years); that an additional number of existing canals be deepened to accommodate larger ships, and in general that each country pay the expense of construction and maintenance within its own borders, and that customs, quarantine, and pilotage regulations be made as uniform as possible.

With reference to the German Rhine canal, Holland agrees that no new conditions be imposed other than those already in effect on traffic to Germany. Generally speaking, joint commissions will control the conditions, construction, and maintenance of the canals.

FOREIGN NEWS NOTES

LONDON.—Three persons were killed in the explosion of a powder factory, attributed to Jugo-Slav workmen, at Trieste yesterday, according to a Rome dispatch to the Central News.

LISBON.—A bill to approve the peace treaty with Germany and asserting the right of Portugal to retain German property as indemnity for war damages was presented by the foreign minister to the chamber of deputies.

COPENHAGEN.—A special dispatch from Flensburg, Schleswig, where a plebiscite is to be taken, says that 400 British troops have been stationed so that they will be able immediately to clear the streets should the pan-Germans try to carry out a farewell demonstration in honor of Herr Todsend, the German burgomaster, who has been ordered to quit the area.

BERLIN.—The National Zeitung reports that the general railroaders' organization has voted to accept a piece work basis, to counteract the radicals and assist the government.

FIREMEN SAVE STORE OF WHISKY AND 700 CHICKENS

Several thousand quarts of whisky were kept from burning by firemen last night when flames attacked a five story brick building at 227-29 West Madison street, until recently wholly occupied by the Steuben County Wine company, which still uses the two upper floors in which to store whisky.

In the basement next door, occupied by the W. W. Barnard Seed company, were three hundred prize chickens, which were threatened with suffocation. They were carried to safety.

The blaze was confined to the basement and the damage was estimated at about $1,000.

LOVE TIES HER TO BABY SHE MEANT TO ABANDON

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 31.—[Special.] But for a maternal bond that prevented her leaving her baby she had intended to abandon, Mrs. Esther M. Weaver, 24 years old, might have been back in her home at Stidman, Pa., while the police would have been looking for a place to keep the two weeks' old infant.

The woman was taken to Central police court on a charge of abandoning the little girl, the attempt occurring last night in a rest room at Union station.

Before Justice Johannsen the woman's attorney told a strange story. Her first husband went to war. Later she was informed by the war department that her husband had been killed in action. But, like Enoch Arden, Weaver returned to find that, believing him dead, his wife had married a second time. The second husband, it was told, left upon the return of Weaver.

A few months ago, she said, she came to Baltimore. Her husband did not like children and is unaware that a baby girl was born to her here.

"I do not know what prompted me to do what I did," she cried. "I must have been crazy."

The fact that the woman did not leave the baby's side resulted in the charge of abandonment being dismissed.

NEAR DEATH; GOOD ALCOHOL.

An unidentified man was found lying in a doorway at 569 West Madison street last night, suffering from wood alcohol poisoning. At the county hospital it was said he may die.

ALLIES USE U. S. CASH TO SURPASS HER, SENATE TOLD

Put Off Debts and Build for Trade and War.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Charges that Great Britain, France, and Italy, with the consent of the American treasury department, are postponing payment of their debts to the United States in order to engage in ambitious and highly expensive commercial and military enterprises were made on the senate floor today.

The criticism came largely from the Democratic side as a result of the deferment of interest payments by the allied governments and because of the frequently recurring suggestion from abroad that the United States ought to cancel the $10,000,000,000 loaned to the allies during and since the war.

To Be "Carried" for a Few Years.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia read into the record a statement showing that the interest due the United States from foreign countries on account of loans advanced amounted to $325,000,000, of which Great Britain alone owed $144,440,837. He said he had been informed that the treasury department intended to defer payment of this interest for a few years.

"Has any interest been paid by any government?" asked Senator Norris of Nebraska.

"I understand none," said Senator Smith. "This may relieve the minds of some of those who are still disturbed upon the theory that we have done nothing for these European countries and that the responsibility is still on us to do something."

Smoot Explains Delay.

Senator Smoot of Utah said that Senator Smith was entirely correct in his statement that the treasury department intended to defer the interest payments. He said:

"In some cases it will be necessary to do this, because if the United States forced some of the weaker nations to pay it would merely have to loan the money with which to pay their interest. That, however, is not the case with Great Britain and the other large countries.

"Perhaps, if Great Britain paid her interest, the United States could use the money to loan to some of these other countries," suggested Senator Smith.

Senator Walsh of Montana said that the debate on the New aircraft bill had disclosed the fact that a number of the European countries which are deeply indebted to the United States are now engaged in "most ambitious and highly expensive projects to increase their air forces. In other words they are carrying on great projects of military organization with money furnished them by the United States."

Senator Phelan of California declared he was utterly opposed to having the United States furnish money to European countries for their "commercial rehabilitation" and that England and other countries which are now using American money in the attainment of maritime and commercial supremacy should be compelled to pay up.

Invade U. S. Fields.

"I am opposed to this policy on the ground that the people of this country are carrying unprecedented burdens and that charity does begin at home," the senator said. "A mistake would be made if we were to do anything to pauperize Europe, but as long as she is considered decrepit, ill, and ailing and led to believe from our solicitude for her welfare that she is unable to help herself, she will remain helpless.

"Down in the stockings of Europe there is money, as France and England are exploiting the oil fields of Mesopotamia, South Mexico, and South America with money which should be put into the United States treasury in payment for the enormous advances which we made as necessary to preserve the very existence of those countries. They are now going into our fields and interfering with our trade by reason of our bounty."

Glass Plea Stirs Up Allies.

The publicly declared judgment of Secretary of the Treasury Glass that the allies ought to give "value to their indemnity claims against Germany by reducing those claims to a determinate amount which Germany may be reasonably expected to pay," is expected by officials here to have an echo from the entente governments.

It was learned at the state department today that neither France, Great Britain, nor Italy had yet addressed this government on the subject of Secretary Glass' statement, but the expectation here is that it will bring the international financial situation to a focus officially and afford the basis for a frank interchange of governmental views.

Statement Causes Surprise.

The European governments are understood to have been surprised by the Glass declaration. Some diplomats here are of the opinion that it will cause the entente governments, and especially France, great inconvenience, on account of the effect the statement is likely, in their opinion, to have upon the German government and the German people.

EUROPE LOVES A LORD, YES; BUT NOT A LANDLORD

PARIS, Jan. 31.—J. L. Breton, the new minister of hygiene and social welfare, has taken his first step toward solving the lodging problem by writing to the minister of war asking what barracks or military premises are vacant or likely to become vacant, with a view to using them for the accommodation of homeseekers.

Barcelona Rents Up 200 Per Cent.

BARCELONA, Spain, Jan. 31.—Recent advances in rents announced by landlords here are occasioning considerable complaint. It is said that in some cases rates were increased 200 per cent.

GENEVA, Jan. 30.—The Swiss federated council has issued an order forbidding the renting of houses to foreigners. Their only accommodations will be in hotels.

BRUNDAGE TALKS TO PYTHIANS.

Tolerance in religion, obedience to the law, and loyalty to the government were the three fundamental principles of citizenship as laid down by the order of Knights of Pythias and the constitution of the United States, said Attorney General Edward J. Brundage at a dinner and dance of Knights of Pythias in the Hotel La Salle last night.

YANKEE DOLLARS BUY MARKS, THEN GERMAN CASTLES

HIS wallet filled with American dollars, the intrepid Yankee real estate man has invaded Germany, according to George Marples of 1013 Dempster street, Evanston, an agent of the foreign department of the Cudahy Packing company of Chicago. He has just returned from a business mission over there.

The real estater's modus operandi is like this, Mr. Marples says: First, he exchanges his American money for a supply of German marks, now quoted over here at a little more than a cent. Then he picks out some needy baron's castle, or says, shooting lodge, and buys it. He repeats the operation ad infinitum.

Then he lets the property lie, waiting patiently for prosperity to return to Germany. If he continues at his present rate of activity the tourist may expect to encounter the familiar signboard, around Berlin, Hamburg, and other cities, bearing the legend, "Jones Addition. Buy Lots Now," etc.

Cudahy and other Chicago packing firms have been doing business in Germany for some months, Mr. Marples says. The bulk of it has been with the new German government and with municipalities. He could not supply estimates of the amount. All that is necessary for an American firm to do to compete for German business is to obtain a permit from the state department, he says, and that is easy.

The medium of exchange is generally United States money or that of neutral countries. Occasionally the German mark is accepted.

DECLARES WORK, NOT BIG LOANS, NEED OF WORLD

French Deputy Says Europe Slacks.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, Jan. 31.—This week's fall in the exchange value of the franc has given rise to a new demand from many quarters that the French government ask other governments to join in an international congress of financial experts.

Charles de Lasteyrie, a newly elected deputy, who was fiscal representative of France in the armistice negotiations and at the peace conference, thinks France is lazy and attaches more importance to the new eight hour day than she does to the exchange situation.

"The crisis of exchange," he said, "is in a large measure a crisis of disposition. Let our wave of laziness be followed by a wave of work and of industry and our exchange will get better, step by step."

Express Assails Wilson.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Secretary Glass' warning to Europe was received with good humor and dignity by all London newspapers today except Lord Beaverbrook's Express, and which has been running violent anti-American propaganda for some time, coincident with a campaign to induce London hotelkeepers to attract American visitors with money Britainward.

The Express leads its edition with Secretary Glass' statement under headlines: "America's Ultimatum to Europe; Mr. Wilson's Countrymen Dishonor his Cheques." The express says: "The trouble really goes back to Wilson, who induced the allies to modify the peace treaty until half the fruits of victory were abandoned. He was considered by the allies the voice of belligerent America. This was America's first step toward fooling Europe. We see the sequel today. Every cheque drawn by Wilson, the political bankrupt, has been dishonored by his astute countrymen. They have made as much as they can out of Europe, and the war shattered countries, if they want more aid, must enter into pound of flesh bonds with the Shylock States."

Glass Right, Says Times.

There is striking contrast in the tone of the Northcliffe papers, which simply tell the news without color and comment with dignity.

The Times heads its editorial "unpleasant but wholesome" and says:

"The letter sent by Secretary Glass is a salutary reminder that if she would be helped Europe must begin by helping herself. When all is said and done, it would be futile to expect Americans, even in their most generous mood, to shoulder the financial burdens of their European allies or even practically recognize moral obligation in regard to them as long as the allies continue to print paper in order to meet current expenditure that is often needlessly extravagant, while they shrink, in some cases, from imposing the drastic taxation which alone can restore financial equilibrium."

G. O. P. WIELDS A CRUEL SHEARS ON CONGRESS BILLS

Agricultural Totals and European Relief Cut.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—House committees used the pruning knife on two bills today in accordance with the Republican economy program. The ways and means committee reported out the European relief bill with a total of $50,000,000 instead of $150,000,000, as requested originally, and later cut by Secretary of Treasury Glass to $125,000,000.

The committee on agriculture completed the annual appropriation bill with a total of approximately $30,500,000, as against appropriations for the present fiscal year of $33,899,761, and estimates by the department of agriculture for the coming year of $37,528,102.

Hope to Increase Relief.

Some of the committee members reserved the right to make an effort on the floor to increase the total of the European relief bill. It is the belief of members favoring the $50,000,000 total that this amount will be sufficient to care for the urgent needs of Austria and Armenia and that European nations can take care of Poland.

Secretary Glass, however, told the committee a few days ago that Herbert Hoover had said that to cut the amount to $50,000,000 would be worse than making no appropriation at all and that this sum would not care for Austria and Armenia.

Heavy Cuts in Estimates.

The agricultural committee cut department estimates all along the line. The bureau of crop estimates, for instance, which last year got $242,042, and asked for $792,042 this time, to enable an expansion of its work, will be forced to get along with less than it had last year.

The bureau of markets had $2,811,365 last time, and asked for $3,023,395, but was trimmed to a total below its former appropriation.

OPEN SEASON ON PROFITEERING N. J. LANDLORDS

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 31.—Steps will be taken by city authorities to curb rent profiteering, according to a notice published here today, urging tenants not to meet any "exorbitant and unjust" demands of landlords. Tenants are asked to present their cases to the city law department, all cost of litigation, "where advised," to be borne by the city.

"Many landlords, knowing tenants have no place to move, are demanding more rent in the middle of winter, with an epidemic of influenza staring the public in the face," the notice said.

LOWDEN INVITES TEACHERS' AID ON SALARY ISSUES

Will Argue Monday on a Special Session.

Gov. Lowden by telegraph last night invited the representatives of 6,000 regular and special elementary school teachers to confer with him in Springfield tomorrow concerning their request for a special session of the legislature to increase the taxing power of the Chicago board of education.

In a telegram to the governor Friday night the board of managers of the Chicago Teachers' federation pointed out that only in that manner could the instructors of 90 per cent of the city's school children hope to attain the government's "health, decency, and efficiency" minimum wage of $2,500 a year.

Governor's Invitation.

The governor's reply to Ida L. Fursman, president of the Chicago Teachers' federation, says:

"Your telegram of Jan. 30 just received. I desire further information and suggest that your committee call on me here Monday at 11 a. m."

Miss Margaret Haley, business manager of the federation, said that as many of the board of managers which comprises thirty-one members, would respond to the summons as found it possible to make the trip.

The school board has discussed for teachers in the grade schools maximum salaries of $2,000 a year; a maximum of $1,900 has also been spoken of in the finance committee, which is now engaged in framing the new salary schedule. The teachers maintain that the board should abandon its project to increase salaries of principals and special instructors until it has given every elementary teacher at least the government's "health and decency" minimum of $2,247 annually.

Radicalism Opposed.

Radicalism in the effort to obtain higher salaries for teachers in the public schools was decried at a meeting of educators, business men and newspaper executives yesterday at the Midday club.

Among those who attended the luncheon were Peter A. Mortenson, superintendent of schools; Capt. Marshall Field III., Robert C. Moore, secretary of the Illinois State Teachers' association; the members of high school teachers' publicity committee, and Chester C. Dodge, president of the Chicago Principals' club.

The teachers' program of taxation reform, proposed through the constitutional convention, was indorsed. The proposal to call a special session of the legislature was frowned on as impractical.

Decries Strike Talk.

Sam P. Gerson, who presided, said he had noticed in the press "some talk of a teachers' strike," and thought their cause might be prejudiced with the public" if such talk became too general.

"I don't believe the teachers would strike," replied William T. McCoy, chairman of the high school committee. "The teachers of certain groups may have implied so, but I think the teachers are too loyal—too good Americans."

G. C. Griffith, principal of the Lowell school; A. O. Coddington, principal of the Stewart school, and Dr. Dodge, who is principal of the Hibbard Junior High school, expressed similar views.

Debate Legislative Action.

The proposal to call a special session of the legislature to give the teachers higher pay than the revenues of the board of education now permits failed to arouse material enthusiasm.

"In the first place," said Mr. McCoy, "there are vacancies in the legislature's personnel, and special elections might be necessary to fill their places. Then the cost to the state must be considered—between $300,000 and $400,000. A year's time might be gained, though, on the other hand, the legislature might reject our program."

Mr. Coddington wished to know whether the sentiment of downstate senators did not favor a greater state school fund.

"Ten million dollars, instead of six, would have been appropriated," vouchsafed Mr. Moore, "had it not been for Gov. Lowden's opposition. He was pledged to an economy program."

Salary Survey.

The secretary of the state teachers' organization gave a salary survey for 1918. It revealed that the average wage in Illinois was $804.98, including Chicago. One hundred and ten teachers received less than $200; 848 less than $300; 4,403 less than $400; 10,983, or about one-third of the total, less than $500; 15,857, or one-half of all the teachers, less than $600; 97 per cent less than $2,000, and only 1 per cent were paid $3,000 or more.

"Salaries have advanced somewhat," Mr. Moore acknowledged, "yet by and large these figures hold."

There was general agreement that the constitutional convention should reform the system of taxation.

Capt. Field inquired whether the government and the state did not tax disproportionately, when the character of the functions of the commonwealth and their number were taken into consideration.

"Precisely," agreed Mr. Moore. "In 1917 we asked for $1,000,000 increase in the state school fund, and were told it couldn't be afforded. But the following year the government levied and collected $400,000,000 in this state."

Miss Haley did not regard Mr. McCoy's objection to the special session project as especially serious. "I regard it as exceedingly unlikely," she said, "that the governor would convene the legislature unless he were assured the relief petitioned for would be granted. The cost, moreover, would be nominal, since the session need not be long. There may be vacancies in both houses, due to hte resignations of men elected to the constitutional convention, but I imagine it will still be possible for the general assembly to transact business."

YANKEE WIT AND 5 'GHOST TANKS' ROUT 2 DIVISIONS

Foe Panic Stricken in Critical Battle.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—How two full German divisions were kept out of one of the most important battles of the war by a single platoon of American soldiers, who did not fire a shot, was disclosed by the war department today in a description of the operation of the "Phantom Tanks of the Argonne."

"Gen. Pershing," an official statement says, "with the 1st American army, had just finished awakening the German high command to a healthy fear of the American soldier by reducing the St. Mihiel salient, and the plans for the Meuse-Argonne offensive were about to be carried into execution.

Germans Are Deceived.

"In these days of airplane and wireless, it seems impossible to deliver a surprise assault, nevertheless no pains are spared to deceive the enemy as to the exact point of attack.

"As a means of covering the true point of attack, the chief of tank corps presented a scheme which received the approval of the high command.

"Accordingly, after the withdrawal of the tanks from the St. Mihiel sector, Lieut. Higgins, with his platoon of the 344th battalion tank corps, was directed to proceed from this point in a northwesterly direction along the lines via narrow gauge railway.

The Ubiquitous Squad.

"He was to stop each night and make a reconnaissance in front of our positions with his tanks, and immediately load up and repeat the operation the following night further down the line.

"On Sept. 19 the five tanks and their crews were loaded, and the expedition started. That evening they stopped in the rear of a little wood many kilometers west of St. Mihiel. Off the tricky little narrow gauge flat cars trundled the tanks and nosed into the woods for concealment.

"About 11 o'clock all was ready, and the miniature army started forward on its mission. Everything went off as scheduled. The tanks rolled through our positions and into No Man's land. They were operated back and forth for half an hour.

Barrage Falls in Vain.

"After this they were quietly withdrawn, crawled back on their little narrow gauges, and started merrily on their way. They timed their work perfectly, and as they pulled out a terrific barrage hit the wood they had left. The only effect of this bombardment was to elate the spirits of the adventurers, who suddenly realized how much they were worrying Heinie.

"From that time on the expedition became for them a picnic. True, it was loaded with danger, hardships, and worlds of hard work, but a picnic nevertheless.

"The following evening the procedure was repeated. Again the barrage descended too late. For six successive nights these troops staged their one night stands, and the reports all along the sector showed that the enemy was up in the air. All day long the sky was full of planes searching for the 'army of tanks.'

Night Turns to Day.

"All night long the darkness was dispelled by hundreds of flares and rockets, and all indications showed that Fritzie was not going to be caught napping again.

"Best of all, just as the little band was preparing to entrain to get into the big show in the Argonne there came a message from the intelligence section stating 'two German divisions withdrawn from Argonne front. Entraining for your sector.'

"How the little outfit got back to the big show, arriving at 3:30 on the morning of Sept. 26, just in time to go in to connect up between the 35th and 91st divisions, and incidentally to cover itself with fame and glory, is another story."

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 31.

REPUBLICAN presidential candidates are getting into a regular campaign stride. Senator Harding's managers announce that he is going to make an active canvass for delegates in Indiana. Gov. Lowden's chiefs assert they are satisfied their candidate is in the lead of all his rivals and that they are going after things in earnest down east.

MINORITY members of the senate military committee, reporting today on the army reorganization bill, characterized it as "militarism run mad," and declare that the proposed reorganization plan with universal service would cost $1,200,000,000 annually instead of $600,000,000, as estimated by the majority of the committee.

SENATE Republicans are planning to get the jump on the Democrats by forcing the peace treaty for consideration in the senate next week instead of Feb. 10, the date set by the Democrats.

THE retrenchment program of Republican house leaders led to cutting of amounts carried in two measures. The ways and means committee reduced the European relief bill from $150,000,000 to $50,000,000, while the committee on agriculture reduced the annual agricultural appropriation bill more than $3,000,000 below last year's appropriations and $7,000,000 below the estimates for this year.

THE senate vehemently discussed the foreign debtor situation today and demanded that the allied nations must pay their debts to the United States.

THE war department made public today an account of how a single platoon of American soldiers, without firing a shot, kept two full German divisions out of an important battle in the Argonne campaign.

MERRICK WARNS, PATTEN SCORNS FARMERS' STRIKE

With bread going up in price tomorrow and the assistant postmaster general warning of a farmers' strike, James A. Patten and L. F. Gates, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, yesterday gave assurances that 1920 will see no decrease in the country's grain production.

On the other hand, H. H. Merrick, president of the Mississippi Valley association, declared that the exodus from the farms to the factories is continuing throughout the middle west to such an alarming extent that "70,000,000 people of this country had better pay more attention to the 40,000,000 farmers on whom they depend for food."

Mr. Patten declared that the farmers as a class are making more money than any one else and accused them of inflating the value of farm land and insisting on a 6 per cent return on the new valuations.

"Such reports as a farmers' strike should not be taken seriously," he said. "The farmers who are claiming they can't make a living are the discontented ones. It is the same way with the milkman who is making $50 a week and says he's starving to death."

Dr. Law, Called 'Kaiser's Dentist,' Dies of Pneumonia

Flint, Mich., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Announcement of the death in New York of Dr. William G. Law was received today. Dr. Law was among the first dentists to introduced American methods in Europe and had an extensive practice in Berlin before the war. He was generally known as the kaiser's personal dentist, although he credited another American dentist. His death was due to pneumonia. The body will probably be brought here for burial.

JUDGE KAVANAGH BACKS U. S. RIGHT TO AID SINN FEIN

Says Britain Seeks Irish Revolt.

Judge Marcus Kavanagh of the Superior court addressed members of the Irish Fellowship club yesterday at the Hotel Sherman on "Americans and the Sinn Fein." He charged that for the last two years the British government has been trying to foment a rebellion in Ireland by arresting their leaders, interfering with their fairs, and subjecting them to all manner of persecutions, so that it could say to the world, "See the kind of people we have to contend with."

"The Irish people in this country have a right to their sympathies," the judge said.

Improvement Thwarted.

"Six years ago conditions in Ireland were on their way to a rapid improvement, but the English became distrustful. They will not give home rule to Ireland because they dislike and distrust the Irish people. They pretend their reasons are Ulster and religious questions. What is the answer? Londonderry voted for home rule and 50 per cent of Belfast wants it. In every town in Ireland there are Protestant churches, and there is no friction between them and the Catholics. They say they did not do their part in the war, yet 200,000 men of Irish blood followed the flag.

Calls for U. S. Support.

"Six years ago there was but a handful of Sinn Feiners, but now no Irishman is worth his salt who is not in favor of them, for they are holding up the flame of Irish freedom. It is the duty of every Irishman in America to stand behind the Sinn Fein. We must fight English propaganda.

"We Irish in America are powerful. We must render all assistance to Ireland that we can without conflicting with our duties as American citizens. But the United States comes first always."

Earlier the club was addressed by Mrs. Edward Hines. She urged the Catholic women get together in raising $500,000 for the Rosary college.

HINDENBURG ON ANOTHER 'LINE' DEFYING ALLIES

BY CARL D. GROAT.

[United Press Staff Correspondent.]

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—"Germany must trust God and her sturdy youths," Field Marshal von Hindenburg said today in addressing a demonstration at Hanover in protest against the surrender of Germans demanded by the allies.

The nation "must hold together strongly," and "not loose its courage," the field marshal declared.

Protest meetings were being held throughout the nation. There was every indication the meetings have been "inspired" to work up popular sentiment against the allied demands.

From Cedar Chests

It was a strange little procession of quaint maidens who swished about yesterday at the rehearsal of the old fashioned pageant to be given as part of the social program of the victory convention of the National American Woman Suffrage association, to be held in Chicago Feb. 12 to 18.

Mrs. James W. Morrison, chairman of the suffrage fashion pageant committee, shook out from their folds over two score gowns of rich old brocades, laces, and velvets. Miss Ruth Keeley, slender enough to wear the tight waisted gown of pink grosgrain silk of the period of 1880 which came out of the trunk, was one of the charming figures of the group. Miss Bertha Honoré was squeezed into a cream and wine colored brocade of the seventies, and Miss Anna Wrenn will wear a blue flounced taffeta of the early days, trimmed in festoons of pearl ropes.

Little Miss Louise Winterbotham is just tiny enough to wear a gown of flowered taffeta, with lace ruffles, which was a "creation" of the days of the 1830's, when, as a suffrage history goes, "widows of Kentucky were given the right to vote for school trustees."

Some of the others who will wear the gowns that belonged to their grandmothers who were witnesses of the early struggles of woman suffrage are Miss Janet Fairbank, Miss Elizabeth Chase, Miss Janet Chase, Miss Catherine Casselberry, and Miss Elizabeth Newberry. On Mrs. Morrisson's committee are Mrs. Samuel Chase, Miss Marie J. Rozet and Miss Edith Nancreed. The pageant will be given on Monday evening, Feb. 16, at the Congress hotel.

COUPLE FORFEITS BONDS.

Mrs. Maude Wehnke and Otto Kaufman of Oshkosh, Wis., traveling salesman for the Challoner Manufacturing company, who were arrested Friday night at the Shercombe hotel, Sheridan road and Irving Park boulevard, forfeited their cash bonds when they failed to appear in the Morals court yesterday.

SHAFTS OF LIGHT TO BE ANTENNÆ FOR MARS 'LINE'

Radio Engineer Suggests Gigantic Generator.

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Suggestion for an interplanetary wireless system, one that possibly would enable us to send a message to possible races on the planet Mars, was made here today by L. J. Lesh, a radio engineer. He believes that, if the dots and dashes caught on William Marconi's apparatus in London really came from the Martians, it would be possible to build a gigantic sending station and finally to devise a code for communication with the radio experts on Mars.

Although he believes that one of the methods of constructing a station would be to erect huge antennæ, suspended by balloons, he asserts a still better way would be to use huge and brilliant shafts of light as antennæ for the system. Still another idea put forward by him is that two sky high towers be erected.

Light as a "Conductor."

Pointing out that it has been discovered that a brilliant shaft of light is a conductor of electricity and that millions of volts of electricity are set loose in the universe by the sun, he suggests that several of these bright shafts of light be projected from the earth so that they would draw electricity from the clouds and thus catch any possible radio message from Mars or be capable of giving them their initial start for a lightning flash through the 50,000,000 miles of ether that separates the earth from Mars when those two planets are closest together.

Niagara Falls for Site.

Projection of these bright rays into the sky would not be difficult, he believes, and the only apparatus needed would be on the earth. He thinks these projectors could be grouped around one spot where a great amount of electricity could be generated so that replies could be sent to any messages caught by the electric currents in the great light rays. He suggests that Niagara Falls or some similar spot with enormous water power be the site of this immense station.

Speaking of his other suggestion, for the use of wires suspended from huge balloons, he said the antennae would be elevated about one mile and insulated from the earth except for the wires leading to the generators.

REFUGEES FROM NEAR EAST ARE RETURNING HOME

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ALEXANDRIA, Jan. 2.—Thousands of refugees, who at the outbreak of war fled from Palestine and Syria to Egypt and later joined the British army or went to America to escape service under the Turks, are arriving here en route to their home countries, still nominally occupied as enemy territory.

Among the refugees are numerous Zionists, who with Great Britain as mandatory for Palestine, expect to see the realization of their dreams, a Jewish nation in that country.

All boats that can carry passengers from ports throughout the world bound for the near east are booked months in advance. Even British hospital ships arriving from Marseilles or England for convalescing Indian or other colonial troops are packed with returning refugees, most of whom have been in America or Great Britain sufficiently long to speak the language.

Most of those who had been in America complained that owing to high prices there they had had difficulty in making a living. Passport and transportation difficulties, they said, were the only things that had kept them from returning to their native countries as soon as the armistice was declared.

ADMIT ENGLISH GIRL AND BABY IN ODD TRIANGLE

It Was New Puzzle for Ellis Island.

New York, Jan. 31.—Miss Emily Knowles, an English girl who met Perley R. Spiker of Baltimore while he was at an aviation training camp in England, was admitted to the United States with her baby today after being detained at Ellis island while the authorities were considering the plea of Spiker's wife for permission to adopt the baby and the offer of Guy S. Spiker, brother of the aviator, to marry the girl.

Admitted for Three Months.

A telegram received at the island today from the department of labor ordered that mother and child be admitted to the country for three months and placed in the care of William and Kate Battersby of Fall River, Mass.

A bond of $1,000 required of them has been furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Spiker.

Called "Extraordinary."

Immigration officials here regarded the admission for three months as "most extraordinary," and were at a loss to explain it. There is nothing in the conditions of admission, it is explained, to prevent Guy Spiker from marrying the girl, as he offered to do in an affidavit submitted to the immigration authorities, although he had never seen her. Such a marriage, assuming he is an American citizen, would permit her to stay in the United States.

Mrs. Spiker's affidavit contained the following:

"My husband and Miss Knowles formed a friendship which ripened into something more than friendship. Miss Knowles is not immoral under the immigration laws. She is a lovable, gentle, refined girl. I would welcome her into my home."

Go to Home of Cousin.

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 31.—Mrs. Kate Battersby said tonight that Miss Emma Knowles, a native of Stalybridge, England, was her cousin. A few weeks ago, Mrs. Battersby said, she received a letter from Miss Knowles saying that she was coming to this country with her baby and wanted to make her home with her cousin and her husband, William Battersby. They replied that they were glad to have her come. Mrs. Battersby said that Miss Knowles had given her no information as to her relations with the Spiker family of Baltimore.

JOBLESS PRINCE HOPES TO RETURN TO GERMAN HOME

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 31.—Former Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, who now often wears wooden shoes, hopes, as soon as circumstances permit, to go to his estate at Oels, near the Polish frontier, to live with his wife and family, according to the correspondent of the Telegraf, who interviewed him at Wieringen yesterday. The former crown prince is writing war memoirs. He said his father is in good health, but his mother is not well. He declined to discuss political questions.

LABOR CASTS NET FOR "SALARIATE" UNIONS IN BRITAIN

Seeks Votes of Workers Not Helped by War.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1920.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Great interest is being taken by political circles in the action of the Labor party in inviting to a conference on Feb. 7 organizations of "professional and supervisory federation of professional associations."

Great caution is displayed in defining the objects at which a federation might aim, but the real purpose of the summons is held to be to gain the support of the "black coated workers"—first, for the political programs of the Labor party, and, second, for the doctrines of guild Socialists, at present the most fashionable form of socialistic ideas.

The "Salariate" Sought.

The associations invited are engineering draftsmen, supervising electricians, railway and shipping clerks, colliery managers, journalists, actors, commercial travelers, and industrial chemists, and those whom the newspapers are calling the "salariate."

These classes have been particularly hard hit by the war, having been as powerless as wage earners to share directly in war profits and far less successful in obtaining war raises or bonuses.

They are practically unorganized, many of their associations being of recent establishment, and their need is so great that an attempt has been made by forming a "middle classes union" to bring their plight before parliament.

First Bid for Votes.

That, however, is connected with no political party, and the coming conference is the first deliberate move by any of the reorganized parties to capture their votes.

But the politicians are asking how labor wil imanage to induce the salariate to swallow the labor program, the very foundation of which is nationalization of the means of production, and the middle class worker has up to now been the last man in the world to support socialism.

AMERICA, SANE, UNAFRAID, SAYS CHICAGO SENATOR

New York, Jan. 31.—Speaking before the Genesee society of New York tonight, Senator Medill McCormick of Illinois declared that despite shortcomings in the American form of government and abuses in commerce and public service, "we would not surrender what we have for the martial stability which preceded the wreck in Germany or the communist equality which has followed the wreck in Russia."

"There is no cause for fright," he added, "although there is some ground for concern."

"We shall not submit," he said, "to the domination of labor, capital, or democratic dictator. We will not harbor alien anarchists, nor shall we peril the hard won rights of free speech, free assembly, and free election."

U. S. HAS PERFECT RIGHT TO GUARD ITS FUTURE: GREY

Reservations Justified, Statesman Asserts.

est to the disregard of higher ideals. In the United States, as in other countries, there are cross currents and back waters in the national life and motives.

"When the nation was roused by the war these cross currents and back waters were swept into the main stream of action and obliterated, as they were in other countries. With the reaction of peace and more normal conditions they are again apparent, as they are in other countries.

Self-Interest Is Absent.

"But an American might fairly reply that whereas the self-interest of other countries which have conquered in the war, is now apparent in the desire to secure special territorial advantages, the self-interest of the United States takes the less aggressive form of desiring to keep itself from undesirable entanglements, and that it does not lie with other countries to reproach the United States.

EXPLAINS SENATE DELAY

"It would be well, therefore, for the reasons both of truth and expediency to concentrate our attention on the real underlying causes of the senate's insistence upon reservations in ratifying the covenant of the league of nations.

"First—There is in the United States a real conservative feeling for the traditional policy, and one of those traditions consecrated by the advice of Washington is to abstain from foreign, and, particularly, from European entanglements. Even for nations which have been used to European alliances the league of nations is felt to be something of a new departure.

"This is still more true for the United States, which has hitherto held aloof from all outside alliances.

League Leap Into Dark.

"For the league of nations is not merely a plunge into the unknown, but a plunge into something which its historical advice and tradition have hitherto positively disapproved. It does not say that it will not make this new departure.

"It recognizes that world conditions have changed, but it desires time to consider, to feel its way and to act with caution. Hence, this desire for some qualification and reservation.

"Second—The American constitution not only makes it possible, but, under conditions, renders inevitable a conflict between executive and legislatures. It would be possible, as the covenant of the league of nations stands, for a president in some future years to commit the United States through the American representative on the council of the league of nations to a policy of which the legislature at that time might disapprove.

Britain's Laws Protect Her.

"The contingency is one which cannot arise in Great Britain, where the government is daily responsible to the representative authority of the house of commons, and where, in case of a conflict between the house of commons and the government, the latter must either immediately give way or public opinion must decide between them and assert itself by immediate general elections.

"This contingency is, therefore, not present to our minds, and in ratifying the league of nations we have no need to make any reservations to provide for a contingency which cannot arise in Great Britain.

"But in the United States it is otherwise. The contingency is within the region of practical politics. They have reason and a desire for the right to provide against it.

Reservations Are Justified.

"Reservations with this object are, therefore, an illustration not only of party politics, but of a great constitutional question which constantly arises between the president and the senate, and it would be no more fair to label this with the name of party politics than it would be to apply that name to some of the great constitutional struggles which arose between the house of commons and the executive authority in Great Britain in the days before the question had finally been settled in favor of the house of commons.

VITAL IN WAR AND PEACE

"What, then, may we fairly expect from the United States in this great crisis of world policy, for a crisis, indeed, it is? The participation of the United States was enormously helpful in securing the victory in the critical months of 1918; its help will be even more essential to secure stability in peace.

"Without the United States, the present league of nations may become little better than a league of the allies for armed self-defense against a revival of Prussian militarism or against a sinister sequel to bolshevism in Russia. Bolshevism is despotism, and despotisms have a tendency to become militaristic, as the great French revolution proved.

Object of the Covenant.

"The great object of the league of nations is to prevent future wars and to discourage from the beginning the growth of aggressive armaments which would lead to war.

"For this purpose it should operate at once and begin here and now in the first years of peace to establish a reputation for justice, moderation and strength. Without the United States it will have neither the overwhelming physical nor moral force behind it that it should have, or if it has the physical force it will not have the same degree of moral force, for it will be predominately European and not a world organization and it will be tainted with all the interracial jealousies of Europe.

"With the United States in the league of nations, war may be prevented and armaments discouraged, and it will not be in the power of the fretful nations of the world to disturb genuine peace.

Fears Old Order's Chaos.

"Without the league of nations the old order of things will revive, the old consequences will recur, there will again be some great catastrophe of war in which the United States will again find itself compelled to intervene for the same reason, and at no less, or even greater, cost than in 1917. It would be a mistake to suppose that the American people are prepared or wish to withdraw their influence in world affairs.

"The Americans differ among themselves as to whether they could or ought to have entered the war sooner than they did. It is neither necessary nor profitable for foreigners to discuss this point now.

Real Tribute to America.

"What is common to all Americans and to all foreigners which know the facts is the unselfish, whole hearted spirit in which the American nation acted when it came into the war.

"The immediate adoption of compulsory military service and, even more, the rationing of food and fuel in those millions and millions of households over such a vast area, not by compulsion, but by purely voluntary action in response to an appeal which had no compulsion behind, is a remarkable and even astonishing example of national spirit.

SPIRIT OF AMERICA

"That spirit is still there. It is as much a part of the nature and possibilities of the American people as any other characteristic. It is not possible for such a spirit to play such a part as it did in the war and then to relapse and be extinguished altogether.

"It would be a great mistake to suppose that because the citizens of the United States wish to limit their obligations they therefore propose to themselves to play a small part in the league of nations.

"If they enter the league as a willing partner with limited obligations, it may well be that American opinion and American action and the league will be much more fruitful than if they entered as a reluctant partner who felt that her hand had been forced.

How to Judge United States.

"It is in this spirit, in this hope, and in this expectation that I think we should approach, and are justified in approaching consideration of American reservations.

"I do not deny that some of them are material qualifications of the league of nations, as drawn up at Paris, or that they must be disappointing to those who are with that covenant as it stands and are even proud of it; but those who have had the longest experience of political affairs and especially of treaties know best how often it happens that difficulties which seem most formidable in anticipation and on paper never arise in practice.

"I think this is likely to be particularly true in the working of the league of nations. The difficulties are dangers which the Americans foresee in it will probably never arise or be felt by them when they are once in the league.

Has Faith In Future.

"And, in the same way, the weakening and injury to the league which some of its best friends apprehend from the American reservations would not be felt in practice.

"If the outcome of the long controversy in the senate has been to offer coöperation in the league of nations it would be the greatest mistake to refuse that coöperation because conditions are attached to it, and when that coöperation is accepted let it not be accepted in a spirit of pessimism.

"The most vital considerations are that the representatives should be appointed to the council of the league of nations that are members of the council, that these representatives should be men who are inspired by the ideals for which we entered the war, and that these representatives should be instructed and supported in that same spirit of equity and freedom by the governments and public opinion of the countries who are now partners in peace.

LURED AWAY?

Missing Oak Park Schoolgirl for Whom Police Are Searching.

MARY PLUMMER.

The police are searching for Mary Plummer, a 14 year old Oak Park girl, who has been missing since Tuesday.

Mary went to the Lowell school as usual on that morning, but did not return for the afternoon session. Her folks believe she has been kidnaped, because Mary had no love affairs and limited her social activities to an occasional attendance at moving picture shows. The girl is small for her age, appearing to be about 12 years old. She seemed to be contented with her lot.

The police are working on the theory she has been lured away. Mary was a student in the eighth grade and would have entered high school at the fall term.

The girl's father, Carlo Plummer, has offered a reward of $50 for any information that will lead to the finding of his daughter. Information should be telephoned to the father at Oak Park 8564.

ONE RESERVATION ONLY IS OPPOSED BY VISCOUNT GREY

Viscount Grey's letter dealing with the American peace situation seems to indicate his personal disposition to accept all of the Lodge reservations except No. 14. That reservation reads:

"The United States assumes no obligation to be bound by any election, decision, report, or finding of the council or assembly in which any member of the league and its self-governing dominions, colonies, or parts of empire, in the aggregate, have cost more than one vote, and assumes no obligation to be bound by any decision, report, or finding of the council or assembly arising out of any dispute between the United States and any member of the league if such member, or any self-governing dominion, colony, empire, or part of empire united with it politically has voted."

The letter shows Viscount Grey would consent to the exclusion of the votes of the British colonies only in cases of dispute between the United States and the British empire.

U. S. WILL PLAY GAME

"If that be the spirit in which the council of the league of nations deals with the business that comes before it there need be no fear that the representative of the United States on that council will not take part in realizing the hopes with which the league has been founded.

"There is one particular reservation which must give rise to some difficulty in Great Britain and self-governing dominions. It is that which has reference to the six British votes in the assembly of the league of nations.

"The self-governing dominions are full members of the league. They will admit, and Great Britain can admit, no qualification whatever of that right. Whatever the self-governing dominions may be in theory and the letter of the constitution, they have in effect ceased to be colonies in the old sense of the word.

"They are free communities, independent as regards all their own affairs, and partners in those which concern the empire at large.

"It is a special status and there can be no derogation from it.

"To any provision which makes it clear that none of the British votes can be used in a dispute likely to lead to rupture in which any part of the British empire is involved no exception can be taken.

Vote Dispute Can Be Settled.

"That is only a reasonable interpretation of the covenant as it now stands. If any part of the British empire is involved in a dispute with the United States, the United States will be unable to vote and all parts of the British empire, precisely because they are partners, will be parties to that dispute and equally unable to vote.

"But as regards this right to vote where they are not parties to the dispute there can be no qualification and there is very general admission that the votes of the self-governing dominions would in most cases be found on the same side as that of the United States.

"It must not be supposed that in the United States there is any tendency to grudge the fact that Canada and the other self-governing dominions of the British empire have votes, but any person with the smallest understanding of public audiences must realize the feeling created by the statement that the United States, with several million more English speaking citizens than there are in the whole of the British empire, has only one to six votes.

"I am not concerned to discuss here how this problem of equality of voting may be adjusted in practice—it will not be important. In sentiment and political feeling it is a very powerful factor.

"We can neither give way about the votes for the self-governing dominions, nor can we ignore the real political difficulty in the United States.

Colonies' Right Understood.

"It may be sufficient to observe that the reservation of the United States so far as known at the time of writing, does not in any way challenge the right of the self-governing dominions to exercise their votes, nor does it state that the United States will necessarily reject the decision to which those votes have been cast.

"It is, therefore, possible, I think it is even more than probable, that in practice no dispute will ever arise. Our object is to maintain the status of the self-governing dominions, not to secure a greater British than American vote, and we have no objection in principle to increase of the American vote.

"Your obedient servant,

"GREY, of Fallodon."

6,300,000 WORDS TREATY DEBATE; SAVING PAPER

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Urging economy in print paper, Senator Smoot of Utah told the senate today that senators have uttered no less than 6,300,000 words in speeches on the peace treaty. He showed the senate a bound volume of the peace treaty speeches. It was 14 inches long, 8 inches wide, and 7 inches thick, and contained 3,000 pages.

This doesn't include the innumerable newspaper articles, editorials, letters, and petitions read into the record durign the consideration of the treaty.

And the end of the treaty fight is not in sight.

Young Chicagoans Marry in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—A romance which had its inception before the world war came to a happy climax today in the marriage of Edwin C. Lloyd, the son of Frederick J. Lloyd, well known writer and Episcopalian minister of Chicago, and Miss Maude A. Archer, daughter of Mrs. Charles N. Miller, widow of the former general superintendent of the Chicago and Alton railroad. Lloyd and Miss Archer first met in Chicago. They became engaged and then he went overseas. He was gassed and invalided home. In Chicago, Miss Archer nursed him back to health.

35,000 Mahoning Valley Workmen Get Wage Boost

Youngstown, O., Jan. 31.—Following the announcement today of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company that its employés will receive a wage increase of 10 per cent, effective Feb. 1, officers of the other independent companies in this district announced that they would grant the same raise.

The change affects 35,000 workmen in the Mahoning valley.

Companies involved are the Brier Hill Steel company, the Republican Iron and Steel company, the Sharon Steel Hoop company, and the Trumbull Steel company.

SWISS REQUEST LEAGUE TO FIX NATION'S STATUS

BERNE, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Swiss government has addressed a note to the league of nations asking that the question of Swiss neutrality be the first dealt with at the meeting of the council of the league in London Feb. 22.

Study Belgian Problems.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—M. Jaspar, Belgian minister of economics, arrived in Paris today to resume discussion with M. Isaac, minister of commerce, concerning the economic agreement between France and Belgium, where King Albert, Paul Hymans, Belgian foreign minister, and M. Delacroix, the Belgian premier, and President Poincare and Premier Millerand left off at Ypres Wednesday.

No official communication regarding what transpired has been issued, but it is learned on reliable authority that King Albert and the generals discussed with Marshal Foch a military alliance against future agressions from the northeast.

U. S. Support for Hungary.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—A Budapest dispatch today quotes the newspaper Szozat of that city as stating it understands that Brig. Gen. Harry H. Bandholtz, U. S. A., American military representative in Budapest, has offered to Premier Huszar "the support of America for the Hungarian peace delegation."

BLUECOAT BACKS LAKE'S DENIAL HE KNEW ASSAILANT

Apple Kiss' Picture Adds to Mystery.

New developments, coming at the end of a three day search for the man who shot James J. Lake, sales manager for the Reo Motor Car company, 1218 South Michigan avenue, last night but deepened the mystery.

It was discovered, for instance, after further repeated questioning of those present at the scene of the shooting, that Lake's assertion of ignorance as to the identity of his assailant was in all probability true.

And in delving into the past life of Walter Allen, skipper of the Irene I. motor cruiser, on which Mrs. Franc Kingsnorth Lake made her now famous Mississippi river trip, it was found that he had been for some years a well known dancing teacher here.

Find Allen Was Well to Do.

It was found also that Allen, once a toolmaker at a small salary, had inherited a considerable estate from his father, and that in reality he was a moderately wealthy man.

And families living on houseboats near the recent mooring place of the Irene I. unhesitatingly identified a picture of Allen and Mrs. Lake as that of a couple known as "Mr. and Mrs. Allen."

Furthermore, the reality of another friend of Allen's, known always by his first name of "Albert," or the nickname of "Al," and who may possibly be the mysterious and missing "Saier," author of the telephone call which brought Lake to the snow covered dumping ground at Irving Park boulevard and Western avenue, where he was shot, was testified to by a woman neighbor of Allen.

THE TRIBUNE continued the task of comparison of the various stories regarding the shooting itself.

Policeman's Story.

Policeman Herman Klook, who accompanied Lake at the latter's request to the scene of the shooting, was asked as to Lake's possible acquaintance with his assailant.

"Impossible!" he declared. "In the first place, when the car drew up at the corner of Irving Park boulevard and Western avenue, Lake and I got out. We found a man waiting on the corner nearest us. Lake walked up to him and said:

"'Are you looking for a Mr. Lake?' The man looked at him for a moment, shook his head and walked away. Then Lake and I walked across the street, asking every one around, and then circled the intersection. We failed to find any one.

"Lake then turned to me and said: 'Do you suppose we are a little early? Maybe we'd better go back to the car and wait.'

"We started for the car. Just as we got across the street from it, I saw a man walk up to it and ask the driver something. Then he started down the street. Lake ran across and spoke to him.

"The man replied, and the two started to walk away. I followed them."

Repeats Tale to Detectives.

Klook later made a similar statement to members of the homicide squad. William Gohde, the chauffeur, the next man questioned, denied he had ever said that Lake seemed to know the man with whom he went away.

"The only statement I ever made on the affair was given to a detective sergeant," he declared. "I told him I was in a closed car, and that I could not hear a word that was said. Most certainly I never said Lake called this man "Al," as has been reported, for I don't believe I knew him."

"Apple Kiss" Picture.

Professor James Smith of the Smith School of Dancing, 1519 West Madison street, found last night by THE TRIBUNE, identified the "Apple Kiss" picture made public by the police as that of Allen and a pretty blonde woman who had many times visited his place.

Allen, whose home at 1817 Washington boulevard is but a block from the dance hall, was, until 1918, a dancing instructor at the hall, the professor declared, being paid $4 a night for his services.

The blonde woman would not come to the hall with Allen, it was said, but almost invariably appeared to go home with him.

Allen, the professor said, came to the hall a week ago, and said he had just returned from a three months' houseboat trip. He had not seen him since that time, he declared.

Tells of Allen's Life.

Bert Lock, houseboat neighbor of Allen and the Irene I. at Nelson and Western avenues, last night in an interview with a TRIBUNE reporter divulged many hitherto unknown details regarding Allen's life.

He said that early in 1917 Allen had come up to the dock with an old boat much smaller than the Irene I. Later he traded this boat and $400 cash to Peter Gargard, owner of the boatyard. Lock declared the Irene I. was then only worth about $800.

He said Allen was worth considerable money and that Allen had told him he had inherited it from his father in Arkansas. He often spoke of property he owned in or near Kansas City, Lock said, on which the government had a fish hatchery. Inquiry in that city last night, however, failed to reveal any trace of it.

Both Lock and Mrs. Fletcher, another neighbor, identified the "Apple Kiss" picture as that of a couple known to them as "Mr. and Mrs. Allen." The woman in the picture had previously been identified by Lake as his wife, Mrs. Franc Kingsnorth Lake, formerly a nationally known artists' model, and now critically ill from pneumonia at her home, 4222 North Laramie avenue.

Had Friend Called "Albert."

Mrs. Fletcher also told of a man known to her only as "Albert," who visited the Allens frequently and who, with another woman, participated in Sunday trips up the river on the Irene.

She could not give this man's last name, but admitted it sounded something like "Saier," the name given to Lake over the telephone by the man who lured him to the dumping ground rendezvous.

Lock said he had never heard of Saier, but that he knew "Albert" by his favorite nickname, "Al."

Mrs. Fletcher declared Mrs. Allen never slept on the boat, but always disappeared in the late afternoon. Allen, however, was there at night. She also said that a week previous to the start of the boat trip "Mrs. Allen" had visited relatives in Michigan.

She described Allen as a man about 5 feet 10 inches in height and weighing between 175 and 180 pounds. "Albert," she said, was only about 5 feet 6 inches in height and weighed only about 160 pounds. Both men, however, had the same general build.

Police are searching for a former sweetheart of Allen's in the hope of discovering his present whereabouts.

Allen, from October, 1916, to October, 1918, was employed by the Belden Manufacturing company, 2300 South Western avenue. During the nine months of his stay there he was a foreman in the molding goods department.

While there, it is said, he became infatuated with one of the girls in the shop to such an extent that he asked her transfer from another into his own department.

It is this girl for whom the search is being made. At that time Allen was living in a rooming house conducted by his present landlady, Mrs. Edward Wilson, at 144 North Paulina street.

W. T. Grimm, assistant superintendent of the Belden company, gave Allen a letter of recommendation when he left the company. E. C. Rose of the employment department and H. E. Wilkins, secretary of the company, last night told THE TRIBUNE that Allen was always a good worker.

Lieut. Michael Loftus of the Robey street station, in charge of the investigation, said last night that he expected the mystery would be cleared within the next forty-eight hours.

"We are getting closer and closer on Allen's trail," he said. "When we get him we'll have the solution."

LAKE LONGS FOR WORD WITH WIFE TO CLEAR TANGLE

Trip a Paid Outing, Not Invitational, He Says.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

Torn with conflicting emotions—one to believe in his wife, and one to believe some of the startling things that have been revealed to him in the last few days—James J. Lake, who was shot by a mysterious assailant Wednesday night, lies in a restless, fevered state at the Swedish Covenant hospital.

Yesterday his wan face smiled up from a white bed surrounded by floral offerings, and he was not quite able to reconcile the things he had heard about his wife's trip on the Irene I., and the fact that, as he said, "She spent close to $1,000 on that vacation. She wasn't a guest. I understood the passengers all paid their way. Allen must have made money."

"If I could see her I think perhaps we could straighten things out," he added in a gentle voice. "But the doctor telephoned me today that she might not recover, and they tell me I can't be moved from here for two weeks.

Doubts Allen's Phone Call.

"I don't believe it was Allen who telephoned the police he would report there and give himself up. I think it was some one he has doing that so the search for him will be diverted. The man who shot me is probably a long way from here now—not in this state.

"It's only by the grace of God that I am alive. It was not intended that I should be. When I think of that gun spitting fire at me—I can see it now. Shot after shot whizzed past my head, and I heard every one of them. I'd see the gun spit fire. Did I duck? I should say not. I was rooted to the spot. Policeman Klooch was behind me and two of the shots almost got him. He pulled his gun and fired, but I exclaimed, 'He's got me,' and the man ran the instant I said it.

"Officer Klooch would have run after him, but I told him to let him go and stay with me, as I was hurt.

Wants Allen's Story.

"I hope my wife gets well. If I could talk to her and get the truth aout some things—" and the painful, restless tossing began again. "If Allen is innocent why did he skip out?

"My mother came to care for my wife, but she broke down under the strain, and now they have a nurse there to care for her. I really hope she gets well," he added, as if it might be suspected that he didn't wish it. "I feel very sorry for her. I know now I shouldn't have gone to meet this man, but I am of a venturesome spirit and my curiosity got the better of me.

"When they say I neglected my wife, they are wrong. We took a number of trips together, and went to the theater—in fact, we were pals."

Then Mr. Lake told me again that when the picture of his wife and the strange man, eating an apple, was brought to him he identified the man instantly. "That's the man. He's the one who shot me," he said. Then he amended the assertion and said: "I mean to say I believe that is the man. I know it is a serious business to positively identify a man from a photograph. He ay look like the guilty man. But the man who shot me wore a cap like that, a sort of sailor cap or skipper's cap, or whatever you call it. If I saw him I'd know him all right. He was crazy, crazy as a loon."

FATHER HUNTS BOY; WENT AWAY TO BE TRAPPER

Frank Nielsen, keeper of a greenhouse on North Fifth avenue, La Grange, appealed to the police and THE TRIBUNE yesterday to assist him in a search for his son, Charles Robert Nielsen, 16 years old, who ran away from home Friday with George Maves, 14 years old, also of La Grange.

CHARLES R. NIELSEN.

The two boys left a note saying they were going to the Wisconsin woods to hunt and trap. They took a double barreled shotgun and a dozen traps with them.

Charles is 6 feet tall, weighs 135 pounds, has blonde hair and brown eyes. He has a scar on the lower right side of his chin. George is 5 feet 7 inches tall, has light hair and blue eyes.

WOMAN'S DEATH STILL MYSTERY

A coroner's jury yesterday was unable to arrive at a verdict concerning the cause of the death Thursday morning of Mrs. Tillie Pihl, companion of Mrs. John Miller, wife of the heroic Winnetka flagman, and the inquest was continued until Feb. 24, when Mrs. Miller, now ill of influenza, will testify.

Mrs. Miller was the only witness of Mrs. Pihl's death. She has said she believes Mrs. Pihl swallowed a quantity of a gargle prescribed by Dr. Harry D. Wiley. Dr. Wiley says the gargle was harmless. He believes Mrs. Pihl died of heart affection. Mrs. Miller summoned him when Mrs. Pihl became ill, but she was dead when he arrived.

The inquest will be held at the Evanston police station.

3 Burglars Fire Shots to Terrorize Women

Three men went into the home of Mrs. Katie Sneed, 3335 South Park avenue, yesterday, awakened Mrs. Sneed, and made her get out of bed. They asked for her money and jewels. She refused to give them up.

One of the three fired a shot in the ceiling. Octavia Sneed screamed, and ran to the aid of her mother. The burglars fled, but not before they had found a $500 diamond ring, a tie clasp set with a diamond, and $267.

Three men drove away in Julius Thasky's new auto, taking with them a little more than $130 donated by Thasky, George Gyok, 1028 North Franklin street, Max Nowaski, 2144 West Ohio street, and John Szuñowski, 463 North Western avenue. Thasky, who lives at 2307 West Chicago avenue, was showing the machine to his friends when the bandits arrived.

Oxford Priest to Preach at St. Mary's Today

Father O'Dowd, head of the house of priests at Oxford and an ecclesiastical writer of note, has arrived in Chicago on a speaking tour of American university cities and is at the rectory of St. Mary's Paulist church, 911 Wabash avenue. He will preach this morning at the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, Fifty-fifth street and Kimbark avenue, and at the University of Chicago on Monday.

EXPERT DEFENDS KAISER AGAINST KAUTSKY SALVO

Prof. Delbrueck Has a Counter Indictment.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Prof. Hans Delbrueck, Germany's most eminent living historian, has attacked Kautsky's commentary on the former kaiser's war documents as the work of a tricky lawyer bent on obtaining a conviction at any cost and a man who does not know the A. B. C.'s of historical research. Kautsky had been intrusted with preparing the documents for publication.

Prof. Delbrueck's views set forth what will be the former kaiser's chief defense against the grave and sensational revelations of Prof. Kautsky's book, should Wilhelm confront a world court as an accused man.

Argument of Prosecutor.

After comparing Kautsky's commentary with the documents the professor says: "I say his work is truly a caricature of historical research or, if you prefer, the argument of a prosecuting attorney striving to drag a verdict of guilty from the jurors at any cost. The cardinal principles of a historian to give the facts correctly and exactly, to understand the motives and methods of thought of the persons concerned and to present them correctly are grossly violated."

After citing in detail cases of alleged misrepresentation, Prof. Delbrueck continues:

"All the pains Kautsky took to prove the bad intentions of the German and Austrian statesmen are in vain. The sensational part of the publication was the marginal notes by the kaiser—such as he could give a spiteful twist Kautsky used in his commentary.

"According to Le Matin's views, the kaiser had the habit of writing on the reports submitted to him nothing but soliloquies, which are valuable to show his method of thought, and therefore important as a historical document. But it seems vulgar for any person of finer feelings to publish these while he is alive.

Instruction to Ministers.

"German policy follows a clear, well considered program, working often with faulty judgment, oftener with methods and tricks which seem petty, but never according to the whims and impulses and prejudices of the kaiser. The kaiser always made his decisions in agreement with his advisers and his advisers in agreement with him.

"The continuity of German policy would be just as clear if the marginal notes were unknown or never had been written. What really can be understood from the marginal notes is the opinion so well conveyed by the documents themselves that policy followed a systematic objective way and without interference from above."

Removal of Moles Fails to Save Woman from Jail

Eradication of two moles by a beauty expert failed to save Margaret Burton from trial as a shoplifter yesterday. She and Gladys Miller were given sentences of from one to ten years in prison by a jury in Judge Robert E. Crowe's court.

Both women were arrested Jan. 4, 1918. Margaret, known to her friends and the police as "Twice Blessed" Margaret because of a mole on each cheek, appeared in court with two tiny scars where the beauty spots had been. She denied she was the Margaret wanted, but the police presented evidence of her visits to a beauty shop to have the marks of identification removed. Both women have records.

MAX OF BADEN CONDEMNS PLAN TO TRY GUILTY

Says Germans Might Refuse to Give Up.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—Prince Max of Baden, the man who forced the abdication of the kaiser, today hotly attacked the allies for their extradition program.

He charged that the men pressing the demand for the surrender of the officers and men of the German army and navy are not prompted by any desire to see justice but by the lowest form of thirst for revenge. While not saying so directly, he indicated that if he were an officer and his name were listed he would refuse to surrender.

Might Decide Either Way.

"It is a question of conscience," he said. "A decision either way can be justified morally. One couldn't withhold the greatest admiration to the men who would give themselves up to a vindictive and cruel enemy, but it would be ridiculous to throw stones at the men who refuse. They can well think like Theodore Barth, who considers it is a sin in politics to submit to injustice and may therefore feel their duty not to facilitate this triumphal march of injustice and violence which the allied and associated governments have set on foot.

"So it is possible conscientiously to answer the question both yes and no.

"We Germans should not deceive ourselves about the wrongs committed during the war, but it would be senile and a national and international crime if we were willing to concede the moral right of the enemies to be our judges.

"Enemies Not Judges."

"We stand firmly for an international court to establish the world crimes and expose them to the contempt of the world and punish them, but behind the court must stand the conscience of the nations and a feeling of responsibility to mankind. It must not be a revenge committee of the allied piratical governments."

Lucy Page Gaston Finds New Foe to Be Put Down

"The Association Opposed to Prohibitions" is the latest organization to draw the fire of Lucy Page Gaston. Miss Gaston said last night that this association is composed of the tobacco companies manufacturing cigarets, and that there will be a fight to the finish betwen her organization, the International Anti-Cigaret league, and the cigaret makers. If she has her way the cigaret soon will be laid gently to rest alongside of old man Barleycorn.

CARRANZA NOT DICTATOR, SAYS EL PASO CONSUL

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 31.—Guarantees that the law will be complied with as regards the protection of candidates for the presidency have been issued by the Mexican secretariat of the interior, according to official advices received here today by Alberto Ruiz Sandoval, acting consul general for Mexico at El Paso.

Senor Sandoval said he had received no information regarding the report that President Carranza had declared himself dictator of Mexico.

"Such a step on the part of President Carranza is inconceivable," Sandoval declared.

REDS AT GATES OF ROUMANIA; PEACE OR INVADE

Report Gen. Kolchak Slain by His Own Army.

VIENNA, Jan. 28.—[Delayed.]—Dispatches from Bucharest state that the bolsheviki are waiting at the frontier to offer peace terms to Roumania.

If the terms are refused, the advices say, the soviet troops will advance.

Report Kolchak Executed.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The Moscow wireless service today transmitted an extract from an article from the official bolshevik organ Pravda stating:

"Only a few days ago Supreme Ruler Kolchak was hoisted on his soldiers' bayonets."

Reported Alive Wednesday.

VLADIVOSTOK, Wednesday, Jan. 28.—[Russian Telegraphic Agency.]—Admiral Kolchak and Premier Pepellayev of the all-Russian government are imprisoned in Irkutsk and what their fate will be is not known. Gen. Semenoff, commander of the forces in the far east, has communicated with the allied commanders, insisting upon energetic measures for liberating Admiral Kolchak.

[This dispatch, coming from the Russian telegraphic agency connected with the government in Siberia, is virtually official. If Admiral Kolchak has fallen a victim to his former troops, as seems to be claimed by the bolshevik message from Moscow, it is evident that Gen. Semenoff and his associates in the far east, who took anti-bolshevik affairs in Siberia in charge after Kolchak's detention, had not been informed of it up to Wednesday last.]

Doubt Odessa Fallen.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Officials here are decidedly skeptical as to the report received yesterday through Vienna that Ukrainian bolsheviki had captured Odessa.

An official diplomatic dispatch from Odessa, dated Jan. 22, said it was believed the bolsheviki would be in Odessa within seven to ten days, judging from the rate of their advance. Meanwhile Gen. Schilling, in command at Odessa, was anxious to remove from the city some 30,000 civilians, but was unable to get sufficient transports. The message left the impression that the general's plans for the defense of the city, of which he gave notice some ten days ago, were not progressing favorably.

Esthonia Saves Yudenitch.

Gen. Yudenitch has been arrested by troops of his command, but was freed by the Esthonians, the Esthonian legation here announced today. Yudenitch was arrested by adherents of Gen. Balkovitch, formerly an officer under him, the Esthonian government had been informed officially, because he discharged many soldiers, leaving them without means of subsistence.

The Balakovitch forces intended to try Yudenitch at Derpat, but the train was stopped by Esthonian troops. Yudenitch now is under protection of the Esthonian government.

[Gen. Balakovitch, formerly a bolsheviki leader, deserted, with his regiment, to Yudenitch, at the time the anti-bolsheviki forces were at the height of their triumphant advance toward Petrograd last fall.]

5 MARSHALS MAY GOOSESTEP INTO COURT OF ALLIES

PARIS, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Included in the list of Germans whose surrender by the Berlin government will be demanded by the allies, the Echo de Paris says, will be former Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, Field Marshal Duke Albrecht of Württemberg, Field Marshal von Kluck, Field Marshal von Buelow, Field Marshal von Mackensen, Baron von der Lancken, former civil governor of Brussels; Admiral von Capelle, former minister of marine, and Field Marshal von Sanders, who commanded the Turkish armies during the war.

Reports printed in English newspapers that the allied prime ministers will meet in London to consider a reduction in the list of Germans guilty of war crimes are denied here. It is announced the list, without modifications, will be submitted to Germany on Feb. 10.

Try to Guard Personages.

BASEL, Jan. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Because of the alleged impossibility of insuring the execution of its orders for the surrender of Germans accused of violation of the laws of war by the allies, the German government will resign if the entente powers insist upon their delivery, according to the Nachrichten of this city, which says it has received its information from a reliable source.

Arsenal Hidden in Berlin, Prussian Minister Warns

BERLIN, Friday, Jan. 30.—[Delayed.]—During discussion today in the national assembly of a proposal by the independents that the state of siege be abolished, Dr. Heine, Prussian minister of the interior, declared: "There is a secret arsenal somewhere in Berlin, but so far we have been unable to discover its whereabouts."

VICTORIES GIVE BOLSHEVIKS BIG EXPORT SUPPLY

Baltic Ready for Trade, but Blockade Continues.

BY THOMAS STEWART RYAN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

REVAL, Jan. 29, via London, Jan. 31—British warships still are blockading Petrograd today and their base is not yet removed from Reval.

Until three weeks ago destroyers on patrol were effectually cruising in the Gulf of Finland at Biorko. The passage is so narrow at this point that the constantly passing and repassing ships formed almost a smugglerproof wall. One day, however, a Swedish merchantman slipped by in the fog with a cargo of handsaws and was captured only upon its return by the astonished British. While running for Helsingfors with a prize crew abroad the Swede was beached by its own pilot.

Ice Blockades Petrograd.

Three weeks ago the ice relieved the British as the blockader of Petrograd. The British naval command has declared until the present no orders raising the blockade even on pecially stipulated goods have been received at this station. Meanwhile since neither Letvia and Esthonia yet have concluded peace with Russia, the Baltic blockade exists tonight.

Upon hearing the decision of the supreme council the bolshevik officials declared they would have food to give in trade to the outside world. This paradoxical statement, in view of their admission that Russia is very hungry, they explained by saying they have a surplus of food but have no means of conveying it to the big centers.

"Locomotives will mean food," one bolshevik official said. "We need motor trucks, railway cars, and all sorts of transport materials."

Ice Free Ports.

Reval and Libau are the only ice free ports in the Baltic. Therefore during the winter they will take precedence over Riga, a much superior harbor. Reval especially may be expected to grow on Russian trade, as the Russian treaty will doubtless include a railway concession from Reval through Pskoff toward Moscow. But Reval harbor ought to be extended, a labor of two or three years.

Even in the summer Petrograd alone can handle only a small part of the vast north Russian import. Accordingly some sort of customs union seems inevitable with the Baltic states so that Windau, Libau, Riga, Reval, and Helsingfors can receive a share.

The Esthonian government has pronounced free transit for goods to or from Russia across Esthonian territory.

MRS. LEEDS WEDS PRINCE; CHURCH CEREMONY TODAY

GENEVA, Jan. 31.—Prince Christopher of Greece and Mrs. William B. Leeds were married at 11 o'clock this morning in the ancient town hall here. The ceremony was a civil one, to be followed by a religious ceremony, to be conducted at Vevey, near Montreux, tomorrow, according to the rites of the Greek church.

The witness for the bride was A. W. S. Piccard, a New Orleans attorney. Capt. Stocker, aide de camp to the prince, acted in the same capacity for the bridegroom.

American Consul Dick and the Associated Press correspondent were the only onlookers.

Mrs. Leeds wore a dark tailor made suit, black furs, and a toque.

The party took luncheon here and left this afternoon for Montreux.

Among the guests at the Vevey church wedding tomorrow will be the Duke of Sparta, the former Greek crown prince, representing ex-King Constantine.

The ceremony today lasted only fifteen minutes. The party drove up in four motor cars, arriving at the town hall at 11 o'clock.

4 PACEMAKERS IN WHITE HOUSE STAKES WHIP UP

Lowden, Pershing, Wood, and Harding in Lead.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Senator Harding, Ohio, in his quest for delegates to the Republican national convention who will support him for the presidential nomination, has decided to make an aggressive campaign in Indiana. He was told today that four Indiana representatives in congress have declared for Harding for president.

Representative Will R. Wood of the Tenth Indiana district said today:

"I want the next president to be a man with legislative experience, thoroughly versed in government affairs, and for the principles of the Republican party.

"Senator Harding would make a most excellent president. He would give this country the McKinley statesmanship it needs."

Lowden Gazes to East.

While the Harding managers are turning their eyes westward, managers for Gov. Lowden are looking to a vigorous campaign in eastern states, and Representative Frank L. Smith, manager of the Lowden headquarters here, issued a statement tonight expressing confidence that the Illinois executive has, in eight or ten weeks, "been put in the front rank of Republican candidates."

"The greatest actual demonstrated strength of Gov. Lowden," Mr. Smith said, "has been found by special writers and astute political observers in Iowa, Kansas, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Minnesota, and Michigan.

"In these states the response has been spontaneous and universal. Efforts of Gov. Lowden's supporters in these states have expanded, unaided into other western states, such as Colorado, where Gov. Shoup and Lieut. Gov. Stephan have formally announced their support of Gov. Lowden."

Pershing Boosters Busy.

Another booster for Gen. Pershing's presidential boom came to Washington today in the person of O. G. Smith, president of the National Farmers' congress.

"Gen. Pershing," Mr. Smith said, "will be put forward, not as a military candidate, but as a business man and the sort of positive character needed to guide this country through reconstruction. He is not a candidate, but he will be drafted at Chicago and will answer the call just as millions of men who served under him in the war did.

"Pershing sentiment today is epidemic in Nebraska, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming, California, Washington, and Oregon, and six weeks ago his name was scarcely mentioned in connection with the presidency."

Expect Wood to Resign.

Reports continue that Maj. Gen. Wood will resign from the army to devote his time exclusively to the Republican presidential campaign, and it is stated tonight that a conference of his campaign managers will be held in Chicago Monday for the purpose of reaching a definite conclusion on this point. Such a conclusion was said to have been reached at a recent Chicago conference. At this time it was agreed that Gen. Wood should retire from the army as soon as delegates begin to be instructed for him. Now, the reports is, it may be decided that he should retire earlier than that from the army.

MARRIED

Daughter of Late Circus Man Is Bride of Oak Parker.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Burnett.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The marriage of Miss Mattie S. Ringling, daughter of Mrs. A. Ringling of Baraboo, Wis., to Elbert M. Burnett of Oak Park took place in the presidential suite at the Hotel La Salle last night. Miss Ringling served as canteen worker with the Y. M. C. A. in France for over a year. Her father was one of the famous Ringling brothers. Mr. Burnett is manager of the municipal bond department of the Central Trust company. He served as an ensign on board the Rhode Island during the war. They will leave tonight for New Orleans. Miss Julia M. Derrough of Champaign was maid of honor and Dr. E. B. Fowler of Oak Park was best man.

ANOTHER EFFORT TO BE MADE FOR G. O. P. PEACE

Local Republican harmonizers will make another effort to putty up the rifts in the party lutes. The county committee has been summoned to meet tomorrow afternoon. Attorney General Brundage, Thomas J. Healy and Frank P. Brady, representing respectively the Brundageites, the Deneenites, and the Thompsonites, finding themselves unable to tune up the fiddles themselves, decided to put the job up to the full rival groups.

Meanwhile the Democrats are swimming in a sea of honey. Yesterday they gave out the concordat on ward committeemen. Here's the harmonized slate, nobody to be opposed:

WOMAN'S CLUB CHEERS WOOD'S TRAINING PLEA

General Urges Aid for Suffering Europe.

Six hundred members of the Chicago Woman's club heard Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood speak on preparedness and universal military training yesterday, and the applause brought forth by the general's remarks on preparedness was more than polite. It sounded sincerely noisy. When he said the war would have been avoided had the United States been prepared, and the American dead were twice what they would have been had our army been ready, there were audible gasps.

Slain "Pacifists' Dead."

"They," said the general, speaking of the needlessly slain, "are the pacifists' dead."

A woman near the door exclaimed acquiesence and the general went on:

"Do not let us fall into the state of utter helplessness we were in at the beginning of the war. No class of men hate war as soldiers do. They know what it means. But we also know that wars are inevitable and sudden. A strong nation, standing for justice and right may prevent them. We will do everything in our power to prevent them, but failing, we are ready. A nation able to summon a trained citizenry to arms need not fear."

Have No Questions.

At the end, Mrs. W. H. Winslow, presiding, threw the meeting over to questions which Gen. Wood said he would attempt to answer. There were none, so the general spoke further.

"I do not want to answer any question relating to our conduct of the war overseas," he said. "That is now being investigated. But I do want to remind you of our obligations to the stricken peoples of Europe. We have the bulk of the world's wealth. We must use it to restore some of the happiness the broken and starving men and women of Europe have lost. We must have regard for their needs, quite apart from the international relations we have already entered. As one safeguard against war, I sincerely hope the machinery of arbitration is preserved and would like to see a Super-Hague tribunal come out of the war."

Mrs. Winslow sopke and the meeting was dismissed without the questions it had been called for.

INDICTED POLICE GIVE BONDS.

Three policemen who were indicted by the grand jury yesterday in connection with the graft investigation appeared in court yesterday and gave bonds. Frank Freemuth had as his surety George M. Marks, garage owner, 4740 Washington boulevard. The bond of Policeman Edward Mitchell was signed by his brother, William Mitchell, of 1472 Indiana avenue, and that of Policeman Michael Kelly by James O'Brien, saloonkeeper, of 3226 Emerald avenue.

POLITICAL NOTES

Miss Maria Funk of Champaign, Ill., has begun the organization of a young women's Lowden club of Illinois.

Thomas J. O'Grady opens his campaign against Ald. W. R. O'Toole of the Thirtieth ward this afternoon at the Graham school.

Congressman Burton E. Sweet, representing the Iowa district which embraces Hardin county, Gov. Lowden's boyhood home, has sent word to headquarters that indications are for a solid Lowden delegation from Iowa.

Theodore Roosevelt Jr. yesterday accepted a place on the Leonard Wood national campaign committee. "Will be glad to serve on your national committee," he said, in a telegram to Gen. Wood.

A general conference of the Wood managers will be held at the Congress hotel tomorrow. Norman J. Gould, eastern campaign head, will be here for the pow-wow, which will consider organization matters state by state. One current report was that the meeting would consider the question of whether Gen. Wood should resign from the army despite the affirmation of Secretary of War Baker that the situation required no resignation and that plenty of precedents exist to that effect. Col. W. C. Procter, general manager, was in Cincinnati, but other attaches at headquarters said no change in plans was contemplated.

Political activities being a bit dull along "presidential row" yesterday, the publicity experts deemed it an opportune time to ease out some "straw votes."

A poll of Iowa newspaper editors and publishers taken by a Des Moines paper indicates that Governor Allen is strong favorite among them. The vote showed: Lowden, 654; Wood, 400; Johnson, 234; Hoover, 138; Coolidge, 90; Harding, 35. Lowden also leads as second choice with 400 votes, against 366 for Wood. Commenting on the poll, the Cedar Rapids, Ia., Republican says: "The state may be counted on as reasonably certain to cast its vote for Gov. Lowden. That seems to be the natural alignment."

Wood headquarters gave out the results of a poll made by the Marquette, Mich., Mining Journal in fifteen counties in the upper peninsula: Wood, 356; Lowden, 90; Johnson, 46; Hoover, 31; Pershing, 9; Coolidge, 9; Harding, 5.

Columbus, O.—Gov. James M. Cox officially announced his candidacy for the democratic presidential nomination.

Lincoln, Neb.—Circulation of petitions was begun to place the name of Gen. John J. Pershing on the ballot in Nebraska as a republican candidate for president. Petition blanks were sent from the Lincoln headquarters to every county and precinct in the state.

FOUR ALDERMEN HAVE NO FIGHT FOR RE-ELECTION

Eaton, Bowler, Steffen, and Link Safe.

Sixteen of thirty-five wards will settle their aldermanic election at the first crack under the new nonpartisan law Feb. 24, while the others will require a supplemental election. These were the estimates of experts yesterday upon looking over the table of filings.

Four aldermen have no opposition. They are C. S. Eaton in the sixth, James B. Bowler in the nineteenth, Walter P. Steffen, twenty-third and Frank J. Link, in the twenty-fifth. No one is entered against these four, yet the election will be held.

In Other Wards.

In twelve other wards, the present aldermen appear almost certain of getting a plurality of all votes cast Feb. 24, which will automatically elect them without a supplemental poll. In the first it will be a romp for John Coughlin. Ald. R. R. Jackson in he second is expected to walk away with the bacon first time up.

In the third N. B. Haldane withdrew yesterday leaving Ald. U. S. Schwartz with only one opponent, Robert Finn. It will be easy for Schwartz unless he breaks a leg. Ald. John Richert in the fourth is picked as a Feb. 24 winner.

Only Two Candidates.

The seventh has only two candidates, so one must win, and the experts believe it will be asy for Ald. Guy Guernsey. Ald. J. McNichols in the tenth has three opponents, but is loowed on as a first-try winner, while in the sixteenth Ald. J. A. Piotrowski has only one man to beat. Ald. S. S. Kalkowski in the seventeenth, likewise has only one rival. The twentieth, where Ald. Matt Franz has two opponents is also listed for a Feb. 24 decision, and similarly with the twenty-eighth, where Ald. M. Adamowski has two against him. Ald. John Toman in the thirty-fourth and Ald. Thomas J. Lynch in the thirty-fifth are on the books of the dopesters for a decision Feb. 24 without a further run.

Army Seeks 100,000 to Replace Discharged Men

Army authorities will start a drive for 100,000 recruits tomorrow morning. These men are needed to fill a gap left by an equal number of men who are to be discharged between now and May 1, after having served one year enlistments, which were allowed on reënlistment after discharge since the armistice was signed. A brisk campaign will be carried on at the loop recruiting stations and Sergt. Frank Dedic has been given a detail of five men to work at the theaters, where slides and army pictures will be shown.

MILITARISM RUN MAD, OPPONENTS CALL ARMY BILL

Report Believed Opening of Bitter Fight.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—"Militarism run mad" was the characterization applied today to the Wadsworth army reorganization bill, providing for universal military training, by Senators McKellar of Tennessee and Sheppard of Texas, members of the senate military affairs committee, in a minority report filed with the senate. The report, it was stated, was subscribed to also, with reservations, by Senators Lenroot of Wisconsin and Capper of Kansas, Republicans.

The vigorous condemnatory character of the report indicates the bitterness with which the universal service issue will be contested when it comes before the senate within the next week or ten days.

Declare Estimate Too Low.

The minority report declares that the majority estimate of $600,000,000 to carry out the purposes of the bill is entirely too low, and that actually the cost will be about $1,200,000,000. The report then continues:

"The minority of the committee submits that the passage of this bill, carrying the appropriations which must come, will be to institute in this country a military system of the first order. Indeed it will be militarism run mad, a militarism of the ultra German type, a militarism never dreamed of by our forefathers, a militarism that is wholly unnecessary, a militarism that may be subversive of our democratic institutions, a militarism that cannot be defended, a militarism that is wholly unjustifiable when we look at our history and at our future.

Burden "Indefensible."

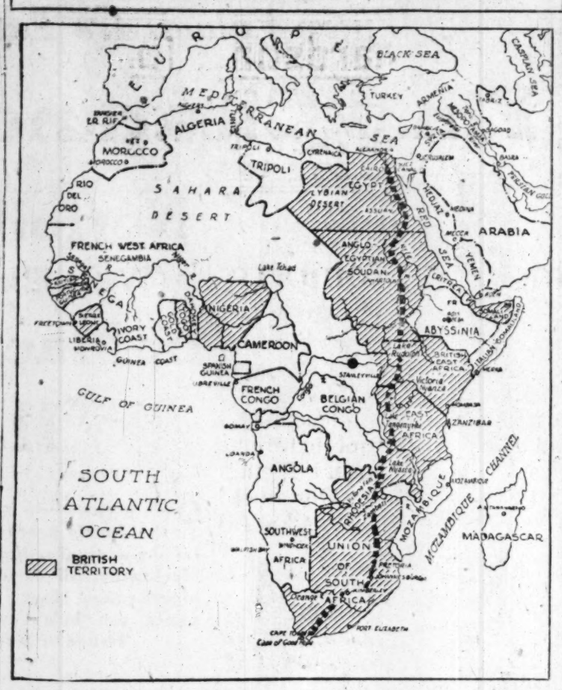
"To impose a financial burden of this kind upon the American people, already weighed down by a war debt of something like thirty billions of dollars, will be absolutely indefensible at this time. We went into the great war for the purpose of saving ourselves from a German militarism. We succeeded in the war, and surely the American people do not intend for us to establish in this country an American militarism in the place and stead of the democracy bequeathed to us by our fathers."

Senator Borah of Idaho, Republican, announced today that he intended to fight the bill.

D'Olier for Training.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 31.—The American Legion should lend its support to efforts to establish a system of universal military training that will make better citizens and at the same time provide a citizen army, Franklin D'Olier, national commander, said today in an address before the Massachusetts department of the legion in special state convention in Faneuil hall. He reaffirmed the purpose of the legion to remain aloof from politics and to stand for 100 per cent Americanism.

FROM CAIRO TO CAPETOWN BY AIR



Africa, large areas of which have never been opened to civilization, is to lose much of its isolated character. The British government has announced the opening of an air service between Cairo and Capetown, the two extremes of the African continent.

The air route is ready for traffic and the trip across the continent will take about one week.

Heretofore the time required to traverse the continent was from ten to twelve weeks.

By securing German East Africa in the division of Germany's colonies Great Britain has linked up her northern and southern colonies in Africa.

The Cape to Cairo air line will be followed by the completion of the all rail line from Egypt to the Union of South Africa.

940 VESSELS IN NEW NAVY, PLAN OF DEPARTMENT

Secretary Roosevelt for Fleet Rivaling Any.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—Approximately 940 warships, including sixteen dreadnaughts, thirteen predreadnaughts, eight armored cruisers and seventeen light cruisers, will be the peace-time strength of the American navy after July 1, the house naval committee was told today by Rear Admiral Taylor, chief of the bureau of construction and repair.

This will be three times the number in commission when the United States declared war on Germany, but the comparative tonnage will only be about one and one-half times as great.

War Lessons to Be Used.

A number of improvements based on the lessons learned in the war will be made. The first line ships, Admiral Taylor said, will be equipped with airplane platforms over the forward turrets and extending over the bows so that aircraft may rise from all of them when at sea.

Other changes include fire and searchlight controls, details of which were withheld for military reasone.

Must Rival the World.

New York, Jan. 31.—The United States must have a navy equal to that of any other power and it may cost $1,000,000,000 a year to maintain it, said Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, at a meeting of the Brooklyn chamber of commerce today.

"To maintain the navy," he said, "now requires from $500,000,000 to $600,000,000 a year, but to maintain our protection we will have to spend $1,000,000,000 a year. The league of nations will try to limit the size of navies and, therefore, large sums will be saved.

"In any event we must have a navy equal to any other nation. This is made necessary by our geographical position and our large coast lines."

PERSHING URGES CADET ARMY TO KEEP U. S. SAFE

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 31.—Urging the maintenance of a cadet military establishment that would be entirely free from all taint of militarism but afford a foundation for a great army that might be needed some time in the future, Gen. Pershing described his plan for keeping the country in a better state of preparedness than it was found at the outbreak of the great war.

The general advocated a six months' military course for all male students.

The time may come, Gen. Pershing said, when the country will be called upon to face a great enemy and when it will not have a trained army of allies to hold the enemy in check while the Americans learn the game of war.

Spring Style Sample Models at 25 to 50% Below Their Worth

The best dressed 600 Chicago women will be those who select one each of the 600 Exclusive Sample Models shown last week at

The National Convention and Style Show

Fifty-nine of the leading manufacturers of American fashions exhibited their new Spring Creations at the Gately National Style Convention.

From these models, interpreting the finest in fashion-art, Gately's trained and expert buyers made their selection of the latest and most authentic styles

In Dresses, Suits, Coats, Blouses, Skirts

Lower Prices

For the first time in the history of the Gately organization these original models will be sold to the public at the Gately Chicago Stores at prices much lower—in fact, at 25% to 50% lower —than their reproductions will cost.

The woman who wants to lead, not imitate, in her clothes—who appreciates that chic tailoring, that perfection of detail and exclusiveness of design found always in the original model, will find this most unusual and timely opportunity to select her Spring wardrobe from the originations of not one but 59 American Style Artists.

G. O. P. TO LEAD TREATY OUT FOR SENATE BATTLE

May Force Democrats to Accept Terms, Belief.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—To forestall action by the Democrats, Republicans in the senate are planning to bring the treaty up in the senate next week in an effort to end the present chaotic situation and settle the controversy in one of two ways, namely:

First, by proving conclusively that the Lodge reservations are "the irreducible minimum" and that the treaty stands rejected without them.

Second, by putting the administration forces to the test and compelling them to join in the ratification of the treaty with the Lodge reservations.

Senator Walsh of Montana, Democrat, gave formal notice today that he would move on Feb. 10 to resume consideration of the peace treaty.

Republicans May Act.

The Republicans made it plain that they welcome a resumption of consideration of the pact and that they themselves might make the motion proposed by Senator Walsh at some date earlier than Feb. 10.

They believe the complete failure of all compromise negotiations to suggest a set of reservations likely to command more support than the Lodge program, which was adopted by a substantial majority, should make it clear that the only way to ratify the pact is for the Democrats to abandon President Wilson's unyielding leadership and adopt the course pointed out by Bryan.

Democrats' Guess Is Wrong.

Many Democrats, they pointed out, voted against ratification on Nov. 19 with the Lodge reservations largely because they were confident that eventually the Republicans would give in and agree to a set of reservations less obnoxious to President Wilson.

Parleys since have upset that calculation and Republican leaders think the time has arrived to ascertain whether the Democrats still are willing to block the treaty because Mr. Wilson thinks the Lodge program nullifies the pact. They believe that many Democrats would change their attitude but whether they would do so in sufficient numbers to ratify the treaty remains to be seen.

If the Democrats, forced to make a decision, continue to support the president's position, the treaty can be set aside and the main disputed points—Article X and the Monroe doctrine—can be referred to the people as campaign issues, it was explained.

MEETINGS TO CUT COST OF LIVING BLOCKED BY FLU

Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, head of the woman's department of the Illinois fair price committee, announced yesterday that the series of meetings started last Wednesday afternoon in twelve Chicago schools for the purpose of explaining how housewives could reduce the cost of living in purchasing clothing will be discontinued because of the influenza epidemic.

The Girl Scouts from St. Paul's church at East Fiftieth street and Dorchester avenue were the first of the Girl Scouts who will help the women of the fair price committee on Saturday mornings. According to Mrs. Bowen, three Girl Scouts from different organizations will help out at the Illinois fair price commission's headquarters in the federal building every Saturday morning.

The girls who helped this morning were Martha G. Welch, 830 East Fifty-second street; Catherine Fosberg, 4833 Dorchester avenue, and Jeannette Brown, 5445 Harper avenue.

WATCH CHURCHES TODAY TO STOP FLU SPREADING

Short Services Asked For by Dr. Robertson.

Health department inspectors have been ordered to visit all Chicago churches today to see that the congregations are properly safeguarded against influenza.

Where churches are poorly ventilated, insufficiently heated, or where unrestrained coughing and sneezing is permitted, the inspectors will have authority to act.

New Death Record.

Deaths from flu reached a new high mark for the present epidemic yesterday. The figures are: Deaths from influenza, 122; deaths from pneumonia, 85; new cases of influenza, 860; new cases of pneumonia, 350.

"I appeal to ministers to preach short sermons and to take as their subject the gospel of fresh air," said Health Commissioner Robertson. "And let them practice the same doctrine by seeing that there is good ventilation, plenty of heat, and as little coughing and sneezing as possible.

"Today's decrease in new influenza cases is gratifying, and the increase in deaths cannot continue much longer."

Warns of Whisky.

Dr. Robertson repeated his warning to flu victims to abstain from alcoholic drinks of all kinds.

A letter from Frank C. Linden of 1901 South Halsted street, read:

"Conditions are becoming alarming in my district (around Nineteenth and Halsted streets) among the Lithuanians, principally, owing to their habit of drinking wood alcohol, whisky, etc. They obtain the alcohol from department stores and even paint stores and mix it with syrups of various kinds. I have treated several during the last two weeks who have shown symptoms of exhaustion, lack of animation, and no pain. They become almost lethargic for days."

Red Cross Active.

Three hundred nurses and sick room attendants have been placed at influenza bedsides in the last four days by the Red Cross, according to Dr. A. Augustus O'Neill, medical director of the local chapter.

"But we are short twenty nurses tonight," he said last night. "Please request all nurses or sick room attendants to call Majestic 8270 and register with us for places."

Movies Are Warned.

Moving picture theater proprietors are being warned again that unless they live up to the commissioner's instructions on ventilation, it may be necessary to close all such places.

W. W. Carroll, village clerk of Mount Greenwood, a suburb with a population of 2,000, announced yesterday that he will appeal to Chicago health authorities for doctors and nurses. There is not a physician in the village, he said, and many citizens of the village are ill with flu and several have died.

Clerk Carroll said he had appealed to Dr. William H. German of Morgan Park for assistance, but the latter replied that twenty-one cases in Morgan Park were keeping him so busy that he could give little time to Mount Greenwood.

FLU TRAVELS IN CYCLES, FEDERAL REPORT STATES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—Recurrence of influenza epidemics in cycles thirty-three or sixty-six weeks apart is discussed in a statement issued tonight by the bureau of census, based on a study made by Dr. John Brownlee, an English physician, who advanced the cycle theory.

"It is now exactly sixty-six weeks since the mortality peak of the epidemic in Chicago," the statement said. "The same is true for New York City and Washington. In all three of these places influenza is epidemic."

Flu Rages Downstate.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Influenza continues to rage downstate, but is subsiding at Chicago and other northern Illinois points, according to information received by Dr. C. St. Clair Drake and sent to Surgeon General Blue at Washington. A summary of the situation at Chicago for a period of four weeks, ending at noon today, shows 26,831 cases of influenza reported, with 1,843 deaths. For the four weeks in 1918 the figures are 29,585 cases and 3,676 deaths.

New York Deaths Increase.

New York, Jan. 31.—Deaths from influenza continued to increase today. There was a decided drop in the number of new cases reported. There were 123 deaths from the disease, an increase of four over yesterday's figures, while the number of new cases totaled 4,895, a decrease of 637 over those of the previous day. There were 137 pneumonia deaths and 811 new cases.

10,000 College Boys at Reserve Officers' Camps

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—At least 10,000 college students are expected to attend reserve officers' training camps which open June 17 for a period of six weeks.

Announcing-

The FEBRUARY SALE of O-G LOW SHOES

It has been customary for many years to feature advance styles of Spring and Summer O-G low shoes for women in February at reduced prices.

The primary purpose of this sale is to introduce advance Spring and Summer styles to the O-G patrons. Its mission is also to promote business generally—to increase the O-G following through the appeal of unusual value-giving.

Twelve months ago the material used in the manufacture of these O-G shoes was under contract—accordingly these present sale prices are exceptionally low—in fact, less than the present wholesale cost.

By purchasing your Spring and Summer low shoes now you secure an appreciable saving of $2 to $6 on each pair. Also consider the important fact that stocks are now most complete—you will have the pleasure of choosing from unlimited styles and sizes.

This is your opportunity to be FIRST with the LATEST—and at the same time avail yourself of savings that are vital these days of higher prices.

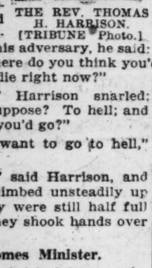
HOW CUSS WORDS WON HOMES FOR RAILROAD MEN

Former Engineer Tells of New U. S. Law.

Something more than ten years ago Tom Harrison, railroad engineer, leaned far out of the window of his engine cab one day and shot a steady stream of profanity at Harry Robertson, the conductor of his train. The two had just returned from a saloon. While in the saloon they had quarreled and come to blows.



THE REV. THOMAS H. HARRISON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

For a time Robertson cursed back. Then, looking quietly up at his adversary, he said:

"Harrison, where do you think you'd go if you was to die right now?"

"Why, to hell," Harrison snarled; "where do you suppose? To hell; and where d'ye think you'd go?"

"Well, I don't want to go to hell," said Robertson.

"Neither do I," said Harrison, and then Robertson climbed unsteadily up into the cab—they were still half full of whisky—and they shook hands over the proposition.

Quits; Becomes Minister.

When Harrison finished his run he arranged for an indefinite leave of absence, and he has never gone back to running an engine, although he still maintains his membership in the B. of R. E.

Yesterday the Rev. Thomas H. Harrison walked into THE TRIBUNE office to announce that he had succeeded in getting congress to make a law which will compel the railroads to build at their division terminals structures in which adequate sleeping, eating, and bathing facilities will be provided at cost for the men when they are at "the other end" of their runs.

"When I got off my engine that day I became a Christian man," he said. "Some time later I was ordained a Presbyterian minister in Atlanta, Ga., and given a church in Nashville, Tenn. When I got the church there were just four in the congregation and when I left after seven years there was a congregation of 703 persons.

Remembers Former Pals.

"But all through that seven years I was thinking about the railroad men and the conditions they had to face—snatching insanitary food and sleeping in cabooses and oil houses at the end of the line away from home. And so I finally figured out a plan of decent quarters for them. I took it up with B. L. Winchell, regional director in the southeast—this was about two years ago—and he liked the plan and wrote to McAdoo about it.

"Well, Senator Hoke Smith introduced it in congress as a bill, and on Jan. 16, it was passed and became a law."

The Rev. Mr. Harrison is at the Moody Bible institute, where he intends to remain for several months.

ASK VOTERS TO BEAT SOCIALIST FOES IN ALBANY

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 31.—The demand that the five Socialist assemblymen suspended during an investigation of their eligibility to serve be immediately seated and calling upon all delegates and their constituencies to pledge the defeat of every member of the assembly in any way responsible for the "un-American, unconstitutional, and indefensible ousting of these duly elected representatives," was adopted unanimously at a conference of labor, civic, and social organizations here today.

Between 300 and 400 delegates from all parts of the state attended the conference, called by the "committee of seventeen" organized "to protect the interests of representative government." Labor bodies were in the majority.

MUSICAL CLUB TO ENTERTAIN.

The Orpheus Musical club, an amateur organization, has a sixty-five piece orchestra that will give a concert at the Hebrew institute on Washington's birth. Proceeds will go towards buying instruments and starting a music library.

NEEDY FAMILIES SHIVER, WAITING COAL FUND HELP

Mothers and Children Hunt for Fuel.

Back o' the yards, where six families live in houses built for two, the chill winds bite deeper than on Lake Shore drive.

"My babies, they are so cold!" sigs the anemic Lithuanian mother and gathers her shawl tighter about her head. Two years ago, when her husband was released from the bridewell, he did not come home. Since then 5 year old Vladislaus and his three little brothers have been without a father to support them.

Picks Coal in Street.

Into the street steps the mother. The stove is slowly growing cold, and she must find some fuel to keep her family from freezing. Down at Forty-seventh street, where the tracks enter the stockyards, pieces of wood and stray lumps of coal may be found.

Here the women of the dreary places gather day by day. Here you will see the little Polish woman who left her cruel husband and supported her six small children, without a murmur, until about a year ago, when she got tuberculosis. Here you will find Mrs. ——, another Pole, whose husband is in an insane asylum. Recently she was given a small cook stove to heat her home—but what's a stove without coal or wood?

County's Aid Limited.

The county can only give half a ton of soft coal a month to each destitute family, and this is scarcely enough for two weeks during the bitter months of winter. Meanwhile, they are dependent on charity—and charity begins in warm comfortable homes where the weary mother does not have to rustle fuel. Contributions to THE TRIBUNE coal fund should be addressed to the city editor. THE TRIBUNE has the coöperation of the United Charities in the distribution of the coal.

PROLOGUE OVER; ACT 1 MONDAY IN NEWBERRY TRIAL

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 31.—With a jury sworn in, attorneys and defendants in the federal trial of Senator Newberry and 122 others on charges of fraud, corruption and conspiracy in the 1918 election, were making ready tonight for the next act of the political drama. This is expected Monday afternoon, to which time court adjourned to give the respondents opportunity to arrange personal affairs for the lengthy performance in prospect.

Both sides professed satisfaction with the jury. It consists of six farmers, two produce dealers, a cattle buyer, the manager of a farmers' coöperative elevator, a grain dealer, and a grocer. Charlevoix is the largest town represented, and nine of the twelve men come from the northern part of this federal district.

Politically, attorneys for both sides agreed, the jury consists of ten Republicans and two whose party affiliations are doubtful.

Deadlock on Oil Bill Broken After 3 Months

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—The three months' deadlock on the oil land leasing bill was broken in conference today by a compromise. This virtually amounts to a final agreement. By the compromise the transfer of surplus oil lands after Oct. 21 last by persons holding more than 3,200 acres, to be the new legal maximum, would be declared void.

Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, said the conferees left to him and Representative Sinnott of Oregon, chairman of the house managers, the question of the royalty distribution provision. They hope to reach an agreement Monday.

Alleged Mustard Slayer to Face Murder Charge

Fond du Lac, Wis., Jan. 31.—Judge Fowler today denied the motion offered by the defense to quash the warrant for the arrest of Dr. J. A. Freudenberg of Markesan on the grounds that it was illegally drawn and executed. Dr. Freudenberg is charged with murder in connection with the death of his mother-in-law from an injection of mustard.

"DARDANELLA"
for VOCALION RECORDS

THE most fascinating fox-trot of the season, played by Chicago's "jazziest" orchestra, is here recorded on Vocalion Records—the last word in modern phonograph reproduction.

From the first captivating strains of this marvelous dance-record, you will realize the impossibility of "sitting-out" dances when Paul Biese's Novelty Orchestra plays.

This famous organization needs no introduction to Chicagoans. Dance enthusiasts from the far corners of this country and Europe have been dancing here to its irresistible music for several seasons past.

Ask to have played for you this snappy Vocalion Record of "Dardanella," by Paul Biese's Orchestra, which is now playing at the Pantheon Theatre.

CHICAGO JULIET TRUE CAPULET, SO ROMEO DIES

Wife Saves Father at Cost of Husband.

There was bitter enmity between the houses of Baronti and Boccanero. It began about four years ago—on the day when Boccanero acquired a wife and a wound.

The wife was Jennie Baronti, and the wound was a dagger thrust through the right hand, given by John Baronti, Jennie's father.

The Boccaneros went to live at 704 South Paulina street after their elopement, and if Jennie ever went to the home of her parents and her brothers and her sisters it was by stealth.

The bitterness grew, for every time Boccanero looked at his hand he remembered the dagger thrust. And frequently, the neighbors say, the vengeance lust mastered him and he went in search of Baronti.

Wife in Dilemma.

The climax came yesterday—and with it the dilemma of Jennie Boccanero. Her husband had a gun and had announced his intention of giving wound for wound.

What should she do? If she warned her father he might kill her husband. If she did not warn him he might himself be killed. She knew her father, knew that he was armed—for he is a railroad watchman and always carries a revolver—and knew that he could shoot with accuracy.

She could think of only one plan. She hurried to her father's home, 2319 West Twenty-fourth street. She told the family of her husband and pleaded with them, her parents, her brothers, her sisters not to provoke him if he came.

"Have nothing to do with him," she said. "He is desperate. He is crazed. Don't let him in here. Don't see him. Don't hurt him."

And, weeping, she fled home—and waited.

Asks for Father.

The Boccanero a little while later came to the Baronti's and asked to see the father.

"He's here," said one of his brothers-in-law. "Wait. He'll see you."

But the Boccanero did not wait. It may have been his desire for vengeance had somewhat abated. He went to the cigar store of Leo Cecchi at 3431 South Oakley avenue.

The Baronti slipped out of the back door of his home and went around through the alleys and into Oakley avenue. And as he turned the corner he saw the Boccanero stepping out of the cigar store.

"Yah!" he cried. "Boccanero!"

Fires at Son-in-Law.

Two shots blended almost as one. The younger man fell, still shooting. The older man fired from the protection of the corner, and then took refuge behind a stalled motor truck and put four more bullets in the body of his son-in-law. He had hit him six times out of six.

And when he was sure the Boccanero would not fire again he went to him, took the pistol out of his hand—the one with the dagger scar—dropped the weapon into his coat pocket, and went his way.

They took the Boccanero to St. Anthony's hospital, and a little later there came to the women who waited the news that he had died.

"It was either Roberto or my father," she said. "I tried to stop it, but I couldn't. What should I have done?"

BELGIAN PASTOR WRITES STORY OF HIS NATIVE LAND

THE REV. JULIUS E. DE VOS.

The Rev. Julius E. de Vos, pastor of St. John Berchman Roman Catholic church, is the author of a new "Brief History of the Belgian Nation." Within seventy pages he tells the outstanding qualities of the courageous little nation which braved the enemy and faced extinction in the name of liberty. The booklet is a condensation of a larger two volume work by Father de Vos, just off the press. "Fifteen Hundred Years of Europe" [Cuneo-Henneberry company], in which he deals with European history in the large, including that of his own nation.

$4,942,277 OF PRINGLE STOCK IS "WORTHLESS"

On the basis of the par value of the holdings of the late Robert Pringle, board of trade operator who died Feb. 11, 1919, his estate is given a value of $6,107,466 in an inventory approved yesterday by Paul Corkell, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner. Doubtful and worthless stock, bonds, and notes, however, will bring the net value of the estate to between $400,000 and $500,000, it is said.

The par value of stock held by Mr. Pringle which is now considered worthless is $4,942,277, consisting largely of mining stock. "Doubtful" notes and stock have a par value of $230,900, and "desperate" notes and bonds are listed at $106,718.

Among the assets which are listed as good is $256,692 in cash which has come into the possession of the executors since Mr. Pringle's death; $160,000 worth of stock, and $20,750 worth of Liberty bonds of the second, third, and fourth issues.

The bulk of Mr. Pringle's estate was willed to relatives. The friendship which existed for many years between Mr. Pringle and Frank W. Teeple was perpetuated in their wills. The former left Mr. Teeple $25,000 and the latter, dying two weeks later, left all his household furnishings to his friend.

HAYWOOD AND 36 OTHER WOBBLIES ARE INDICTED

Defendants Seized as They Attend Court.

Indictments against thirty-seven members of the I. W. W. were returned secretly yesterday before Chief Justice Robert E. Crowe in the Criminal court. The secret action allowed the "wobblies" to be taken into custody when they appeared at 10 o'clock in Judge Hugo Pam's court for preliminary hearings on the warrants sworn out by the state's attorney when he first began his drive against the "Reds."

The men were held in an anteroom of the court until they could notify their bondsmen to appear and sign new bonds.

Chief among those indicted are "Big Bill" Haywood and Thomas Whitehead, secretary of the organization Haywood was allowed to leave to look up William Bross Lloyd, who signed his bond.

The Men Indicted.

The complete list of those indicated follows:

Ernest Holman.	James King.
John Jackson.	Kalman Kiss.
Alex Koehler.	William Landgraf.
Philip Kurinsky.	Vladimir Lossieff.
Charles H. Miller.	Dullo Murl.
Fred Nelson.	Charles Plahn.
Antonio Presi.	Elmer Rumbaugh.
Abe Bloom.	Fred Bowerman.
Philip Berton.	Carl Brauckmiller.
Henry Bradley.	George Bradley.
James Crowley.	Donald M. Crocker.
Marcus Garvey.	Julius Goebel.
Nicholas Conrad.	F. M. Goodell.
Robert Hardeon.	William D. Haywood.
I. C. Russell.	John Sandgren.
Anson E. Soper.	Rosco T. Sims.
Fred Smith.	George Speed.
Harvey Tibbs.	Harold L. Varney.
Thomas Whitehead.

Speed is chairman of the executive committee and Miller, Nelson, and the Bradleys are members of the committee. Whitehead succeeded Haywood as secretary when the latter was tried in the federal court.

Rosco Sims, one of those indicted, is said to be the leader in the colored I. W. W. Sims is a janitor in the city hall.

12 Cases Dismissed.

The state dismissed entirely the cases as to the following persons: S. Rudick, S. Bludin, Lee Green, Fred Tiffany, Leo Waukulsky, Edward Rusich, Fred Rusich, James Kramer, John Yurkawich, Leo Muxen, Fred Lewis, and George Andreytchine.

The state's attorney's office also announced that John Ballan of Boston, a member of the national executive board of the Communist Labor party, entered a plea of guilty in Boston Friday, where he answered to a charge similar to the one made against him in Chicago.

MAYOR FAVORS PRACTICAL TEST OF MONORAIL

Five Mile Line to the Loop May Be Built.

Mayor Thompson looks with favor on the monorail rapid transit plan presented to the city traction commission Friday by F. D. Flint, president of the National Suspended Monorail company.

The engineer or engineers to be recommended by the commission and selected by the mayor to work out his municipal ownership scheme will be favorable to the trial of the monorail plan, it became known yesterday.

Two members of the mayor's commission said yesterday that they favor giving the system a trial by building five or ten miles of it leading to the loop.

Means 5 Cent Fare.

"The monorail proposition is something we have had up our sleeves for a long time," said the mayor. "I had a model of the plan demonstrated to me two months ago and it has many excellent features.

"The thing about it that makes a big hit with me is that there seems little doubt that it could be operated on a 5 cent fare.

"I have talked to many persons familiar with the monorail system in Berlin. They tell me it has given excellent results there. Before going on record as in favor of the plan, however, I would want to see it in actual operation."

The mayor recounted Mr. Flint's arguments to the traction board that the system is cheaper, safer, and faster than either surface or elevated transportation.

Think Approval Trick.

Several aldermen expressed their belief that the attitude of the mayor and his friends "is merely a feint to bring the surface lines to time." It is true that Chairman Ettelson and his associates point out that the suspended monorail system could be operated over the surface lines and in competition with them.

"It is one of the best propositions I have heard of," said Commissioner Charles R. Francis.

"It has some excellent features," said Ald. John P. Garner, another member of the mayor's commission.

The commission requests that all persons familiar with the operation of the monorail system in Berlin communicate with William D. McJunkin, secretary of the commission. It is probable they will be asked to appear and give their impressions of the scheme.

$100 OFFERED FOR BEST SOLUTION OF TRAFFIC PROBLEM

AN offer of $100 has been made by the Chicago Motor Safety league for the best suggestion for a solution of Chicago's traffic problems, it was announced last night by Judge John Stelk, who was judge of the "speeders'" court. He created the safety organization in an effort to reduce the reckless maiming and killing of persons in motor accidents and establish a modern traffic system.

What sort of system would be feasible to supplant the whistle signal system now in use by the crossing police?

What can be done to avoid the troublesome congestion that daily impedes the movement of traffic in downtown streets, costing a loss of thousands of dollars in money to both motorists and pedestrians?

What is your idea of a plan to overhaul the present traffic system in order to bring it up to the highest degree of efficiency and at the same time obviate danger to human life?

These are the questions the Motor Safety league wants answered.

Judge Stelk also wants the opinion of the tenants of downtown buildings and traffic policemen on the whistling system.

"It is a poor way of directing traffic," he said. "It's noisy and by the average motorist or pedestrian it is about as well understood as a Chinese puzzle. Who knows and who can take time to study the meaning of those whistles?"

Your opinion should be written as briefly as possible and mailed to the Chicago Motor Safety league, 828 Reaper building.

INKS SAYS U. S. TRIES TO MAKE IRENE JEALOUS

Mr. Inks, who writes his given name Merl, who spells it Merle, who is listed in the rogues' gallery as Murl, and whose friends call him Merrill, desires to enter a sweeping denial of any and all charges of whatever kind against himself and Miss Irene Elizabeth McAuliff, the defaulting postmistress of Franklin Park.

From his suite in the "Hotel Davies" at 440 North Dearborn street, Mr. Inks told a TRIBUNE reporter yesterday that his relations with Miss McAuliff were "purely platonic," both in and out of the city. It must be remembered that Mr. Inks is a married man.

Mr. Inks further stated that jealous friends are trying to "start something," does not believe that Irene stole $13,000 of postal funds, and declares that government authorities are trying to make her jealous of him.

"I never knew that there was any money taken from the postoffice and I don't believe Irene took it, for a postoffice that size would not handle that amount," Mr. Inks said. "I had some business in other cities and Irene wanted to make a trip and she just came along.

"She paid her own expenses, railroad fare, meals, berths and everything else all the time we were gone. She had her own berth and own room all the time.

Inks said he is going to marry Irene when he gets a divorce from his wife.

BUY ROUND TRIP ON "L" AND SAVE YOURSELF 1 CENT

A financial boon was conferred upon the commuter at midnight by the elevated railroads, the commuter being advantaged to the extent of 5 mills a ride if he purchased sufficient rides.

Through an order issued by the public utilities commission you can now enjoy two rides for 15 cents instead of 16. But to take advantage of the bargain rate you have to buy two tickets at a time. Otherwise, you pay the old price, 8 cents a ride.

Announcement is made that the new price is not so much to give a reduction, but, rather, a means of speeding up the handling of crowds by lessening the delay at ticket windows. It has been found that the handling of pennies adds to the congestion in the rush hours.

Evanston is the only place to enjoy a real reduction. The fare to and from the loop is cut from 14 to 12 cents.

Church Celebrates Swedenborg's Birthday

The anniversary of the birth of Emmanuel Swedenborg, Jan. 29, 1688, was celebrated Thursday by the Immanuel Church of the New Jerusalem in Glen View, Ill. A banquet was given at "the park," and Gilbert H. Smith gave a brief biography of Swedenborg with an address on the great Swedish leader's place in scientific and religious thought.

"EDISON CLUB" PUTS DEMOCRACY INTO INDUSTRY

Utility Concern Solves Relationship Question.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Here's a club of 3,000 members, ranging from office boys to department heads, which appears to be something of a guide post to democracy in industry. It has been formed in one of the largest utility concerns, the Commonwealth-Edison company, and it seems to answer some of the questions with which the business and industrial world is wrestling in its search for closer contacts and better relationships.

The "Edison club" was organized to get the employés together, to promote their acquaintance, to develop the human side of the establishment. It is a social activity carried into industry. It holds socials, parties, dances and receptions, and its success as a "get together" movement already leads the Commonwealth officials to rank is as the best and most important of the "welfare" activities, to use a term which nobody likes but for which no one has yet produced a synonym. What the "Edison club" appears to be doing is to develop solidarity in an industrial family.

Run by Employés.

The secret of its success is that it is run by the employés themselves. Its popularity is shown by the fact that of some 5,000 employés, 3,000 have joined. At Thanksgiving time a party was held at the Congress, and the attendance was so great that it had to run double shift, on two nights. At Christmas the club hired Medinah temple, and filled it with members and their families. About 6,000 attended that little party.

This week for convenience the club held its party in three sections, each side of the city having its blowout on separate nights. As a general rule there are a few short remarks, the shorter the better, then light refreshments, dancing, and a world of "mixing." All the high officials of the company are on hand if possible, and Bill Smith, the stoker, and Jim Brown, the engineer, have a chance to get acquainted with the heads, from the president down.

Aid to Matrimony.

In some respects the club has been more successful than intended. Already many marriages have occurred between employés who first met through the club. One or two of the higher officials, in fact, have married employés they met through the social activities of the club.

In this respect the effect has not been to reduce the shifting of labor, which, of course, is one thing sought in every betterment enterprise. And it tends to discount somewhat some of the theories of the ouija board economists concerning "the fierce desire for economic independence which is back of the feminine invasion of employment," and the other favorite theory of the pipe dreamers of a "neuter-sex" as the resultant of woman's appearance in industry.

To the observer, the "Edison club" gets its popularity from the fact that it steers clear of the patronage and paternalism on which many a scheme has gone to wreck. The independent American worker is fiercely resentful of paternalism, and it is always the muffled drums for any plan launched by the "Let a Little Sunshine In" society which is always strong for "brightening up the lot of the worker." Industrial democracy cannot be "wished" on anybody, as any wise employer knows, but it can be evolved from within the working force itself. And that is what happened in the case of the "Edison club."

Behind it, too, is a background of other activities by the company, all set in motion for the simple purpose of playing up the human side of business and bringing about co-operation, which is the real keynote of the day.

Has Many Auxiliaries.

There is a symphony orchestra of one hundred musicians with one of the largest musical libraries in the city, which through its public appearances has been termed by critics the largest and finest orchestra supported by any corporation in the country. There is an auxiliary orchestra for musicians not skilled enough for the large one. The choral society, a mixed chorus of one hundred voices, and the Players' club, a dramatic organization, are all activities valued by the Commonwealth for the promotion of institutional spirit.

Another policy with the company is the encouragement of sports and health giving recreation. The employés have formed athletic organizations of many kinds, bowling and baseball leagues, golf, rifle and tennis clubs, hold matches throughout the season, followed by tournaments. The big event is the annual company field day, picnic and outing given under the auspices of the Edison club.

Ten years ago the directors established an employés savings fund. Any employé of one year's service may pay in 3 or 5 per cent of his salary. The plan is on five year periods. Interest at 6 per cent, compounded semi-annually, is paid, and at the end of the period the subscriber may take the full amount in cash or in capital stock at par. About 2,500 employés are in the fund.

A service annuity system went into effect eight years ago. Briefly, it provides that any employé at 60 may retire on pension if he has served fifteen years. At 65 he must retire on pension. The annuity is for each year of service, 1½ per cent of the average annual pay during the five years when the annuitant's pay was highest.

Have Benefit Plan.

The employés themselves have worked out a sickness and accident disability benefit system. Of the fund, the employés contribute one-half and the company one-half. Then, there are rewards for suggestions, an institute that gives special educational courses, a company library, and a special organization, the Electra, for the women employés. These, 800 in number, in reality operate as an industrial council, in a measure for or to it are referred matters concerning the working conditions of the women employés.

But of all the activities, the most productive in contentment, good feeling and coöperation is the Edison club.

AN INTERESTING EXHIBIT

In the observance of our 83rd Business Birthday, we have gone to considerable pains and expense to make this occasion both interesting and instructive.

This business was established February, 1837, a month before the city of Chicago was granted a charter (March 4th, 1837) and is today Chicago's oldest business house.

We are greatly indebted to many of our friends, and a number of Eastern manufacturers for their contributions to this most interesting Exhibit comprising Relics, Heirlooms, and Antiques in Jewelry, Watches, Clocks, Silverware and kindred lines, some of which antedate Chicago, and which are considered priceless by their owners.

Without a thought of your buying, we cordially invite--and will greatly appreciate your visit on this occasion.

Attention is also directed to the sixteen Paintings of "Early Scenes in Chicago" and the plastic showing a birds-eye view of "Chicago in 1837" in our display windows.

$160,000,000 IS TRANSFERRED BY SCRATCH OF PEN

Smietanka Turns Over Office to Mager.

Former Collector of Internal Revenue Julius E. Smietanka placed his signature to his final voucher last night and turned over $162,000,000 worth of tangible government property to Harry W. Mager, the new department chief.

The new collector will formally take over the revenue offices tomorrow morning when it is planned to call several hundred of Uncle Sam's deputies and office employés to a "hail and farewell" conference. Both revenue men declared yesterday after going over the final auditors' reports that the big department is "ship shape," and predicted that a national record will be hung up in Chicago this year in the collection of income taxes.

Drops All Liquor Work.

In signing over the department Collector Smietanka transferred $12,000,000 worth of liquor and tobacco tax stamps, together with all outstanding tax collection lists, special tax stamps and department equipment. It was said that more than $20,000,000 in outstanding taxes still rests on government books in Chicago, an amount declared to be unusually small.

The Chicago office recently took over jurisdiction of the old Peoria district, assuming the responsibility of collecting its outstanding taxes.

With the closing of the old régime the internal revenue department washes its hands of activities in the liquor field. Collector Mager expects to turn over all barleycorn records to Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, district prohibition agent.

Thanks Public for Help.

"I expect to keep in close touch with the revenue office until the present income tax rush is over," said the retiring collector, "but as far as official responsibility is concerned, it has ended with me tonight. The public of the Chicago district has made it possible for us to succeed in working out this untried and complicated system of taxation, and I cannot be too hearty in my thanks to Chicago business men and citizens generally who gave us their patriotic assistance in putting the income tax plan over."

"We'll be on the job Monday," said Collector Mager simply. "There's a big job to be done."

Mr. Smietanka will resume law practice.

JUDGE OLSON SEES BIG SUCCESS FOR AUGUSTANA FUND

Judge Harry Olson, who is chairman of the Augustana hospital campaign, to be waged by 1,500 workers during ten days, Feb. 16 to 26, announced "that never in the history of Augustana hospital, since 1882, or thirty-eight years of existence, has it ever solicited systematically from the public of Chicago a cent for maintenance or for the building and equipment."

Judge Olson also says that because of this the proposed campaign to raise $700,000 for Augustana hospital is meeting with the finest kind of reception from the Chicago citizens. Mrs. Martin Nelson of Oak Park is taking a prominent part in the preparations for the campaign.

Dog to Aid Benefit Show for Hungarian Children

A prize chow dog will be the principal distributor of programs at the special matinée of "A Voice in the Dark," which will be played at the Woods theater a week from today. The matinee is given for the benefit of the American relief committee fund for Hungarian sufferers. This fund will feed and clothe 100,000 starving children in Hungary. Miss Elizabeth Fellegi, Miss Margaret Fellegi, Miss Lillian Blunt, Miss Eileen Newhauser, Miss Marion Herst, Miss Anna Guttman, Miss Ruth Newman, Miss Mildred Gessler, and Miss Edna Hathaway will also distribute programs.

Love Only Nuptial Motive, R. G. Young Answers Suit

A motive that was "one of love and esteem for each other" is given by Robert Gordon Young, Tennessee horse dealer, for his marriage with Anne Elizabeth Ebert. Young, through his attorneys, filed an answer yesterday to a bill to annul his marriage with Miss Ebert. Denials of all charges made against him are contained in his answer, especially stressing the allegations that the girl was not 18 years of age, that the parents of Miss Ebert had not consented to the affair, and that his wife had been intimidated. The bill for annulment was brought by the girl's father, George T. Alter of Cincinnati.

FORMER HEAD OF U. S. NARCOTIC BUREAU INDICTED

W. H. Sage Is Named as Bribe Taker in Bill.

William H. Sage, former head of the Chicago narcotic bureau of the internal revenue department, whose "dope" prescription activities have been twice aired in probes by Judge Landis, was indicted for bribery yesterday by the federal grand jury before Judge Carpenter. Sixteen others, including several women and a number of Chinese, were also indicted for violation of the Harrison anti-narcotic law.

Based on Confession.

The indictment of "Doc" Sage is based chiefly on a confession made by Dr. Arthur L. Blunt, now serving a penal sentence in the Leavenworth penitentiary. A true bill, naming Dr. Joseph A. Greaves and Hyman Cohen, manager of the William H. Sage Drug company, at 8450 West Harrison street, charging them with prescribing and selling drugs in violation of the law, also was voted by the grand jury.

Nine Charges Made.

There are nine separate counts in the indictment against Sage. First, he is accused of having received $100 as a bribe from Dr. Blunt while holding government office on Feb. 8. It is also alleged he received $50 from Dr. Blunt on April 28, 1917; $50 on May 4, 1917; $100 on May 11, 1917, and $100 on May 15, 1917.

Counts 6, 7, 8, and 9 charge him with receiving sums from Dr. Greaves for the suppression of investigations into the filling of drug prescriptions. Sage is accused of having made the first deal with Dr. Greaves in September, 1918, for a consideration of $100. Dr. Greaves is alleged to have paid him $50 on Jan. 15, 1918; $100 on Feb. 10, and $25 on March 16, 1919.

J. B. Gone to Slaughter, Christen Ship with Water

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 31.—Water was used in the christening of the 7,800 ton cargo carrier Blue Triangle, named in honor of the work of the Young Women's Christian association, which was launched at Hog island yesterday. Mrs. James Cushman, president of the National War Works council, was the sponsor. This was the first launching at which champagne was not used.

WIFE WHO LACKED "PEP" DIVORCES ARMY CAPTAIN

Possibly the army life in Texas and France caused Capt. George Henry Gould, 149th Field Artillery, to crave the company of youth and beauty. According to Mrs. Mary Loretta Gould, 4120 North Cicero avenue, who was granted a decree of divorce yesterday by Judge Rush, her husband considered that she lacked "pep" and was too old and so he transferred his affections to various younger members of the fair sex.

Two women were named in Mrs. Gould's bill for divorce; one of them, Beatrice Kelley of San Antonio, Tex. won the captain's heart when he was on duty along the Mexican border during the summer of 1916. Various letters from Beatrice were offered as evidence.

Another incident mentioned occurred in Providence, R. I., in August, 1918. Mary Gould, the wife of the captain's brother, was named.

Capt. Gould, who is 45 years old and a student of Northwestern university, was wounded at Luneville, France.

PUBLIC BE DUMB, CAPITAL-LABOR VIEW, IS OPINION

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—Formulation of a final plan for settlement of industrial disputes, based on the great volume of criticism and opinion evoked by the tentative plan of regional adjustment boards announced six weeks ago, will be taken up by the second industrial conference next week. Chairman Stanley B. King said today that practically all executive session hearings had been completed

The most complete disapproval of the tentative plan announced by the conference, Mr. King said, had come from Samuel Gompers, as the representative of organized labor in America, and from the "president of one of the biggest employers' associations in the country," whose name he withheld. As viewed by members of the conference, the attitude signified by the opinions of these two men, he said, was that "any conflict of interests now existing between capital and labor is a private fight with which the government properly has nothing to do."

Now Let Us Add Alaska to List of Winter Resorts

What ho, vacation editor! Get our your files and add Alaska to the list of winter resorts. Read this letter from Paul Buckley, United States marshal at Unalaska, Aleutian Islands, to his mother, Mrs. H. T. Buckley, 5338 Cornell avenue:

"We are having a very open winter, with no snow on the ground so far, and in the snapshot I am sending you, taken this month [December], you will notice that the flowers in my front yard are still blooming. I wish you could see my house plants. I have about a dozen pots of roses, geraniums, lilies, ferns, etc.

"This is not the Alaska that people usually have an impression of. They think it is all zero weather and icebergs, but the Japan current touches here in the Pacific ocean."

RECEIVES $5,000 ALIMONY.

An alimony settlement of $5,000 was approved yesterday by Judge Foell in awarding Mrs. Theresa G. Hinrichs, 6446 Greenview avenue, a decree for divorce from Harma E. Hinrichs on a charge of infidelity.

STONE, CHIEF OF BROTHERHOOD, FOR PRESIDENT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Warren S. Stone, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and president of the Plumb Plan league, which advocates nationalization of the railroads, is now being talked of here as a presidential possibility on the Labor party ticket or a government ownership party in a nonpartisan movement supported by liberals, coöperative farmers, and labor leaders.

The chief planks in the platform would declare for government control of the railroads and announce a program to reduce the cost of living through coöperative dealing between producer and consumer.

The boom for Stone is originating in the northwest and middle west, whence letters have come to Washington recently urging agitation in his behalf.

The Plumb Plan league has pledged itself to carry the fight against return of the railroads into politics.

CHICAGO'S NIGHT HIGH SCHOOLS HELP THOUSANDS

Workers Bring Problems of Day to Classes.

BY EYE WITNESS.

That which our school courses leave almost entirely out, we find to be that which most nearly concerns the business of life. All our industries would cease were it not for the information which men begin to acquire as they best may after their education is said to be finished. And were it not for this information, that has been from age to age accumulated and spread by unofficial means, these industries would never have existed. The vital knowledge, which now underlies our whole existence, is a knowledge that has got itself taught in nooks and corners, while the ordained agencies for teaching have been mumbling little else but dead formulas.

HERBERT SPENCER.

THE MARVELOUS ADVANCE.

Those words were written nearly sixty years ago.

Just half a century passed before the Chicago public school system launched its comprehensive and intensive a program of practical education that no man, woman, or child in the community, however poor, however driven by the task of wage earning, could say that the opportunity for learning things that would obtain him better wages and a fuller life was denied him by the community.

Under the present workings, for example, of the evening technical high school system of Chicago the young Chicagoan serving his apprenticeship in an architect's office can bring his problems of the day—stair building, bay windows, stress and strain—what you like—to the free night class in architecture in some convenient school building and there discuss them with the pupils and under the guidance of the teacher.

Stimulating and Profitable.

What could be more stimulating, what more profitable, what more vitally a part of the things that come home to men's daily business and bosoms!

Ten years of experiments in courses and methods have been accompanied by a heartening response from those to benefit whom the experiments were made.

Ten years ago fewer than 300 persons were taking the course in mechanical drawing in the evening high schools; today nearly 1,200 are taking it. Ten years ago seventy-six were taking Spanish; now 389 are taking it. They are those who are qualifying in a spacious way for commercial life. Their work interlocks with their culture. They are equipping themselves to "get the money" and simultaneously they are opening to themselves the resplendent treasures of Calderon and Cervantes and De la Vega and Echegaray and Benevente.

Some of the courses not only lead to wage earning, but wage earning is also a part of them. The theory of salesmanship, for instance, is taught in the day as well as the evening technical high schools, and on Saturdays practical work is done in downtown stores at a wage of $2 a day, plus a recent advance.

Many Ramifications.

The general principle underlying the work done in the technical high schools has numerous ramifications. To describe them would overload an article intended to give merely a glimpse. One of these ramifications is a five months' intensive course in business for high school graduates.

Having completed that course, their equipment enables them to apply themselves with a good measure of confidence to some pretty large problems in commerce and administration.

So farseeing a business man as Charles A. Stevens told Supt. Mortenson that he takes into his employ every one of these young people he can get.

Indeed, there is hardly a department of civic activity which the business men of Chicago could investigate, or cooperate with, with greater advantage to themselves and their establishments, than this department of day and night technical education in the common schools. Mr. Mortenson assures THE TRIBUNE that he welcomes such cooperation.

Comparison of Subjects.

A comparison of the relative popularity of the subjects taught is instructive. It provides a living picture of the intentions and aspirations of the best elements in the oncoming generation of wage and salary earners—the element that is wishful to take something to its chosen calling instead of demanding that the calling, or the job, or the position, shall give everything. The school authorities keep pretty accurate account of the relative popularity of the courses. Under the head of "very popular" come auto engineering, comptometer work (that is, instruction in the use of adding machines and such devices), electricity, and sheet metal work. Auto engineering is popular among the women, even, and you may see a dozen of them at work in their overalls in one class any evening.

How electricity gains in popularity is indicated by the fact that more than eight times as many are taking it now as took it ten years ago. The number has risen from 96 to 789.

Sheet Metal Work Popular.

Mr. Mortenson told me sheet metal work is very popular "because it gives an opportunity to those who find themselves in a blind alley and who want to get into a real trade." The superintendent added, "It gives them a chance to get out of the plodder class." I did not understand why this should be especially true of that trade, but I suppose a sheet metal worker or a technical teacher could tell you.

The course in typewriter repair was added last year, and is popular. Its purpose is to enable the typist to make all minor and some major repairs, thus saving him or her the time lost in waiting for the company's mechanician to come around. It also teaches care of the machine—respect for an intricate piece of mechanism.

Wireless is the most promising of the subjects recently added to the curriculum, "partly," said Mr. Mortenson, "because it sets for the students a kind of work that requires them to do for themselves. Besides, it opens to them a new world." The largest classes in wireless telegraphy are at the Lane high school, Sedgwick and Division streets, a neighborhood of small property owners.

In the weaving classes the results have been very gratifying. Beautiful work has been done in tapestries, rugs, table covers and center pieces. The pupils provide their own materials and the finished product is theirs.

The Advertising Course.

For the advertising course Mr. Mortenson has been able to get teachers who have had ample experience in copy-writing and who can show you how to get at the high spots in proclaiming a product and what sentiment to create to persuade the people to buy it. There is work in illustration and catch phrases. Schurz evening high school on the northwest side has a very good class in advertising. Some pupils take salesmanship one night and advertising the next.

You may have noticed that public speaking was in the list of courses listed in the preceding article. That does not mean one of those old-fashioned absurdities in the way of elocution. All that has been toned down. For it has been substituted a plain, practical training intended to give a man some on-the-square platform potency and the knack of thinking on his feet.

A Cultured Medium.

There is considerable debating, discussion of processes, and descriptive narration in connection with this course. It is not "piece-speaking." The course in dramatics, too, is made rather a cultured medium than, as in the old days, an excuse for showing off.

The pupils consider it a part of their training in English. They paint the scenes and make the costumes, thus gaining instruction in handicraft as well as in literature. A standard play is selected with the teachers counsel and a semester's work is given to its preparation, the teacher still advising. The public performance is given at an admittance fee of a few cents. This is rather a popular course.

But this article has already overrun the schedule. It could be twice as long and not exhaust the store of instructive side lights and stimulating trains of thought which brief observation of the system of evening instruction in Chicago public schools discloses and suggests.

The Association of Commerce is ever on the lookout for important men and interesting men, who are doing some thing in the work, to talk to its members at the association luncheons. It could not do better for itself, and for a good cause, than get Mr. Mortenson and some of his colleagues together for one of those occasions and give heed to what they can impart on this valuable work.

CHICAGO WOMAN APPOINTED TO FEDERAL OFFICE

MRS. KELLOGG FAIRBANK.
[Photo by Lewis-Smith.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank of Chicago, long a champion of woman suffrage and interested in governmental affairs generally, is to be named in a few days a member of the United States easy commission. The commission already has a woman member, Mrs. Beverly Mumford of Virginia.

"I don't know whether I shall accept the offer or not," Mrs. Fairbank said last night. "I'll have to find out what an assay commission is first."

JOHN C. NEELY, FINANCIER, IS DEAD, AGED 79

John Chamberlin Neely, native Illinoisan and financier, died last night at his home, 4929 Greenwood avenue. He is survived by two sons, John Crosby Neely and Harry Blair Neely.

Mr. Neely was 79 years old. He was born at Belvidere. He served in the civil war, first as captain of Battery I, 1st Illinois artillery, and then as a member of Gen. Sherman's staff. He was with the Army of the Tennessee.

In 1869, he engaged in the banking business here. He was appointed cashier of the Merchants National bank in 1870, a year before the fire. He held that position for a number of years. In 1902, he became secretary of the Corn Exchange National bank, a position he held until 1913, when he retired. He was also a director of the Guarantee Company of North America.

He was a member of the Union league, Chicago Athletic, Bankers, Kenwood, Midlothian, and the South Shore Country clubs. He was a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

SWITCHMAN KILLED BY ENGINE.

John C. Woodall, Illinois Central switchman, living at 6075 Kenwood avenue, was killed last night at Eighth street, while shunting freight cars.

LAUTERJUNG—Herman Lauterjung—In sacred tribute of love and remembrance of our dearly beloved husband and father, who left us so suddenly one year ago today, Feb. 1, 1919.

O, Herman, from your heavenly home, where sorrow ne'er can dwell,
Watch o'er your wife and little children whom on earth you loved so well.
May you guide their little footsteps on this cold and dreary shore
Till you meet them at last where Jesus dwells, united evermore.
May God grant him eternal rest.
FROM YOUR HEARTBROKEN WIFE AND BABIES.

LEVIN—In sad and loving remembrance of Sarah Levin, nee Willer, beloved wife of Samuel H., fond mother of Theodore, Ralph and Lewis; daughter of Julius Willer and late Fanny Willer; sister of Ella, Anna Altman, Ray and Alice, who passed away Feb. 1, 1919.

MATULIS—In sad and loving memory of Corp. Casimer J. Matulis, Co. C, 2d field battalion, signal corps, died in Meves, France, one year ago, Feb. 5. Memorial high mass at St. Anthony's church, Feb. 5.

He left his home in perfect health,
He looked so young and brave;
We little thought how soon he'd be Laid in a soldier's grave.

SORENSEN—Henrietta Marie Sorensen. In sad but loving remembrance of our dear mother, who departed this life one year ago today, Feb. 1, 1919.

One year has passed since that sad day
When one we loved was called away.
God took her home; it was his will.
But in our hearts she is living still.
Rest in peace, mother, we ask in Jesus' name. YOUR LONESOME CHILDREN.

TOOMEY—Helen Toomey, nee Reilly. In fond and loving remembrance of our dear sister's twenty-sixth birthday, Feb. 1, 1920. High mass will be celebrated at St. Jarlath's church Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock. Gone but never to be forgotten. By her devoted sisters, JO., ETT, AND GERT.

TRACY—Hobart Leslie Tracy. In loving memory of our darling who passed away two years ago today.

We loved him, O no tongue can tell
How much we loved him and how well.

Fortune Waits D. B. Lawlor, Missing for Nine Years

Daniel B. Lawlor, at one time a checker in coal and lumber yards in Cincinnati, who has been among the missing for nine years, and is now supposed to be in Chicago, has a comfortable sum of money awaiting him.

Search has been instituted in Chicago for Lawlor at the instigation of Brig. David Dunham, in charge of the Salvation Army work in Cincinnati.

Lawlor, now about sixty years old, had numerous friends in Cincinnati and none claimed to have heard from him after his arrival in Chicago. Lawlor, it is said, will not have to bother about the high cost of living for a while, after getting in touch with the Salvation Army in Cincinnati.

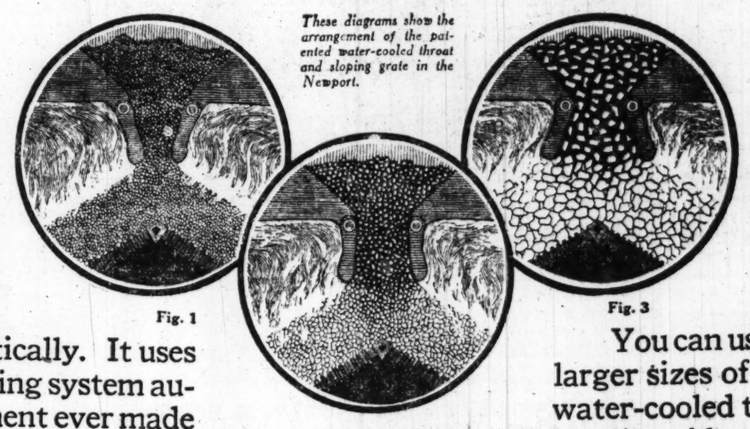
Automatic Heat

from the Newport Boiler saves hours of time and tons of coal



These diagrams show the arrangement of the patented water-cooled throat and sloping grate in the Newport.

Fig. 1 Fig. 2 Fig. 3

Fig. 1 shows the throat in position for using pea or buckwheat fuel. Note the thin fuel bed. Fig. 2 shows the throat adjusted for larger sizes of coal, automatically giving a greater fuel bed depth. In Fig. 3 the throat is extended for still larger sizes of fuel. The fuel bed depth is again automatically increased. In all positions the fuel bed is always uniform. Coal will not heap. No other boiler uses or can use this system. It is a patented Newport feature.

HERE is a heater that requires no coaling for from two to ten days—because the fuel feed is automatic. It keeps any home, from the smallest bungalow to the largest residence, at an even temperature, day after day, with practically no attention. All drafts and dampers are controlled automatically. It uses any kind of fuel and makes any heating system automatic. It is the greatest advancement ever made in heating—the Newport Automatic Feed Boiler.

You never throw coal on a Newport fire. Once in two to ten days depending on the weather you fill the double capacity magazine. Gravity does the rest. The fuel feeds automatically, gradually, and evenly to the patented, sloping grate—the Newport is its own fireman.

And coal never heaps on the Newport sloping grate. The fuel bed is always of uniform thickness—a basic principle for securing the maximum heat energy from the fuel.

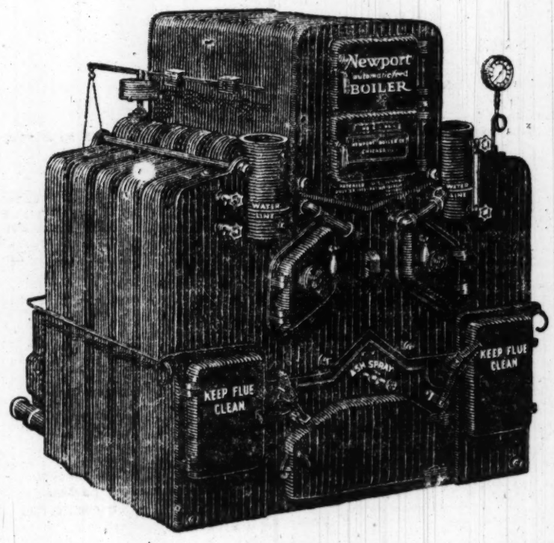
The United States Geological Survey says: "The hand firing of plain furnaces violates all the principles laid down for securing good combustion."—Bulletin No. 334. If coal is supplied in large quantities at long intervals, as in old-style boilers, great quantities of combustible gases are generated which pass out through the chimney unburned.

Then, too, in the Newport the gases come in direct contact with the greatest possible area of heat-absorbing surfaces. The gases travel twice the length of the boiler—no heat energy is wasted up the chimney.

And in this advanced-type boiler a patented, combined check and draft is regulated automatically. Draft changes are gradual. No overheating, no underheating. Any desired temperature is maintained by a sensitive automatic regulator. Automatic heat from the Newport is always steady and of an even temperature.

You can use the small, cheap sizes as well as the larger sizes of fuel in the Newport. The patented water-cooled throat, through which the fuel feeds, is adjustable. This permits the use of practically all sizes of fuel. As this throat is adjusted to feed larger fuel the fuel bed becomes of the proper thickness for the size being used—a fundamental law of good combustion.

The Newport boiler meets every heating requirement because engineering skill has made every detail in its design serve a scientific, practical purpose. It has been tested and tried for years in small bungalows, in the largest residences, in business and public buildings, under government fuel restrictions—under ALL conditions—and has established a wonderful record as a saver of time and a saver of fuel.



If, as the United States Geological Survey says, the personal element in firing is the greatest hindrance in obtaining perfect combustion; the Newport Automatic Feed Boiler ranks among the great engineering achievements of the age and deserves your closest investigation.

Ask any reputable architect or heating engineer, and in the meantime write for a complete analysis of how the Newport gives you Automatic Heat and why it saves hours of time and tons of coal, or call at our display rooms.

CHAMPION JACK DEMPSEY NOT OVERWORKED AS LABOR SCOUT

Philadelphia, Pa. Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Despite his reported position as a labor scout at the Sun Shipbuilding company's plant at Chester during the warring months of the world war, Jack Dempsey's most strenuous duties in connection with scouting for workmen consisted in signing the payroll at the end of each week.

Official announcement of Dempsey's newly found job, which automatically placed him in the exempt class, came when the "work or fight" edict of the war department sent ball players, boxers, and actors scurrying for the cover of the shipyards, where they secured high salaried positions through influential friends.

Sponsor for Champion Jack.

James F. Dougherty, Leiperville fight promoter, was Dempsey's particular sponsor. Dempsey was scheduled to go to the coast to fight the rotund Willie Meehan when he was announced as a fullfledged labor scout. Cody Drennan, head of the labor bureau of the Chester plant, is the man who is alleged to have offered the position to Dempsey.

Dempsey, with Manager Jack Kearns, was then stopping with Dougherty, who was a great admirer of the heavyweight champion. In September, 1918, announcement of Dempsey's new position was made and numerous pictures showing the pugilist at his hard work as a labor seeker were taken.

Those Unfortunate Shoes.

Photographs showing Dempsey as a riveter were taken, but in the picture, depicting him as a laborer, Dempsey made the tactical error of wearing overalls that were not quite long enough, a result, the novel spectacle of a riveter working in spick and span cloth top shoes, was placed before the public view.

Dempsey, when first engaged by the Chester ship plant, was waiting to box Jess Willard in Pennsylvania for a war charity. The proposed bout fell through. Then Dempsey started west. He was scheduled to go to the coast to enlist shipyard workers for the Delaware River plant, but the real purpose of the trip, as later revealed, was to box Willie Meehan.

Ring Activity Not Hampered.

Jack's duties as labor scout did not interfere with his fighting schedule. On Nov. 7, while still employed as a labor scout, Dempsey fought Battling Levinsky in the Olympia club in Philadelphia. That night a slacker raid was made by the department of justice agents on the fight club. A great number of the fans were unable to produce their registration and classification cards and were promptly taken into custody. One boxer was placed under surveillance.

Dempsey trained for this fight at Dougherty's Leiperville saloon. Hundreds of admiring shipworkers daily viewed the training stunts of the future heavyweight champion and Dempsey daily went through a long handshaking program. His activities as a labor scout did not in any way interfere with his training program and he blithely asserted that "his hardest work was to sign the pay roll."

Legion Attacks War Record.

This episode in Dempsey's career has been the subject of attack by several posts of the American Legion, who have seized on the lack of any war record by the "fighting champion of the world" as a basis of severe criticism.

However, in the face of these attacks, Dougherty has come to his defense.

"Dempsey's case," he asserted, "was like that of thousands. Had the war lasted a couple of months longer he would have been in the service. His case was wholly in the hands of the draft board at San Francisco. His wife and family entitled him to certain classification and he got it."

Dougherty declared that the attacks were being furthered by Dempsey's enemies, who were using the American Legion as a catspaw.

Offers to Raise Funds.

"I also want to say a word about Dempsey working for the shipyards," he continued. "A committee of patriotic men headed by Commander Payne, arranged a meeting between Jess Willard and Dempsey at the Philadelphia ball park. This was to have been in the interest of the Liberty loan drive and the receipts were to be turned over to the war fund. Dempsey was not to receive a penny for his services.

"We offered Willard, who was champion heavyweight of the world, $30,000 for his services and he rejected the proffer. While waiting for this contest to materialize, Dempsey arranged to go to the coast to fight Willie Meehan for the war fund. He was to pay the expenses of this trip out of his own pocket. Cody Drennan, head of the labor bureau of the Sun company's shipyards asked Dempsey if he would act as labor scout for the ship plant on his journey through the west.

Says Dempsey Sought Men.

"Dempsey was to enlist men for the shipyards for which Drennan was employed to get workmen. Dempsey never sought to get this work, but he was requested to do it and was engaged in getting the men for sixty days. I have the names of the men concerned to back up my statements and I have no interest in the matter except my admiration for his fighting ability."

WILL RESCIND MOVE MAKING DEMPSEY A MEMBER OF LEGION

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 31.—J. T. Lynch, commander of Gordon Barber post, American Legion, tonight announced the post will rescind its action whereby it elected Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, honorary commander and member of the post.

"After investigation I find that none but men who saw actual service during the war are eligible to the Legion. To let the resolutions electing Dempsey stand would mean we must surrender our charter," Lynch said. "Rather than do that the men, who feel that Dempsey is being unjustly criticized by other posts of the Legion, will vote to amend the resolutions to that effect."

BOXING SWINGS INTO FAVOR IN ILLINOIS CITIES

BY RAY PEARSON.

This is a story that will interest primarily the boxing fans of the state of Illinois, but in interesting them it also will interest the fans of almost every state in the country because it shows that the sport of glove wielding is on the uplift.

The reason Illinois is taken for the example is because this mid-western state came about as close to becoming a legalized boxing community as could be possible without actually accomplishing it. Both houses of the legislature passed a boxing bill, which put it up to the governor for the signature which would have made the sport a law. Gov. Lowden vetoed it, which meant its demise and gloom in the ranks of followers of pugilism.

Counteracting Influence.

One cannot question how important that veto really was. It naturally had a depressing effect, but there was a counteracting influence which also cut considerable figure, as has been demonstrated very frequently since the legalizing bill became a "dead bird." That influence, brought about by the participation of American soldiers in boxing not only in the army camps in this country but abroad as well, had its effect. That effect was a strong boost for the sport and it resulted in the killing off of much opposition which long had proved a serious obstacle.

It is quite apparent these days that boxing bouts are not frowned on as they were before the world war. The majority of the people who make up the population of this nation know something they did not know before. They know what boxing really is and many of those who know have gained that knowledge by sitting at a ringside. It seems a change of opinion has come.

Boxing by Tolerance.

But getting back to Illinois reveals the fact that sentiment in most of the communities is such that boxing shows are permitted—perhaps it might be said tolerated—but, judging by the number of fans who patronize these shows, the latter way of expressing it doesn't exactly fit. In no less than a dozen cities of considerable size in Illinois the glove wielders are permitted openly to perform in bouts under city administration control. Here are a few of the larger cities:

Springfield, Rock Island, Peoria, Aurora, La Salle, Beardstown.

That it is possible to hold well conducted boxing bouts in Springfield speaks volumes for the sport for the simple reason that Springfield is the capital of the state of Illinois. It was only a couple of weeks ago that Louis E. Hodge, a resident of Springfield, conceived the idea that properly controlled boxing shows could be held in the capital. The only way to find out definitely was to make the attempt. So Hodge inserted himself into the attempt as promoter.

Part of Gate to Charity.

But before he went ahead Hodge thought things out from almost every angle, and one of the things which impressed him was that if the fans were willing to spend their money to see the bouts, some of the coin taken in at the box office ought to go to home charities. So it was decided that 25 per cent of the receipts would go to the Associated Charities. Then the bouts were billed and the show held. There was no opposition. Everybody concerned—boxers, promoter, referee and charity—got something, for the show drew a packed house.

That show, which was the first held in Springfield for many years, was well handled, with the result that shows are now being held regularly.

In the Wake of the News

BOBSLEDDING.

(Heavy snow revives bobsledding, a winter sport almost forgotten.—News item.)

In Abilene, dear Abilene,
Fair village of the plain,
I spent my only days serene,
Unmarred by woe or pain.
'Twas there when winter snows had lit
And covered all the map
That I would get a chance to sit
On Jessie Dollar's lap.

In Abilene, fond Abilene,
Bobsledding we would go;
'Twas the divinest, finest scene
That I shall ever know.
The sleigh was full of girls and boys,
The air was full of snap
And I was full of thrills and joys
On Jessie Dollar's lap.

Four horses pulled the giant bob;
A dozen kids were in it;
Jake Jeffcoat had the driver's job,
And fun—yes, every minute!
For I was stuck on Jessie D.,
And though I was a yap,
She, also, was quite stuck on me,
Since I was on her lap.

O Abilene, sweet Abilene,
You're just an old tank town,
But you gave me a lovelier queen
Than ever wore a crown.
Would that I could but bridge the tide
That marks life's fleeting gap,
And once again bobsledding ride
On Jessie Dollar's lap!

MY JAMBOREES.

The hours I spent in taverns gay
Are now a string of memories;
I count them over almost every day,
My Jamborees, my Jamborees.

Each hour a pop, each pop a smile;
Be still, my heart in absence wrung,
I'll sip my hoardings gradually,
While many a tongue—is hung.

Old memories are yours to burn.
I'll sip my liquor from a fork;
I'll kiss each little drop
And strive at last—to learn
To kiss the cork.
WEEP HARD and kiss the cork.

DAVIS CUP MATERIAL.

Sam Hardy, nationally known tennis figure, in leaving to take a business position in New York, gave three reasons to members of the Chicago Tennis association why Chicago has produced no Davis cup material.

Hardy's three reasons were: (1) No indoor courts for practice the year 'round. (2) No clubs owning their own grounds. (3) Failure to coöperate with schools and public parks players.

The first reason still holds. The second is met by the Chicago Tennis club and South Side Tennis club, both of which have purchased sites in the last few years. Formerly when a club gave up its property to building purposes the members scattered and lost their interest or took up golf.

The local association is now giving its attention to the parks and smaller clubs for promising material. Comet Maurice McLoughlin, Billy Johnston, the present national champion, and other coast players were products of the San Francisco public courts. They were discovered by Dr. Marvin, a veteran enthusiast of that city, who sponsored them into clubs where they received instruction and competition.

EBBETS BOOSTS PAY OF PLAYERS ABOUT 33 1-3%

New York, Jan. 31.—A salary increase of close to 33 1-3 per cent to the players of the Brooklyn National league club was announced today by President Charles H. Ebbets. The Robins' executives, in discussing the spring training plans of the team, stated that fourteen regulars and six recruits already had signed 1920 contracts, and that he expected to receive the signatures of the other eight within the next week.

Players Report March 1.

Manager Wilbur Robinson, who will have charge of the team again this season, is completing the training camp arrangements, and it is expected that the first of the players will leave this city by boat for Jacksonville about Feb. 26. All the players are to report for initial practice March 1.

President Ebbets stated the club was in the market for three or four high class men, and he hoped to be able to purchase additional talent at the coming interleague meeting in Chicago Feb. 11. The complete list of spring exhibition games follows:

March 13, New York Americans at Jacksonville; March 15, 16, and 17, Washington Americans at Tampa; March 18, 20, 23, 25, 27, 29 and April 1 and 3, New York Americans at Jacksonville.

Games on Trip North.

During the trip north the Brooklyn and New York teams will play games as follows:

April 5, Columbia, S. C.; April 6, Greenville, S. C.; April 7, Chester, S. C.; April 8, Winston-Salem, N. C.; April 9, Lynchburg, Va.; April 10, 11, and 12 the series will close with three games at Brooklyn.

YANKEES DEMAND BAN B. ACCOUNT FOR LEAGUE FUND

New York, Jan. 31.—Attorneys for the New York American league club filed papers in a court action today demanding an accounting by President B. B. Johnson of the league regarding certain funds alleged to be the property of the league.

The complaint asserts that for many years the privilege of disseminating baseball scores and news has been let through the Western Union Telegraph company to various news agencies and that the contract with the Western Union was made by Johnson in his capacity as president of the American league. It is charged that all the proceeds from this contract should have gone into a sinking fund of the league, but whether it has or not the complainants are unable to say.

It is further alleged that at a meeting of the league held in Chicago Sept. 18, last, a resolution was adopted directing President Johnson to submit all contracts and all arrangements he had made with the Western Union company and at another meeting held in this city subsequently, when it was learned he had refused to comply with this request, his refusal was stamped as a violation of his duty as president of the league.

APPEAL IS MADE TO RAISE $150,000 FOR OLYMPIC TRIP

New York, Jan. 31.—Appeal for a fund of $150,000 to finance the American Olympic team has been issued by Gustavus T. Kirby, president of the Olympic committee, in the 1920 "Athletic Almanac." Likewise a call was issued to every athlete in all lines of sport for a sincere effort to make the team.

"To compete for fun may be fun," he declared, "but to compete to win is not only fun but accomplishment and when the winning is bringing honor to one's country the accomplishment becomes a triumph.

"For America to win it must have, as always, men and money; athletes to the number of 150 and money to the amount of $150,000."

Chicago Bowlers Roll High Scores at Aurora

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—The Leffingwells of Chicago rolled into third place in the Interstate Bowling tournament tonight with 2,886. The Bergers, also of Chicago, landed in fourth place with 2,877, and the Kaads fifth with 2,864. The Rialto Theaters of Aurora hold first place with 2,925.

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Indiana had an easy time with Northwestern university five in a "Big Ten" game tonight, defeating the Purple, 32 to 11, in a match featured by the superb passing of the Hoosier five.

The Purple was guarded so closely that all its shots were from long distances. Wilcox made nine of the points for the visitors, caging one sensational basket from a difficult angle on an overhead throw. Lineup:

Badgers, 28; Gophers, 12

Madison, Wis., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Playing a snappy brand of basketball netted Wisconsin a decisive victory over Minnesota, 28 to 12. The first half was a nip and tuck scrap ending in a 10 to 8 score in Wisconsin's favor.

The second half found the Badgers playing a surprisingly better game, and the outcome soon was evident. Taylor did some brilliant work for the Badgers, caging five field goals. The Gophers were unable to play all of their best men, Oss being on the sick list, but Arnston played hard and scored all of Minnesota's twelve points. Lineup:

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Michigan went to defeat for her fourth conference game tonight, when Ohio State won, 20 to 18. At the end of the first half, the score stood 9 to 9. The Wolverines showed poor form. Failure to shoot baskets marred the play on both sides. Harley played the last few minutes of the game, making two baskets, one from the middle of the floor. Francis was O. S. U's one best bet, making 14 of their points. Lineup:

Mehlem, I. A. C. Swimmer, Dies After Flu Attack

John J. Mehlem, Jr., of the Illinois A. C. swimming and water polo teams died yesterday at his home, 4619 Dover street, of influenza. Before joining the tricolor club teams, Mehlem was a track athlete at Notre Dame university. He had been ill for ten days. Six members of the I. A. C. swimming team will be pallbearers. The funeral will be held Tuesday; burial at Mount Carmel.

RULES TALKFEST, BUT NO CHANGES, SANBORN THINKS

Baseball Men Not Inclined to Accept Suggestions.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Preceding the joint schedule meetings of the National and American leagues in Chicago next week a conference of rules committees representing the two majors and the baseball writers will take place. Unless the rule makers depart from all precedent they will treat all suggestions for changes and revision from their own standpoints.

For two score years the promoters of professional baseball have framed and worded all playing rules as if they were intended only for use in their own field. Never have they seemed to realize the code of which they are guardians and sponsors affects a field by comparison with which their own sphere is a mere pin head. The guy who declared major league club owners' horizons are bounded by the fences of their ball parks knew whereof he spoke.

Rules Need Interpretation.

The baseball rules as they exist today serve the purposes of the major leagues and higher minors fairly well because the umpires of those circuits are called together every winter or spring and agree on a method of interpreting obscure and technical points. These interpretations differ in different leagues, so it is necessary to agree on a lot of points in advance of a world's series in which both National and American league teams and umpires are involved.

What chance, therefore, have the umpires, managers, or players of prairie games to understand, enforce or interpret corr tly the blind stuff they find in the "official" playing code? Arguments become wrangles and disputes often grow into forfeits, greatly to the detriment of the sport and the sportsmanship of the participants. All this could be avoided by a little broad-mindedness in the rules conference.

Turnstile All Important.

Numerous suggestions for improvements in the game, to increase the batting and enhance the fans' interest, will be considered here. All ideas will be considered solely from the standpoint of the turnstile. No thought will be taken of the breeding spots of baseball stars and fans unless this is an exceptional year.

Usually a "horrible example" is necessary to emphasize a sermon. Plenty can be furnished, but one may suffice. A considerable percentage of the tangles which come into THE TRIBUNE office for unravelling have to do with when a base runner is forced out on a play. Fully half of the queries begin (ungrammatically), "There was a runner on third and second with one out," and the runner on second goes to third, whereupon the ball is thrown to the catcher, who touches the plate and claims the runner on third is forced out. Overlooking the fact one runner cannot occupy both third and second bases simultaneously, the question requires no apology. There is absolutely nothing in the baserunning rules to solve that problem.

Prairie Ump Up Against It.

Another prolific source of dispute is when a runner on third holds his base until after a fly ball is caught, then scores before a succeeding baserunner is doubled up on the way back to the base which he left before the fly was caught. If this third out retires the side there is an argument as to whether or not the run should be allowed. It is true a run cannot score during a play in which the third man is forced out, but it is not true, as so many believe, that a run cannot score during a double play which retires the side. But the prairie lot umpire, even if he knows the rules, has a helova time finding the one that covers the two foregoing plays.

It is the last sentence of a long and verbose rule 'way over near the end of the code and, from reading the first of the extended paragraph no one would suspect its existence. It is specific and covers both of the foregoing points, because it says distinctly: "A forceout can be made only when a baserunner legally loses the right to the base he occupies, by reason of the batsman becoming a baserunner, and he is thereby forced to advance."

Why not put that sentence into the rules governing baserunning?

Heydler Doubts Johnson Will Vote for Herrmann

New York, Jan. 31.—John Heydler, president of the National league, said today that he did not think the statement of Ban Johnson in Cincinnati that he would vote for August Herrmann as chairman of the national commission would have an effect on the commission situation.

"Both Mr. Johnson and I have in our hands August Herrmann's written statement of resignation to take effect on Feb. 11," said President Heydler. "In that statement Mr. Herrmann says that on no condition will he hold office after that date. I have no doubt that Mr. Herrmann was sincere when he offered his letter of resignation."

Indoor Ball Nines Near Final Round for Honors

Two bids for place in the first division of the City Indoor league will feature the round scheduled for this afternoon. Only three more rounds are left on the schedule before the finals start for the Sweitzer cup and the Charles H. Luck medals. Games for today:

Mezereon Reveres at Chicago Hebrew institute.
[illegible] Trimmings vs. Vilas A. A. at St Alphonsus gym.
[illegible] Sportsmen vs. Romeos at Battery B
Polish-Americans at Central Turners.

Three Minor Leaguers Acquired by Cardinals

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 31.—The St. Louis Cardinals tonight announced the purchase of the following players: Grover Hartley, a catcher of the Columbus club of the American association; Arthur Griggs, first baseman of the Sacramento team of the coast league, and James McAuley, shortstop of the Kansas City American association team. Oscar Horstman, pitcher, will go to Kansas City in part payment for McAuley.

Dick Collins' First Golf Shot Called Best in His Career

BY JOE DAVIS.

President Richard J. Collins of the Chicago Athletic association believes his first golf drive was the best he ever made. His initial attempt at knocking the pellet into the next county was made at the French Lick Springs course, which probably has been the starting point for more beginners than any course in the country.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Collins, in company with James Gorman of the Rock Island railroad, the late John Powell, and Bob Conway, now manager for Armour & Co. at St. Louis, were at the springs. They had been there in previous seasons, but had contented themselves with the old time recuperative methods, long hikes over the hills, baseball, and baths, with the exhilaration of an occasional badger fight at night, to offset their physical exertions.

Still Uses First Clubs.

They decided to vary their schedule with a game at golf and each purchased a set of clubs from Professional Grange Alves. Mr. Collins still plays with most of this set, which demonstrates that in spite of his Irish ancestry he possesses a modicum of Scotch conservatism.

Learned golf writers insist thata coordination of mind and muscle are the basic elements in good golf. These Mr. Collins acquired as far back as 1882, when he was catcher for the Garden City baseball club of the City league, which was the first semi-pro club to play on inclosed grounds, these being at Rockwell and Twelfth streets.

Fingers Tell Baseball Start.

Jack Halpin was a member of the club, and Mr. Collins recalls that the late Sheriff Tom Barrett and the late Mayor Fred Busse were members of the Whiting team at the time. There were no masks nor gloves in those days and Mr. Collins has several gnarled fingers as permanent reminders of the times he stood behiind the bat.

With his hitting muscles attuned by years of ball playing, Mr. Collins took a baseball stance, and with a snappy baseball poke sent the ball sailing down the fairway. He was convinced he had the game mastered, and, while subsequent endeavors on the round shook this belief, it inoculated him with the golfing germ, and he has been playing ever since.

He joined the Westward Ho club, and later was affiliated with the South Shore Country club, Edgewater and Exmoor. He retains his memberships at South Shore and Exmoor.

Jack Croke as Tutor.

At Westward Ho Mr. Collins took a lesson from Jack Croke, and believes the professional regarded him as a hopeless case, or, possibly, that Croke thought his pupil's ideas were as good as his own.

RICHARD J. COLLINS.
[Moffett Photo.]

Through the years he has been playing Mr. Collins has culled the best features of the play of Charley Herrman, John Lenfestey, Dennis F. Kelly, Jim Gorman, and William B. Simpson, and hence possesses a composite style.

His favorite club is his midiron, which he uses on every possible occasion. He prides himself on his backspin shot, but his boon companions insist that what he calls a backspin is a spurious imitation. Jack Lenfestey says it ought to be labeled "made in Germany."

Shoots 84; Course Changed.

In the matter of golfing achievements Mr. Collins passes modestly over the winner of a number of events, and points with pride to a score of 84 made at Exmoor. This, he asserts, was the cause of the course being remodeled, and his friends were afraid he would be knocking around in par.

Mr. Collins is essentially an outdoor man, and never has known a day of illness. He believes golf, by reason of its great adaptability to all ages, is the best of all sports, and that it calls for the finest spirit of sportsmanship.

FLU DELAYS MEET OF MAROON SWIMMERS WITH MILWAUKEE A. C.

An epidemic of flumonia among members of the University of Chicago swimming squad has caused the postponement of the opening meet between the Maroon natators and the Milwaukee Athletic club. The two teams have agreed on Feb. 6 as a new date in the Milwaukee tank.

Midway fans are anxiously awaiting an opportunity to watch Coach Joseph White's new team in action, for the dope indicates that Chicago will have a much stronger team than the Maroon squad, which won the conference championship last year. The prospects are not considered as anything that inspires great confidence, however, for it is figured that the competition will be much tighter than last winter.

Reis Is Mainstay.

"Doc" White will bank heavily on the speed of Capt. Emil D. Ries, his star speedster, who scored fifteen points by winning the 40, 100 and 220 yard events in easy fashion in the 1919 championship swim. The Maroon leader is doing even better this year and it will take some fast paddling to beat him in any crawl stroke event.

Rated as a star before he has appeared in a meet is Brunhart, who broke into a few of the football games last fall as an end and tackle.

Record Holders on Team.

Walter Earle of the Maroons holds the conference records of :19 4-5 in the 40 yard swim, :59 in the 100 yard event, and 2:31 3-5 in the 220. Pavlicek of Chicago holds the 150 yard backstroke record of 1:52 2-5 and Redmon's record plunge of :19 4-5 still stands. In the relay, Earle, Pavlicek, Meine, and O'Connor set a record of 1:21 4-5 in 1916.

Besides Capt. Ries and Brunhart the Maroons have a big squad of promising men. The Chicago schedule follows:

Feb. 6—Milwaukee A. C. at Milwaukee.
Feb. 13—Iowa at Chicago.
Feb. 27—Illinois at Chicago.
March 6—Chicago at Wisconsin.
March 18-19—Conference meet at Evanston.

Dorchester Is Winner In Sunny South Shoot

Houston, Tex., Jan. 31.—Otis Dorchester of Dallas, with a handicap of 17 yards, won the Sunny South handicap today when he defeated A. E. Daniels of Wyoming, with whom he was tied in the second 25 targets of the shoot off. Daniels, 18 yards, tied with Dorchester in the finals of the shoot with a score of 95.

Mark Arie, Thomasboro, Ill., and Frank Troeh of Vancouver, Wash., both with handicaps of 22 yards, were completely out of the money. Arie had a score of 89, while Troeh made an 86.

Hickey Has Seven Umps Hired for 1920 Season

Thomas J. Hickey, president of the American Association, has notified seven of the eight umpires who officiated in the league last season that they have been reengaged. Augie Moran is the only member of the 1919 staff of arbiters who has not been invited to serve again. The seven favored ones are: Bill Hart, Frank Connolly, W. F. Finneran, Buck Freeman, Louis Knapp, Jack Murray and Fred Hunter.

PILRIM CHOSEN TO LEAD GOLFERS OF L. P. COURSE

Election Held and a Big Program Planned.

At a meeting of the board of governors of the Lincoln Park Golf club, held at the refectory, B. F. Pilrim was elected president, W. H. Cummings, vice president; C. A. Reinking, second vice president; W. F. Hunter, treasurer, and H. S. Shimizu, secretary.

An extensive tournament program is contemplated, the events for both men and women being increased over that of last year.

Women to Stage Own Events.

An important change has been made in the handling of the women's events. Heretofore the men's tournament committee has had charge. This year the women will select their own pastimes committee, which will be composed of five women, who will have complete charge. This change was made to stimulate interest in the numerous trophies for women players.

On account of its convenient location and pleasant surroundings, the Lincoln park course is popular with the fair sex of the north side, and many exceptionally fine players have been developed.

Horton Appointed "Pro."

Chester Horton, formerly of the Seattle Golf club, one of the best known golf instructors in the west, has been appointed club professional, and will endeavor to turn out a team which will carry off the honors in the public parks team tournament.

The Olympia Fields Country club will hold a Lincoln's birthday dinner and dance at South Shore Country club, Feb. 11.

Bob Macdonald, Bob o'Link professional, who had a slight relapse after his recent illness, expects to return to the indoor school at Marshall Field's this week. His brother-in-law, Dan McKay, has been taking his place.

Star of Illinois Five Out of Game with Flu

Urbana, Ill., Jan. 31.—John Felmley, star of the Illini basketball team, is ill at his home with influenza. Illinois starts on a road trip next Friday, and unless he is able at that time to accompany them the Illinois team will have a hard fight to retain the lead in the conference.

Yachtsmen Adopt Marconi Rig; Jackson Park Gets Big Event

The much discussed Marconi rig, a radical departure from the orthodox method of rigging a boat, received the official O. K. of the Lake Michigan Yachting association, which met yesterday at the La Salle hotel to finish up business left over from its December gathering.

The question of the rejection or adoption of the new rig brought forth a spirited discussion between exponents of the Marconi type and those who favored strict adherence to the usual gaff rig.

Marconi Wins by 9 to 3.

The Marconi rig differs from the old type in that it does away with the gaff and calls for an abnormally high mast and ridiculously short boom. Supporters of the Marconi rig asserted a decision to bar it in races would be an act opposed to the progress of the sport, while its opponents declared its use would have a tendency to discourage competition by boat owners who could not afford to spend from $1,100 to $1,400 in rerigging their yachts.

When it came to a vote on the matter, the Marconi rig won out by 9 to 3. It was said that at least three local yachtsmen are planning to use the Marconi rig during the coming season.

Regatta to Jackson Park Club.

The annual regatta of the L. M. Y. A. was awarded to the Jackson Park Yacht club, which will conduct the big annual event over its course Monday, July 5. The setting of the date July 5 instead of July 3, is expected to result in a larger entry list, including a number of Milwaukee boats, which will remain over until the following Saturday and join the local yachts in a race to the Cream City, followed by a joint cruising event to White Lake, Mich.

Dr. Bayard Holmes Jr., the newly elected head of the L. M. Y. A., presided at the meeting. Members of the Jackson Park Yacht club held their annual banquet last night, when prizes won during the 1919 season were presented.

TIME TO ENTER BOWLING EVENT

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 31.—Secretary A. L. Langtry of the American Bowling congress, who has his headquarters here, is now busy arranging the schedule for the big international bowling meet at Peoria, Ill., in March. Entries do not close until Feb. 21 and bowlers who think they have a chance to win money in the monster pin fest should send their entries in to Secretary Langtry and be assured of good dates.

Weber Wins Golf Tourney, Beating Hopkins, Chicago

St. Augustine, Fla., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Harold Weber, playing from the Inverness Golf club, Toledo, won the finals in the St. Augustine championship today by 7 and 5. Weber played excellent golf, going out in 37. On the home journey he cut off two strokes, making a round of 74. Louis J. Hopkins of Chicago was runnerup. William L. Sour of Chicago won the third division.

A field of thirty took part in the clock golf contest for women. The tourney ended a tie at 24 between Miss Marion Knowlton, Chicago, and Mrs. Martin B. Jones, Brooklyn.

MARQUETTE NOSES OUT NOTRE DAME.

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Trailing by a seven point margain in the first period, Marquette made a strong finish and won over Notre Dame today, 23 to 22. Karst of Marquette and Brendy of Notre Dame were the stars.

STAR SPRINTERS CONTEST IN RACE AT N. Y. ON FEB. 21

New York, Jan. 31.—Eight of America's premier sprinters, all candidates for the Olympic team, are to toe the mark in a special sprint race, one of the features of the indoor games of the New York Athletic club, Feb. 21.

In this list of entries, are Billy Hayes of Notre Dame, national 100 yard champion; Loren Murchison, New York A. C., national 60 yard champion; Carl Johnson of Michigan, western conference champion; Eddie Teschner, Harvard, former intercollegiate champion, who ran second to Paddock of California at the interallied games in France; Walter Conwey, Morningside A. C., the metropolitan champion; Roy Morse, Salem-Crescent A. C., former national champion; Bob Le Gendre, Georgetown, pentathlon champion, and Bernie Wefers, Jr., son of the old speed king.

NORTHWESTERN FIVE DOWNS BELOIT.

Naperville, Ill., Jan. 31.—Northwestern college quintet defeated Beloit, 17 to 8, in a little five conference game.

REUBEN-MEYERS MAT BOUT BILLED AS FINISH CLASH

Col. James E. Stuart of the 11th infantry, I. N. G., which will conduct the finish wrestling match between Johnny Meyers and Ben Reuben at the 2d regiment armory on Feb. 19, yesterday issued a statement to assure the public the match will be to an absolute finish.

"I intend to see that the men live up to their contract," Col. Stuart said. "Each man has posted $250 as a guarantee of weight and appearance. They must wrestle until either wins two out of three falls or one is disabled so that he cannot continue. The principals have until three days before the contest to select the referee. If they cannot agree upon a man, we will name the referee."

CUVER BEATS BLUFFTON.

Culver, Ind., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—In a fast and snappy basketball game Culver Military Academy won from Bluffton high school, to 19. The fives were evenly matched.

Maxwell

Extra Fine in Metals
Extra Fine in Mileage

More miles per gallon
More miles on tires

A Maxwell car weighs 2130 pounds. It is made of the finest materials that may be obtained.

You cannot find in any car a better crankshaft, better bearings, better axles or better gears.

Neither science nor money can produce them better.

Do you know why such fine materials are used in a car like Maxwell?

We had to.

Keeping its weight down and yet maintaining strength mean the use of only those extra fine steels and metals.

For a metal that is light in weight and yet strong, as any user of metals knows, is a high priced metal.

The use of these fine grades of steel has been the foundation of the business. Maxwell has grown in numbers and friends. The latter countless; the former well on the road to 400,000.

FISKE SKATERS RACE TO VICTORY BY TWO POINTS

Mayor Starts Events in Playground Meet.

TABLE OF POINTS

Fiske	14	Emmet	5
Mozart	12	Oakland	3
Avondale	12	Christopher	3
Corkery	7	Cameron	2
Beury	7	Gallistel	2
Waters	5	LeMoyne	2
Swift	5	Morse	1
Agassiz	5	McCormick	1
Eckhart Park	3	Franklin Park	1

With eighteen teams breaking into the point column, skaters representing Fiske playground yesterday won the Chicago Skating championship at Garfield park with a total of 14 points. Mozart and Avondale, which pushed Fiske all the way, tied for second place with 12 points each.

The contests, staged under the supervision of the executive skating committee appointed by Mayor Thompson, were featured by some of the best competition seen on the ice this year. The kids did not once let up in their efforts to win points for their respective playgrounds, while the girls tried just as hard. Despite cold weather a large crowd turned out.

Mayor Starts Races.

Mayor Thompson and a number of city hall officials were present. The city's executive started most of the races and he was welcomed on the ice by a series of daylight bombs. The mayor said he has accepted a challenge for yesterday's winners to meet the best New York can produce in a dual intercity meet to be held this year.

"I received a telegram yesterday morning from Mayor Hylan of New York City congratulating Chicago on the organization of a public schools athletic league," Mayor Thompson said. "I wired back thanking him and said we will be ready in 1921 to meet New York in a dual meet. I also said we are ready to meet New York on the ice this year. Mayor Hylan has accepted the challenge and it is up to us to go through with it. I will look after the details tomorrow."

Boost for Playgrounds.

Yesterday's meet and the playground skating tourneys staged in former years by THE TRIBUNE plainly show what can be accomplished through the use of the playgrounds. These grounds are adequately equipped with everything necessary for staging skating races, track and field meets. All the boys and girls needed was some one to stage the contests.

The skaters who took part in yesterday's events were the cream of the local skating world, with the exception, of course, of the well known class skaters. The boys and girls are regular attendants of the playgrounds and public schools. They earned the right to compete in the finals by winning their races in the preliminaries and semi-finals.

Relay Is Feature Event.

Although a number of the races were close, the relay race for skaters 18 years and over was the most interesting. The event was won by Mozart by a margin of three feet from Avondale. On the third relay, Greensfelder, the third skater on the Mozart team, fell and lost about forty yards before he touched Harry Nelson, the last Mozart skater. Nelson gradually overtook his opponent and nipped him five yards from the finish line.

George Thomson of Avondale playground, winner of THE TRIBUNE Junior Silver Skates Derby last Sunday, was an easy victor in the boys' race for skaters 15, 16, and 17 years of age with racing skates. Thomson went into the lead at the start and was never in danger of defeat.

Miss F. Schultz of Agassiz won the girls' race for skaters under 15 years while Miss J. Moe of Mozart took the women's event. Neither was hard pressed and each skated strong especially against the wind.

Mayor Presents Prizes.

The prizes were presented to the winners last night in Grant park by Mayor Thompson. Exhibitions of fancy skating were given by local experts in addition to a fireworks display. Summaries:

SKATERS TO RACE IN EVENTS TODAY

A three mile handicap and a four man team race will feature the annual skating derby of the Norwegian American A. A. at Humboldt park today. Local class A experts, who took part in the National championships at Sargnac Lake, N. Y., will be back in time for today's contests. Contestants must call for their numbers at 12:30 o'clock; the first event will start half an hour later. The Norwegian American A. A. band will furnish music.

KUHNS LOSES TO PATTERSON IN CUE TITLE RACE

Tourney Standings

	W.	L.	H.R.	B.G.
W. B. Huey, Illinois A. C.	4	1	9	54
A. Newman, Brooklyn	3	2	6	80
W. O. Campbell, Chicago	3	1	7	73
L. J. Engels, Boston	2	2	5	71
W. H. Flinn, New York	3	2	5	82
C. E. Patterson, Chi. A. A.	3	3	6	57
H. B. Kuhns, C. A. A.	1	3	3	64
A. H. Hahn, Hamilton club	0	5	6	..

C. Earl Paterson and Harry B. Kuhns of the C. A. A., boon companions of the green cloth for many years, met in the first afternoon game of the national amateur championship at the Chicago Athletic association yesterday.

Kuhns was unable to show anything like the speed which enabled him to defeat Champion Arthur Newman the preceding night, and was defeated, 50 to 27, in 57 innings. Each player had high run of 4.

Early Lead to Patterson.

Patterson wielded a fluent cue and with a run of 4, two threes, and a brace of doubles, led 14 to 7 in ten innings. He counted 33 points in thirty innings and had a chance to break the competitive championship record of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players, held by William B. Huey at 52 innings. Scores at each tenth inning:

Kuhns	7	8	11	16	20	27
Patterson	14	25	33	40	43	50

Huey Defeats Hahn.

Bill Huey romped away from Alfred Hahn of the Hamilton club, 50 to 18, in fifty-five innings, in the second afternoon session. Hahn kept in the running until the thirtieth inning, where Huey was in front, 18 to 12. The tricolor club player then began to pull away, and a run of 7 in the fiftieth inning made his total 41. Two ciphers, followed by a 5, a cipher, and a 4, completed his string. His high run was 7, Hahn having a 4.

Scores at each tenth inning:

Hahn	2	4	12	16	16	18
Huey	7	13	18	29	41	50

Upset for the Champion.

The biggest upset of the tournament came in the final game Friday night, when Harry B. Kuhns of the C. A. A. gave Champion Alfred Newman of Brooklyn his first defeat, 50 to 45, in 64 innings. His high run was 6, Newman getting a 3. Kuhns played brilliantly, scoring 38 points in 37 innings, and at one stage led by 12 points. Then Newman began to crawl up and in a tense finish was beaten by 5 points.

Welton B. Flinn, the New York state champion, won the opening game from C. Earl Patterson, 50 to 43, in 107 innings. His high run was 7.

Campbell Ties for Lead.

Dr. William Campbell of Chicago advanced to a tie for first place by defeating Louis J. Engels of Boston, 50 to 41, in 94 innings in the first night game. Each had a high run of 5. Campbell led all the way. Scores at each tenth inning.

Engels	5	11	14	16	21	23	26	28	40	41
Campbell	9	11	15	22	26	29	32	36	44	50

Welton B. Flinn, who defeated Arthur Newman in the final for the New York state championship, gave the national champion his second defeat, winning the final night game, 50 to 37, in eighty-two innings. His high run was five, Newman getting a six. Flinn led 20 to 14 at the thirtieth inning and kept in front.

Alec McCarthy to Pilot Kansas City This Season

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 31.—Alec McCarthy, second baseman for the Kansas City team for the last two years, today signed a contract to manage the team through the coming season. McCarthy succeeds John Ganzel, who resigned.

McCarthy came from his home in Salisbury, Md., to sign the contract. He says he will return home but will be on hand in time to be on the job when spring training starts in Claremore, Okla.

TOURING KAPPA QUINTET BEATEN.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—The Eta basketball team, composed of Morgan Park Military academy players of former years, lost to Lincoln Kappas, 19 to 10, tonight.

Gould and Wear Capture Racquets Championship

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 31.—Jay Gould and J. W. Wear of the Philadelphia Racquet club won the national amateur racquets doubles championship when they defeated Clarence C. Fell and Stanley Mortimer of New York today by scores of 15 to 9, 15 to 11, 9 to 15, 15 to 10, 16 to 18, 6 to 15, 15 to 7.

Norman Ross Is Beaten in Australian Half Mile

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 31.—F. E. Beaurepaire, the Australian swimming champion, today defeated Norman Ross of San Francisco for the half mile swimming championship. The event took place in rough water.

SEARS-ROEBUCK LEAGUE.

The Apaches defeated the Hurons, 23 to 15, in the Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A. basketball league at Sears "Y" gym. Cherokees defeated the Iroquois, 29 to 10, and Mohawks downed the Seminoles, 29 to 14. The Apaches-Huron game was one of the snappiest contests of the season, the rival forwards casing baskets in rapid succession. "Pat" Newman was the feature of the Mohawks, casting nine baskets. Burbank scored ten baskets for the Cherokees.

OLYMPIC TENNIS DATES CONFLICT WITH NATIONAL

New York, Jan. 31.—American tennis cracks may not don spangles for Uncle Sam in the Olympic games. Conflict between the dates set for the national tennis championship and the court tournament of the big international games in Belgium may prevent the Americans from adding to the pile of points with which the Yankee teams hope to win.

The Olympic tennis events are scheduled from Aug. 15 to 23, while the American national championship, coming Aug. 26, would make it impossible for men to play in both contests. An official of the United States National Tennis association said today an effort would be made to have the Olympic matches set forward to early in July.

"Some of our most noted players are going to England in June to compete in the Wimbledon tournament. It would make an ideal arrangement if they could go from there to Antwerp and then return in time for the national championships. We will know soon the exact dates of the English games and then we will try to get the Belgian committee to change the schedule."

Illinois, Missouri, Iowa League May Be Formed

Hannibal, Mo., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Steps are being taken to organize a league composed of Hannibal, Quincy, Burlington, Davenport, Rock Island, Cedar Rapids, Muscatine, and possibly Galesburg. Belden Hill of Cedar Rapids, Ia., veteran baseball man, is heading the project and a meeting may be called soon. Henry Riedel, president of the Hannibal association, has been asked to accept a franchise in the Three Eyes league, but favors Hill's scheme because of lower mileage.

COL. JACK CHINN, NOTED VETERAN TURFMAN, DEAD

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 31.—Col. Jack Chinn, 72, one of the most noted turfmen of twenty years ago in America, died in a hospital here today after a long illness from heart trouble and complications. He was a former state senator and leader in Democratic politics and a member of the first Kentucky state racing commission, which body he was instrumental in creating. He also was one of the first Kentucky lawmakers to urge adoption of the parimutuel system at racetracks. He retired from the turf several years ago.

Introduce Bill to Raise Tax on Baltimore Track

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 31.—A bill to amend the Baltimore county racing commission laws so that, in addition to the $3,000 a day tax paid on the county, Pimlico should pay $3,000 a day to Baltimore city, has been introduced in the state legislature by Senator Frick. The bill, of course, does not designate the Pimlico race track by name, but applies to any one mile track inside the corporate limits of Baltimore city.

Busy Spring Schedule Is Booked for Browns

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 31.—The St. Louis Americans will open their training season Feb. 26 at Taylor, Tex. The following pre-season exhibition games were announced tonight:

Fort Worth, March 6 and 7; Houston, March 13 and 14; San Antonio, March 20 and 21; Oklahoma City, March 23 and 24; Omaha at Okmulgee, March 25 and 26; Tulsa, March 27 and 28; Wichita, March 29 and 30; and Joplin, March 31, whence the Browns will return to St. Louis. San Antonio will journey to Taylor to play the Browns on March 10 and 11 and Fort Worth will play them on March 17 and 18.

EVANSTON PREPS WIN TWO GAMES FROM NEW TRIER

Heavies and Bantams Cop, but Lightweights Lose.

Evanston high basket teams took two-thirds of a suburban league triple-header from New Trier fives at the Evanston Y. M. C. A. gym, Evanston heavies winning 11 to 6, and Evanston bantams copping 3 to 7. New Trier took revenge in the lightweight contest, trouncing Evanston lights, 10 to 7. All of the games were hotly contested.

The New Trier heavies led, 6 to 3, at the end of the first half, but a scoring attack, that netted 8 points, in the last period gave the Evanstonians the verdict.

New Trier led the scoring all of the way in the lightweight contest, and started out to win the bantam game, ending the first half with a 1 point lead, 8 to 7. In the final period, the Evanston forwards spurted and piled up the winning 5 points. Lineups:

WALLER AND JOLIET SPLIT.

Waller and Joliet High split a pair at Waller gym, Waller heavyweights winning a rough 28 to 22 contest and the Joliet lights taking an overtime game, 25 to 24. The heavyweight contest was marred by personal fouls. Both Shore and Fischer of Waller were forced to retire because of injuries. The lightweight game was a 24 to 24 tie at the end of the two regular periods. In the extra five minute period Thomas caged the free throw that gave Joliet the game. Lineups:

New York, Jan. 31.—Boxing as an intercollegiate sport has been adopted by New York university, it was announced.

BASKETBALL

DE LA SALLE tossers of Joliet took a pair of games from St. Rita's quintets at St. Rita's gym, the lightweights winning, 23 to 15, and the bantams copping, 32 to 11. Rathford was the individual scorer for the Joliet lightweights, caging four baskets and one free throw. The stellar work of Stukel at left forward, who caged six ringers, and the tight guarding of Jones and Daugherty were largely responsible for the De La Salle bantam triumph. Lineups:

MONTE CARLO ON CUBAN SOIL SOON WILL BE STARTED

Great Gambling Casino Is Planned Near Havana.

Havana, Jan. 24.—[Special Correspondence.]—A real Monte Carlo, with all the inducements that have made the Reviera's famous playground world renowned, is to be opened within three hours' automobile ride of the city of Havana.

Baltimore engineers are to construct the resort, but Chicago and New York men are to be the geniuses behind the enterprise. They have linked fortunes with the most powerful syndicate of Cubans on the island to guarantee the success of the project. All of the names are to become public property within two weeks.

As one result of a trip of inspection which has just been made to the site of the new El Dorado of Fortune, Clarence W. Gormly, personal attorney for Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., has been engaged by the syndicate to safeguard the launching of this great tribute to chance.

To Cater to Wealthy.

Only the most wealthy and exclusive patrons are to be encouraged to come to San Diego, the home of the new Monte Carlo. San Diego is the site of the medicinal hot springs which for the last 100 years have attracted Spanish gentry with various ailments. Now the Cuban syndicate has taken over not alone the famous hot springs but surrounding countryside to the extent of 1,200 acres, including a fine deer hunting preserve.

The location is approximately seventy-five miles southwest of the city of Havana and may be reached by rail or automobile. The engineers from the United States, who have just arrived to "lay out" the place of "layouts," have already made known their plans in part.

Plan Great Casino.

There is to be a magnificent casino which will not be surpassed by any temple of the goddess of chance on either continent. The resident guests—club members—will be housed in a replica of the famous Traymore at Atlantic City. For the tourists and the Cubans there is to be constructed a hotel of the same type as the La Salle. But this is to care for the visitors who come only for the baths and for a brief respite from the cares and worries of business life.

It is for those who come for the creme de vie that this great resort is to be opened, where the sky is to be the limit, and where the special arrangements will provide a private floor where the ladies of the party may battle with all the elements from baccarat to roulette without the indulgence of the sterner sex.

Labor Hard to Obtain.

There is some great secret about the time and circumstances of opening this great resort. Labor is an undeterminable quantity at this time in Cuba. Ask the Cuba-American Jockey club, which has been striving for months to complete its new clubhouse, where members might—exclusively—take a chance in a friendly occasional game. The roof is on, but that is about all there is to say.

But it is no secret—and how the news did fly!—that a ninety-nine year concession upon San Diego, the hot springs and all surroundings to the extent of 1,200 acres, has been granted by the government to the new Cuban syndicate with American silent partners.

"Silent Partners" Wise Play.

The "silent partners" was deemed a wise move after the recent attempt to launch in Marianao, not far from the environs of the city of Havana, a Monte Carlo with American circus methods. The Cubans in their habitat, you know, are a pretty wise bunch of business men. And it is even said that the wary Tex Rickard found them so in the attempt to go right over the heads of the natives in the Marianao project. To all intents and purposes, the enterprise died a-borning, or was sidetracked.

AMERICUS TEAM ROLLS INTO LEAD IN PIN TOURNEY

The eighth annual bowling tournament of the Windy City Bowling association finished the second week of its schedule at Crouse's Central alleys last night. Only one new leader showed up since the opening week, the Americus council team from the Knights of Columbus league rolling into first place in the main event last night with a grand total of 2,821.

The Sir Cliftons on the same squad with the Americus five, tried hard to follow the new leaders, but fell out at 2,732, which is fifth high.

George Rudy and Nick Butler are holding tight to first place in the doubles with 1,185. Alex Bartack reigns supreme in the singles with 646. Matty Faetz was the only roller to threaten him, getting 638. Standings:

Caddock to Try Again to Beat Joe Stecher

New York, Jan. 31.—Earl Caddock, the soldier wrestler of Iowa, who failed to hold the world's championship last night in a bout with Joe Stecher, the Nebraska scissors hold artist, may make another effort to regain the title.

Gene Melady, Caddock's manager, said tonight his charge was not through with the mat game and would try to work his way up to another bout with the champion.

"I have no alibis," Caddock said. "Stecher won the bout on pure merit and I was the first to congratulate him. I made a mistake in not taking on a few heavy matches before going in for the championship."

INDOOR-OUTDOOR LEAGUE FORMED.

The Southwest Side Indoor-Outdoor Baseball league will be composed of clubs on the southwest side of the city. This league organized Jan. 30 with the following clubs on its roster: Rialtos, Medoras, Opals, Kettler Council, K. of C., Coltiers, Blue Oaks, Aeroplanes, Altros, Orells. Clubs desiring to join can communicate with P. A. Nilles, 2301 West Twenty-second street, or Ed A. Figaba, 4048 West Twenty-second street.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

STAGNANT WATER BASS.

SOME time ago we published a letter from a reader who complained of the poor fishing in a private lake owned by a club of which he is a member. This lake is an artificial body of water near Ottumwa, Iowa, and was stocked several years ago with black bass, catfish and crappies, and although no dead fish have been found in the lake, the bass seem to have disappeared. We asked for some opinions on this subject and Dr. C. E. Cook of New London, Iowa, an expert of many years' experience, kindly helped us out.

Most anglers have had the experience of fishing with meager results in waters known, through seining, netting and winter fishing, to be well stocked and have wondered "how come?" We believe that Dr. Cook's article answers this old, old problem. Incidentally, the surface flies mentioned are the cork bodied bass "bugs" designed to be fished on the surface with a fly rod. Folks, meet Dr. Cook.

"I note in Woods and Waters the experience of a reader in stocking an artificial water with the much prized black bass and pan fishes. I have spent thirty-five years in the pursuit and propagation of these fishes in both natural and artificial waters and have arrived at the conclusion that they, especially the small mouthed, become an entirely changed fish when placed in stagnant or surface fed ponds.

"For the first two years after being placed in such ponds he is a fairly good biter until he once becomes adapted to his new surroundings; then the larger bass refuses to bite at the commoner kinds of baits, except immediately following his long winter hibernation period, when he strikes voraciously at almost any kind of a lure. The smaller bass does not attain the wise habit of the stagnant water bass until he is at least three years old, when he acquires them very quickly.

"I have stocked several fine artificial ponds and in one instance, after the fish had been planted five years, we opened a large hole in the ice and took out one hundred small mouthed bass that weighed 320 pounds, although not a fish of over a pound in weight had been caught for two years.

"I now have a large reservoir, owned by a railroad, stocked with thousands of small mouthed bass, crappies and pan fishes and except during or following the spawning season no large bass are caught in any way but by surface fishing. Not a single one has been caught on minnow, frog, worm or crawfish; none on plugs, spoons or underwater flies.

"I have kept an accurate record of every bass caught in the last three years. In 1917, twenty-one bass of more than three pounds in weight were caught; eighteen on floating flies and three on grasshoppers on the surface. In 1918, thirty-three bass, all over three pounds, were caught; all were taken on surface baits, mostly flies. Fifty-one were caught in 1919 and all on surface flies.

"These fish were all caught at daylight, in late evening or just after dusk when the large bass seem to come to the surface to strike at almost anything that breaks the water surface; then they come close inshore to feed and if you are able to hand them something that looks more natural than the real thing you can often coax these lazy, stagnant water bass to take your offering.

"A few pointers that I have found successful in trying for these bass: Don't fish from the shore, as they lie near the bottom and the least vibration from the bank, either from walking or casting, makes them suspicious. Use a boat and do not attempt to row; have a good paddler; caution him not to strike the boat with his oar; then by making long casts, from fifty to seventy-five feet, in some of the favorite spots, you will occasionally fool one of these wise old bass.

"I have had opportunity to fish for bass in almost every state that affords good fishing and in no place have I had to use the caution and cunning as after the stagnant water bass. You are wasting your time in trying to induce him to bite on anything suspended from a line. I have seen a few caught in some waters by using a crawfish and a long, well colored leader, hooking the crawfish through the tail and allowing him to crawl on the bottom.

"I have examined the stomachs of every bass I have caught and find them to contain mud cats, small crappies and sunfish, but usually more bugs, flies, grasshoppers, etc. We have one or two very large bass that for the past three seasons have been making active attempts to catch the dipping swallows that frequent ponds in the evenings, and while I have never seen them catch one I have never known any fish to continue to strike at things that he did not capture at times.

"I was asked by a farmer who had stocked his pond six years before and who had not been able to catch any bass, to try my skill. I failed to get a strike, although I fished faithfully. I still insisted that his fish were there and we seined his pond, getting seventy-six of the most beautiful bass I ever saw. They averaged over three pounds and yet we did not get a single small fish, showing that if they ever spawned they must have devoured the offspring, as the ones we caught were the original stocking seed. I never saw a more thoroughly aroused man when he thought of the many hours he had spent in trying to induce one of these fish to bite.

"My experience teaches me that black bass are the gamest, most cautious and hardest fish to fool when tried in still waters."

ONE POINT LEAD BY CENTENNIALS IN RIFLE SHOOT

Close Match Is Staged for Tribune Trophy.

A margin of one point gave the Centennial Rifle club a victory in the eighth round of the third annual .22 caliber tournament of the Chicago Rifle association for THE TRIBUNE trophy. The Centennials scored 982 points, one point better than the Chicago club, while the Irving Park team was a close third with a count of 980.

The Chicago club still retains the lead in the race for the trophy, but only by the narrow margin of two points, the Centennials being in second place.

Three Finish in Tie.

Three marksmen landed high scores and finished in a tie in the eighth match of the series. Wahlbaum, Chicago; Lively, Irving Park, and Johnson, Chicago, each shot for counts of 199. The standing is as follows:

I. A. C. PLAYS SHAMROCKS TODAY.

W. M. Thompson, secretary of the Chicago Hockey association, yesterday announced the I. A. C. team will meet the Shamrocks today at Harrison street and Washtenaw avenue. The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock. At the same hour the Midway and Hinsdale sevens clash on the Midway rink.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

BY A. R. METCALFE

WEIRD stories are constantly reaching this department, of which the following is an example: North, having a long suit of hearts, including four honors, and with only one small spade, made an initial bid of two spades. After some preliminary skirmishing west bid four hearts, north doubled and made a prodigious score.

Undoubtedly most of the tales are true. There are thousands who play bridge so badly that they are easily beaten by any kind of bidding or playing. They are beaten worse by simple direct play than by any other.

A good golf player could beat a very bad one if the former drove with a niblick and used a driver in the rough. In this column the opponents are always supposed to have some measure of judgment and skill. It is a waste of time to study the best methods of playing against the foolish any old method will answer.

Something quite new in defensive tactics is shown in the following deal:

THE HANDS.

Score, 0—0 West dealt and bid one no-trump, which closed the bidding. North had the initial lead.

West secured eight tricks.

The lead of south at trick two was peculiar but carefully studied. The ace, king, and jack of hearts were missing and the problem confronting south was to secure three tricks in that suit, provided his partner held either ace or king and west the other two honors. Had he led the fourth best heart, north would have been forced to put up the king to shut out the nine and the declarer would easily have made four odd. By leading the ten, south created a tenace over the nine with his queen and eight.

It made no difference what west played at trick two, but the declarer played the knave quickly, thinking the ten was the highest heart held by south. Had that been true the nine would have won the second round of the suit in dummy. Had the heart holding of west and north been reversed, south would have won every trick in the suit by his play of the ten.

West could have made game certain by playing the ace of spades at trick one and clearing his diamonds. He thought game certain against any possible attack and expected to make more than nine tricks.

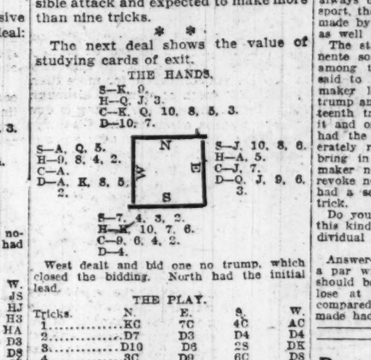
The next deal shows the value of studying cards of exit.

THE HANDS.



West dealt and bid one no trump, which closed the bidding. North had the initial lead.

West secured nine tricks.

The first six tricks were common-place. Knowing that his partner was protecting hearts, north discarded that suit, knowing that four tricks in clubs would probably be needed to save the game. Had north kept but three clubs the declarer could easily have made game by clearing his spades. As it was, the declarer had an opportunity for pretty play at trick seven. North was certainly guarding the king of spades, and apparently could not have more than one heart remaining. By taking away this heart before the club play, the declarer eventually forced the spade lead up to his ace, queen.

The average player would have led a spade at trick seven, lost the finesse, and attributed the result to luck.

Answer to Query.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Will you, if you have the time and information, answer the attached question? I am asking you to do this because it has been reported that you have approved of this and, of course, I know that you do not. Your whole course has been so clean and your influence has always been on the side of the best in the sport, that I indignantly repel this statement made by some one who does not know you as well as I do.

The statement is like this: At a prominente south side club recently, in a game among the ladies, where the stakes were said to be high, on a declared trump the maker led the twelfth and commanding trump and was surprised not to see the thirteenth trump fall. She at once mentioned it and one of her opponents said that she had the thirteenth trump, but had deliberately revoked so as to use it later and bring in a long suit, which she did, the maker not getting another trick. Had the revoke not been made, the maker, who also had a setup suit, would have made every trick.

Do you approve of a deliberate revoke of this kind and what do you think of an individual deliberately playing in this way?

E. T. M.

Answer—An intentional revoke is about on a par with second story work. The laws should be modified so that a player would lose at least 100 points by revoking as compared with the score that would be made had the revoke not occurred.

Dartmouth Eleven Plays Washington on Nov. 27

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 31.—Dartmouth college will meet the University of Washington at football here Nov. 27, Darwin Meisnest, graduate manager of the university, announced here today.

CAMBRIDGE, OXFORD MAY SEND ATHLETES TO PENN CARNIVAL

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 31.—Provisional acceptance of an invitation to compete in the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival at Franklin field April 30 and May 1 has been received both from Cambridge and Oxford universities.

Both institutions, Penn authorities said, appear eager to send men to the relays, but whether they will be able to do so depends upon their ability to collect teams which they consider of sufficient strength to compete. Should the two British institutions not be able to organize separate teams, it was said they may send a combined team.

The carnival this year promises to be one of the greatest in its history. Nearly fifty colleges and universities already have accepted invitations. Among them are Yale, Princeton, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania State, Colgate, Holy Cross, Minnesota, Southern California, Leland Stanford, Michigan Agricultural, Harvard, Cornell, Illinois, Wisconsin, Chicago, and Missouri.

One addition to the program for this year is an interscholastic medley relay race of a mile and a quarter, open to both high and preparatory schools.

Star Bowlers Start Match at Randolph Alleys Today

The first block of ten of the forty game bowling match between Count Gengler and Phil Wolf for a side bet of $500 will be rolled this afternoon at the Randolph alleys. Jimmy Smith, claimant of the individual bowling championship of the United States, will be on hand to challenge the winner. The second ten games will be rolled Wednesday night at Nick Bruck's alleys on Sixty-third street.

MAT SHOW AT CASINO TUESDAY.

Johnny Meyers will open his campaign to defeat all claimants to the middleweight wrestling title Tuesday night when he meets Jimmy Demeetral at the Casino. Meyers must defeat Demetral or his match with Ben Ruben at the Second Regiment armory Feb. 19 will be canceled by the soldier officials.

Quality First

A CHALMERS
with an Elegant New Body

It is new, will no doubt be widely copied in another year and expresses elegance. It is "cut" high in the front at the radiator line, and low from the windshield back.

You sit close to the ground; the side line is considerably lower than in any previous Chalmers.

Seats are lower, tilt more; you cling to the seat cushion, and you have abundance of foot room, front and rear.

In detail this new body possesses a completeness, a finality that seems impossible to improve upon.

Underneath the body is the same, unchanged Chalmers chassis that is well nigh faultless.

Hot Spot and Ram's-horn continue in their original and masterly way to get out all the power that nature put into gas, though the complaints against the grade of gas today increase daily.

There's a limit to the supply of the new Chalmers, but there seems to be no limit to the number of those who insist on one.

As a word of warning—see this new Chalmers immediately.

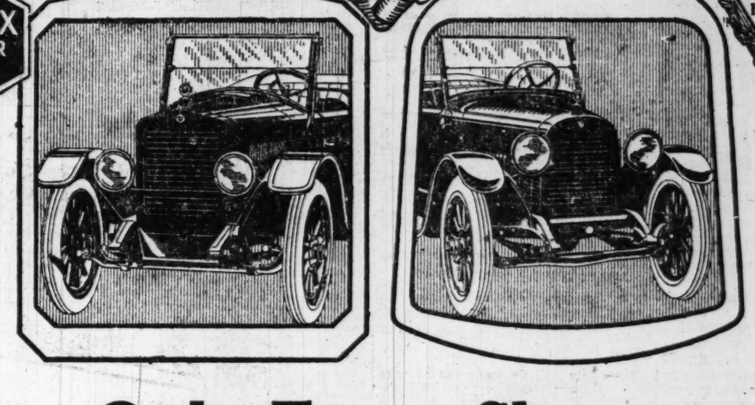
ESSEX MOTOR CARS

HUDSON SUPER SIX



Only Essex Shares Hudson's Qualities

They Show Why Essex Went 3037 Miles in 50 Hours, and is Rightful Runner-up to the Super-Six Performance

A critical public has judged the Essex.

In the year past it set a world's sales record.

More than $35,000,000 was paid for 22,000 Essex cars now in service.

That shows how men wanted what Essex offered.

Now Essex proves the accuracy of motordom's judgment.

Let the official tests speak:

On the Cincinnati Speedway a stock chassis Essex made a new world mark of 3037 miles in 50 hours, under observation of the American Automobile Association.

With other trials the same Essex ran a total of 5870 miles in 94 hours, 22 minutes driving time, averaging over a mile a minute.

Still another Essex phæton holds the world's 24-hour road mark of 1061 miles made in the face of a blizzard over snow-covered Iowa country roads.

The Essex and Hudson are of course totally different types.

But note the advantages Essex shares with Hudson.

Both Have This Motor Heat Control

For instance, the radiator shutters by which efficient operating heat is maintained in coldest weather. They mean everything to satisfactory winter driving. Closed, they keep the heat in.

No unsightly hood covers are needed. They give summer efficiency to gasoline. They end hard starting. And in warm weather, opened, they give the maximum cooling.

When you know the Essex you will want one. But you should place your order in advance if you would avoid disappointment in delivery.

The Essex, of course, does not cost as much as the Hudson, and though it is admittedly the runner-up in performance, it can never be all the Super-Six is.

In speed — in acceleration — in hill-climbing—in endurance—no stock car ever matched Hudson's famous records.

The Super-Six motor reduced vibration more than any other type. It checked the most destructive force automobiles must contend with. It added 72% to power, and almost doubled efficiency. And it made the Super-Six the largest-selling fine car in the world.

Supreme in Motor and in Design

But performance is not Hudson's only title to leadership. From the first it has set styles that the motor industry accepts.

It is a creator of coach design. Not only America but Europe reveals its influence in motor style. Models that are now standard with all fine cars were first introduced by the Hudson Super-Six.

Eighty thousand Super-Six owners place Hudson endurance above all its other notable qualities. For durability must always be the most important car advantage.

The Super-Six motor has proved the dominant factor in car endurance. None except Hudson can use it. If you would own all the supreme advantages of speed, power, acceleration, plus endurance, for which the Super-Six motor accounts, you must choose Hudson.

Weigh the facts.

What can any fine car give to compensate for lack of the Super-Six motor?

GRANDMA TIRED; PLEADS FOR AID FOR 2 CHILDREN

Wants Some One to Help Educate Them.

Grandmother, struggling to rear and educate her "little ones," has grown tired—"so tired." And she's 60 years old, and her hair is white as snow, and she feels she can't go on much longer as she's doing. So she's S. O. S-ing for help. It's rather a peculiar situation; it's like this:

Grandmother is Mrs. A. R. Minns, at present employed as housekeeper with a well known south side family. Her "little ones" are Wilfred and Muriel Rosecrans, 5 and 6 years old, respectively, the children of her daughter. Their father and mother both dead.

"Help Children at Home."

"I want to ask whether some one will not make it possible for me to educate the children," Mrs. Minns said. "Many persons spend much money helping to educate children in foreign lands; here is a chance for some one in the home land. It is so hard to work as a housekeeper and give the children the proper care also, sending them to school and all. I feel I can not go on with it much longer. I didn't know just what to do. I want to stay with the children, and so I thought I would appeal for some one to help me just for a few years to educate them.

"The children are well born, healthy in mind and body, intellectual, talented, obedient, and loving.

Forced to Work.

"You see, I have to work. My husband—their grandfather—is in Canada on a little farm we have there. For several years the crops have failed and he's not so young as he was, so I couldn't stay there with the children. I had to come to Chicago to work and care for the children."

Persons desiring to assist Mrs. Minns in her object may call the city editor's office of THE TRIBUNE, where they will be furnished with directions to get into touch with her.

INDUSTRY COUNT STARTS MARCH 1 FOR UNCLE SAM

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—Enumeration of the nation's industries, including manufacturing plants, mines, quarries, oil and gas wells, forestry and forests products, will start March 1, it was announced today by Director of Census Sam L. Rogers.

For the purpose of this census the country has been divided into 589 districts, and 1,206 men will be needed to make the count.

Complete statistics covering the industries are to be gathered and these will show accurately the economic situation of the country. Figures on the numbers of workers employed and hours and wages will be compiled. There now are about 400,000 manufacturing plants listed by the census bureau.

Men only will be employed to take the industrial census, the director stated, and payment will be made on the basis of $1 for each plant enumerated. Former soldiers, sailors, and marines will be given the preference for this work.

JAPAN AMBITIOUS TO BE "ENGLAND" OF THE FAR EAST

Cheap Labor and Wartime Impetus Help Plans.

BY FRAZIER HUNT.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 3.—Japan today, drunk with superwar profits, speculation, and ambition, is planning on being the England of the far east. She dreams of manufacturing and selling the things that the 1,000,000,000 people of the orient use.

At present Japan is on a wild buying bee, particularly in regard to factory machinery. For her cotton industry alone she has contracted for more than $10,000,000 worth of spindles, although this special phase of her buying is due to her pledges given at the Washington labor conference to shorten her hours of textile work from twelve to ten and to do away with the night shift for women and girls. But numberless new cotton manufacturing companies are likewise being organized, fascinated with the annual profits of 70 per cent to 100 per cent of the last two or three years.

Builded During War.

With all the rest of the world busy with active warfare Japan, whose only real contribution was a handful of destroyers in the Mediterranean and her own navy patrol in the Pacific, was able simply to gobble up practically all the trade in the far east. Germany was shut out of the field, England's factories were making munitions and army goods, and her ships were busy with war work. America, which made some commercial gains the first two years of the war, was thrown into the whirl of things, and her self-made embargoes clamped down the lid besides.

America Again in Field.

But today she finds America a much stiffer competitor than ever, while England is starting on the big fight to win back her old far east trade. Even more serious than either of these points she finds that the finest market of them all has itself closed its doors against her. She sees her goods thrown out of Chinese stores in China and burned in the streets; she sees the young generation of Chinese students growing up with such hate for Japan and her goods that they will mob stores that sell them.

All this is making her open her eyes to what her politicians and especially the foreign policies of her military are doing to her cherished commercial ambitions. And this in turn leads to the discussion of just how necessary it is for Japan to have special trade concessions and all the advantages that special spheres of influence give to the nation holding them. If Japan can successfully compete with the rest of the world without special favors or handicaps, then the dangers of friction, hatred and possibilities of stirring up just such resentment as in China at this moment are not worth the cost; but if her industries are backward and inefficient she must either hold these special trade handicaps or go out of business.

By and large, Japan can successfully compete against the world in certain lines, but in other lines she cannot now nor probably ever will be able to successfully compete on equal terms.

Labor Is Cheap.

Japan still has and will continue to have for many years great advantages as to cheap labor. She has great surplus labor—not idle, unemployed, but a surplus for the future. For instance, she still clings to old fashioned hand methods of farming, partly because they do not want to change and partly because the government understands that to introduce modern methods would throw millions of farm laborers onto cities that are not yet ready to absorb them. The same is true with hundreds of kinds of city work. In streets of Tokio and Kobe one sees twenty-five carts drawn by coolies to one drawn by a horse, and motor trucks are as scarce as dove tailed cats.

Get 50 Cents a Day.

Coolies are paid about 50 cents a day and only a few weeks ago 16,000 workmen in the Kawasaki dockyards in Kobe struck for an eight hour day and a pay scale that ran from 75 cents to $2.75 for skilled mechanics—and they broke tradition in Japan when they won their strike. The other day I walked through these great shops and I saw 12 year old boys working at lathes at 75 cents, their unprotected eyes dodging steel shavings. The maximum pay for the most skilled mechanic was $2.75, and he had to strike to get that much.

All of which means that Japan has great advantages over American manufacturers as to labor cost. But there are many things to offset this. First the labor is not as efficient. Next it costs from three to five times as much to build and install a factory here as it does in America. Then coal, repairs, replacements, improvements, etc., are two or three times more expensive. In many of Japan's industries, such as steel and cotton, the raw materials must be imported from great distances, although the ultimate markets are, of course, closer to hand.

In the cotton industry, where Japan holds great ambitions and has a reasonable basis for her hopes of controlling the far east markets, she must buy her spindles from either America or England, and then import her raw cotton from America or India or countries of equally great distance. She must pay at least double for her coal and her whole initial investment is far greater than for an American mill. But her labor is fully 300 per cent cheaper. Today Japanese mills work women twelve hours a day at an average wage of about 40 cents. This gives her advantages that offset all the disadvantages and means that, at least in the cheaper grades, she can compete with the world in cotton goods.

Silk Big Industry.

There are other fields that are unmistakably hers—the production of raw silk and the making of certain kinds of finished silk. This industry employs 30 per cent of all the people of Japan. Then in all kinds of small articles made by hand in home shops, requiring artistic skill—art goods, toys, curios—she has no fear of the rest of the world. But once she gets into the great field of steel and steel products it is questionable just how successfully she can compete without special concessions.

If Japan would settle her foreign trade ambitions on her legitimate fields of endeavor—and it must be understood that the war office demands that Japan make steel and Mongolia furnish wool for some future war—the open door for China and the loan consortium which would pay the doctor for the rebirth of China, would come without protest, bringing peace to the far east. But if her ambitions include success in fields which she is not geographically or industrially fitted for she will demand special concessions that will keep the orient in a continued swirl of passion, suspicion, and hatred.

Indiana Dunes Highway to Be Built with U. S. Aid

Gary, Ind., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—At a good roads convention held here this afternoon in which every county in northern Indiana was represented, State Highway Commissioner L. H. The dunes highway will be the shortest motor route between Chicago and Detroit. There remains to be constructed twenty-five miles between Gary and Michigan City.

POLICEMEN SUED FOR $50,000 FOR FALSE ARREST

Detective Sergeants Peter Christianson and Joseph Klaus, assigned to the state's attorney's office, were sued for $50,000 yesterday in a praecipe filed in the Superior court by Ever Peterson of 4508 North Seeley avenue. False arrest is the basis of the action, according to Louis S. Cohn, attorney for the plaintiff.

"When Mrs. Margaret Peterson obtained a divorce from my client last April," said the attorney, "she was given the custody of their 3 year old daughter, Dorothy, with the understanding that her former husband should be allowed to see the child every week. When she refused to let him see the girl for three weeks, he took matters into his own hands, went to her home, seized the girl and took her to Winnetka.

"The detective sergeants followed him to Winnetka, where they arrested him and held him in various police stations for thirty-two hours without booking him."

THAT 715 men in three months reported salary increases approximating $500,000, although 82 per cent of them had not yet completed their training?

THAT five months' training at home in spare time under the guidance of La Salle experts has qualified hundreds of men for $50 a week positions; ten to twelve months' training for positions paying $300 to $1000?

THAT La Salle trained accountants are holding important positions with practically every large industry in the United States, such as STANDARD OIL CO., ARMOUR & CO., FORD MOTOR CO., UNITED STATES STEEL, PENNSYLVANIA R. R., INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER, ETC.?

THAT there are only 3,000 certified public accountants in America, with 50,000 firms and corporations clamoring for competent auditors, cost accountants, comptrollers, income tax experts, senior, junior and certified accountants?

Investigate the big opportunities in this uncrowded field.

Make This Test Before You Buy

STILL the very latest and most advanced in phonographs is The Brunswick. This remarkable instrument has attracted nation-wide attention. Chiefly because of the Brunswick Method of Reproduction. This new development brings finer tone for every record, whatever make. No other instrument has these advanced ideas.

Now Brunswick Records

We bring now as a further contribution to the phonographic art our own make of records. We include all the fine standards of today, yet add what we consider a vast improvement. And this we know will be the verdict of the public.

This is the secret—each Brunswick Record is interpreted by a noted director or an accomplished artist technically trained in the art of recording. Thus we unite the talent of the artist with the genius of the composer.

ORDER POLICE TO CARD-INDEX ALL PRISONERS

Garrity Will Get Daily Report on Arrests.

A new system of police records will be installed today whereby Chief Garrity will have in his office every morning at 10 o'clock a complete list of all arrests made within the last twenty-four hours, together with the detailed history of each prisoner.

An order was issued by the chief yesterday to all commanding officers notifying them that sets of cards would be received by them by Feb. 1. The cards are of two colors, white and salmon. The white cards are known as "notifications of arrests," while the others are called "final dispositions."

Policeman Must Fill Cards.

A policeman is instructed to fill out both cards as soon as an arrest is made with the name, age, address and description of the prisoner, together with all detailed information regarding the charge and circumstances prior to and attending the arrest.

The white card is forwarded to the chief's office at once, while the salmon colored or final disposition card is kept at the station until the case is finally disposed of in court. Patrolmen and detectives making arrests are cautioned in the chief's order to pay close attention to the correct spelling of all names and aliases.

Prevent Hasty Writs.

One purpose which the card index system will serve will be to prevent the sudden release of prisoners on writs of habeas corpus. As soon as the chief's office is notified that a writ has been applied for, all information regarding the prisoner may be carried at once to the court without waiting for the arrival of the patrolman who made the arrest.

HEADS THE LIST

Detective Sergeant Who Studied Rogues' Gallery Picture and Partner Make 193 Arrests.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Detective Sergeants Albert K. Winge and Eugene A. McGrath lead the January police efficiency list with a record of 193 arrests for the month. It is shown in the monthly report that they rounded up more criminals during the recent crime drive than eight police stations combined.

Both have been doing inside work at the detective bureau for several months. McGrath, who had been in the office for more than a year, never missed a "showup" at the bureau and spent his spare time familiarizing himself with the features of old offenders.

Detective Sergeants Edward Birmingham and John J. McGinnis, who led the list for the year 1919, are second on the January list. William Gorman and Edward McGuire are third.

Detective Sergeants Michael Neary and Michael Vaughn lead the auto section list, and Detective Sergeants Albert Christianson and Thomas Duffy lead the pawnshop detail.

Five hundred and fifty-three arrests were made in January, and $141,150 worth of stolen propery recovered.

Chicago Store Celebrates Eighty-third Birthday

Chicago is growing old. A State street business house—C. D. Peacock, jeweler—is celebrating the eighty-third anniversary of its founding in February, 1837. The store was opened by Elijah Peacock, who came to Chicago from England, just before the city was chartered. The store was first located at 155½ Lake street. Three or four different sites were occupied before the civil war, and the great fire of 1871 burned out the store at 221 Randolph street. For twenty-six years it has been at State and Adams streets.

TRIBUNE BUREAU AIDS 20,000 TAX PAYERS TO DATE

Early Filing Is Urged to Avoid Congestion.

The second week of filing of income tax returns ended yesterday with the rush for schedules and information continuing at THE TRIBUNE'S income tax bureau up to the closing hour. This bureau gave out, during these first two weeks over 20,000 return blanks and gave advice and assistance in making them out and filing them to all who asked it.

There are only six weeks left in which to file these returns. March 15 is the day before which they must all be in and the first payments made. With an estimated 400,000 people who will have to file in this district, it is advisable to file as early as possible. Every facility for making them out and filing is at the service of the public constantly at THE TRIBUNE'S bureau. The bureau is open daily, except Sunday, from 9 to 5 and until noon on Saturdays.

Return on Rents.

Many concerns owning the property used for their business make a fictitious charge for rent. The purpose of this charge is to separate the profits resulting from the business operations of the company from the profits accruing to it as a property owner. In preparing the income tax return this credit to rent should be ignored. It should neither be included as income from rents, nor should it be included in expenses paid.

O. P. W. writes from Harlan, Ia.: "My father died, leaving 240 acres of land, one-third to his widow, one-third to a single daughter, and one-third to a married daughter having a husband and one minor child.

"We sold this land November, 1919, for $66,000, and received as a forfeit money payment $3,000, to be forfeited if settlement is not made March 1, 1920. Amount to be paid March 1, 1920, is $21,000, and to be paid March 1, 1927, $42,000.

"The buyer is to have a contract for the deed and when he makes his last payment, March 1, 1927, is to have a deed. He wants to give his note for $42,000 to go with the contract. This land was reasonably worth, any time during the year of 1913, $175 an acre.

Distribution of Taxes?

"What portion of the tax on the consideration in said sale will each of the sellers have to pay, and in what years will the income be taxed?

"Will it make any difference as to taxes under the real estate contract whether he gives notes for the amounts as they become due, or not?"

Answer: If the deferred payments were in small installments, it might be construed to be an installment contract and the sellers required to report in any one year only that proportion of each payment actually received which the gross profit to be realized when the property is paid for bears to the gross contract price. But if the deferred payments are few, and in large amounts, it is a closed sale, and the entire profit (difference between value on March 1, 1913, and selling price) must be reported in 1919. His giving notes with the contract would not change the rule.

Rent of Rooms.

R. H. writes: "I use two rooms in my house for business purposes exclusively. Can I deduct the rent for these rooms in making out my income tax return?"

Answer: If you rent your home and use a portion of it for business purposes, you may deduct as expense of business the proportion of the rent represented by the rooms so used.

If, however, you own the building which you occupy both for business and residence purposes, you are not allowed to make a deduction for the rental value of that part of the building which is used for business purposes.

H. W. E. writes: "According to my agreement with landlord I pay taxes on the property rented from him. Are these taxes deductible from my net income? If so, how will the landlord account for them in his return?"

Answer: You should include these taxes in determining the amount of rent paid.

The landlord should include in "Income from Rents," on the schedule, the amount of taxes paid on his property by the tenant. However, these may be deducted under "Taxes."

PROFIT SHARING INTRODUCED IN SELFRIDGE STORE

Ex-Chicagoan Also Leads in Housing British.

BY JOHN S. STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Harry Gordon Selfridge, the Chicago man who founded and runs the most successful department store in the English metropolis, is just now engaged in setting the pace for British business men in three separate activities. He has introduced in connection with his business the first profit sharing scheme ever inaugurated in the British dry goods trade and the most generous on record anywhere; he is showing Englishmen how to solve their housing problem, and he is accomplishing what was declared to be the impossible in big store building.

Like Field Scheme.

His profit sharing scheme, which has just been introduced, is frankly modeled on that in practice in the Marshall Field store in Chicago, from which Selfridge came to set the Thames on fire. He has notified all his employés that they can buy at par the ordinary shares, or common stock, of the company. Selfridge owns all the common stock himself, and thus is able to offer it at par, although its price in the open market would be much above par.

Furthermore, he guarantees a dividend on these shares 2 per cent higher than that which he receives himself, and he guarantees that the dividend shall never fall below 6 per cent. The maximum is 12 per cent, and that will be received by the new shareholders this year, as the dividend which Selfridge will receive is 10 pr cent.

Little Being Done.

The second activity in which Selfridge is setting the pace is house building for Englishmen to live in. The housing situation in England is acute, and in spite of all the efforts of the government to stimulate building little is being done to supply the shortage of houses. Selfridge at his own expense has acquired sites for 100 houses at Acton, a London suburb, and is erecting on them 100 concrete bungalows, each containing a kitchen, living room, three bedrooms, scullery, bath, hall, etc., at a cost of $1,800, of which $500 will be refunded by the government under its scheme for stimulating building.

All the houses were sold at cost price the day that the scheme was announced, and since then Selfridge has had requests for 10,000 houses from various British municipalities. Cement pouring began at 4:30 p. m. on Jan. 1 and the houses are to be ready for occupancy in six weeks. People say it can't be done, but Selfridge says he is going to do it.

The third record is being achieved in the extension of his store in Oxford street, the size of which is doubling.

"THE GOLD STANDARD OF VALUES"

Our New House That Would Not Heat

How I Solved the Problem

By Charles W. Hoyt

THIS story of my experience is not a piece of fiction. It is a real experience with the steam heating of a new home. A new home is lots of fun. It is a great satisfaction to stand about on the outside and look at it and to realize that it is all your own, especially if it is the first home you have ever owned.

If it is a new house you are sure to have trouble. We had ours in our new house at Garden City, Long Island.

We moved in the day after Labor Day. Everything was fine that first day, except for some delays in securing the furniture early enough so that we could spend the night there.

That first night we didn't have any electricity, because somebody had forgotten to deliver to the electric light company the inspector's certificate. The third night it rained. We found that we had a leak, and the ceilings in two bedrooms were ruined.

But these were only minor details. Altogether, during the month of September, with its glorious weather, everything went well.

The middle of October we started our heating plant. The contractor had run the steam-heating plant while drying the plaster. He had tested it, he told us, and knew that every room could be heated to a temperature of 70 degrees in zero weather.

Now the question of steam heat has always been a delicate topic between my wife and me. We have never agreed as to who of what was to blame when the heat did not come. But in our new house we expected great results. The contractor told us that we had a wonderful system. It did look rather good down in the cellar. The pipes were covered with asbestos, painted a nice white and bound with brass bands.

The contractor explained that we would have to release air from the radiators from time to time. "But all you have to do," said he, "is to take this little cap off and loosen this screw with a knife or screw driver." He told us that sometimes radiators become air-locked.

Finally colder weather came on and the troubles started. We forced the heater, because we could not secure heat in some of the rooms. As we forced the fire, the water left the boiler and passed up into the radiators. Then we thought of the contractor's directions and went around opening the valves. When we opened these valves a bucket of water came out over our new hardwood floors. The more we forced the fire, the more trouble we had, because the water went up into the radiators. As a result the radiators were noisy.

I called in the heating contractor. He looked it over and introduced some alterations. I don't know much about these things; but he talked about a vacuum being created, or something about back-pressure setting up, etc. He installed some extra return pipes, and said this would correct the difficulty.

The weather grew colder, and the steam-heating results worse. It was a sore subject between my wife and me. Whenever I returned home at night she looked volumes, wore a sweater, and shivered if she thought I was noticing her.

In the meantime, among the neighbors that I had met, was a man by the name of Mr. H. Hall Marshall. I learned afterward that he was a heating engineer and considered one of the best in New York. I talked to him about my troubles one day while on the train going to New York. He offered to look the heating system over the next Sunday. He did so, and spent about an hour studying the arrangement of the pipes, etc. He forced the fire strong to see what happened, examined the different radiators and made some suggestions. He expressed his opinion of the fellow who had designed and laid out the system and made me feel that I had something which was not worth a great deal.

Finally he said to me, "I'll tell you about one little thing which, I believe, will do more to make this system work properly than anything else. Do you know," said he, "what a Hoffman Valve is?" I told him that I never had heard of it. Then he explained to me that the Hoffman Valve was an automatic, mechanical device for letting the air out of a radiator and keeping the steam and water in. Said he, "I'll present you with one. I have one at my house which you can put on one radiator and see how it works. The valves which you now have on your radiators probably cost 25c each; compared with the Hoffman Valves they are not worth 5 cents."

So I took the valve that Mr. Marshall gave me and installed it on one radiator. It did exactly what he said it would do. That radiator worked to a charm. The air did escape and the water did not come out, and that radiator was hot from one end to the other.

I notified the heating contractor that I wanted the valves changed. He remonstrated, and insisted that the valves which were already installed were worth $1 each and that the Hoffman Valve would cost him three or four dollars each. He said this, I believe, because he didn't know the actual facts. I told him what the Hoffman Valves would cost and that if he was willing to credit me the amount which he said his valves cost, I would put on the Hoffman Valves myself. When I explained this to him he agreed to make the change without charge. So he put the Hoffman Valves on every radiator. Immediately our troubles ceased.

This happened about five years ago. I had never met anybody connected with the manufacturing of the Hoffman Valve until two years ago, when a gentleman called at my office and introduced himself as Mr. George D. Hoffman. He informed me that he was the designer and patentee of all the Hoffman Venting Valves. I told him about my experience and asked him to tell me why the use of the Hoffman Valves had transformed my heating system from a failure to a success.

Mr. Hoffman told me that his valve was a "perfect" air valve because its operation was based on certain fixed laws of physics. "Nothing ever just happens," said he; "there is always a fundamental, basic law that governs a certain fixed operation. Now it is easily understood that no radiator can be heated if the steam entering comes in contact with a bank of air—the air holds the steam back and no matter how much you force the fire in the cellar, that radiator will not heat up. Consequently I had to design a valve that would automatically allow the air in a radiator to escape without the slightest steam or water leakage. The Hoffman Air Valve is peculiar in its operation in that it positively distinguishes between steam, air and water—furthermore, it is absolutely automatic and absolutely non-adjustable. These claims are backed by a guarantee of five years' satisfactory service or money back, and although upwards of 1,500,000 of them have been sold, practically none have been returned for any cause. The Hoffman Air Valve has been scientifically tested and all these tests have proved that the Hoffman under all possible radiator conditions will always work perfectly. Each individual valve is tested and adjusted at the factory and thereafter it is non-adjustable; it is certain; it is fool proof. The trouble that you experienced with your heating system is the same as thousands of people are unnecessarily putting up with at this very moment. Mr. Hoyt, I want you to advise me how, by means of advertising, I can explain to the people of this country what an important bearing the Hoffman Valve has on their comfort, happiness and coal pile."

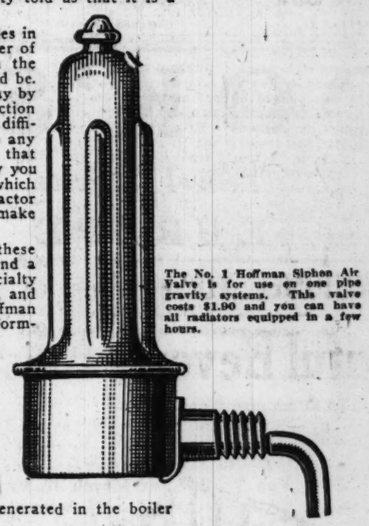
I told Mr. Hoffman that before my organization would advise him on the investment of money in a national advertising campaign we must investigate his product and satisfy ourselves that he had, in the Hoffman Air Valve, all he claimed it to be, namely—a "perfect" air valve.

We sent our investigators throughout the country interviewing engineers, steamfitters, architects and owners of buildings and homes. One large supply house in New York City told us about being called in by the owner of a big apartment house to look over his building, because he was having so much trouble with heating. They found that the contractor had installed inefficient air valves which had let the water out. It had cost the owner of the building a number of thousands of dollars for repairing ceilings which had been wet through because of water leaking in the different apartments. They found that a number of radiators were dead, because the valves didn't let the air out. This concern installed Hoffman Valves in the entire building, and the difficulty with dead and leaking radiators was stopped.

Furthermore, we were shown that the expense for fuel in this particular apartment house was curtailed by about 20 per cent.

We met another gentleman, and he was a man of experience and standing in the plumbing supply business, who told us about his own experience in a small house he had rented. He said that he had rented this house two winters before and that the tenant who lived in it previously had burned ten tons of coal in a short, mild winter season. When he took the house he installed Hoffman Valves throughout and also a Thermostat. He told us that he had heated this house through a long, cold winter with five tons of coal. He used twelve valves, the price of which, including installation, was more than made up for by the fuel saved in the first year of use.

Everybody we interviewed who knew of the Hoffman Air Valve was an enthusiastic booster for it. We found that the largest heating supply houses in the United States carry the Hoffman Valve in stock and recommend it. No one had anything but the highest praise for it. The great majority told us that it is a "perfect" air valve.



The No. 1 Hoffman Siphon Air Valve is for use on one pipe gravity systems. This valve costs $1.90 and you can have all radiators equipped in a few hours.

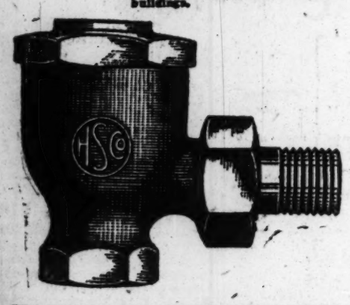
It may be that you have heating troubles in your own home. Or you may be the owner of an apartment house or hotel in which the heating is not as satisfactory as it should be. If so, there is one simple, inexpensive way by which you can prove to your own satisfaction that the Hoffman Valve will solve your difficulty just as it did mine. You can go to any steam heating contractor and tell him that you want a Hoffman Valve. Most likely you will want the Hoffman Valve No. 1, which will cost you $1.90. Your heating contractor will install it for you, if you wish, and make a reasonable charge for his time.

If it isn't convenient to secure one of these valves from your heating contractor, send a check for $1.90 to the Hoffman Specialty Company, 512 Fifth Avenue, New York, and they will send you one. Put the Hoffman Valve on the radiator and watch its performance. I feel certain that you will equip all of your radiators with Hoffman Valves. The expense will be small. You will be repaid directly by an appreciable saving in fuel, to say nothing of the greater comfort you will enjoy.

Hoffman Siphon Air Valves secure the greatest efficiency from steam-heating systems. A radiator equipped with a Hoffman Valve cannot become air-locked; the radiator is evenly hot from one end to the other. All the steam generated in the boiler is utilized for heating purposes.

The action of the Hoffman Valve in distinguishing between air, water and steam is almost mystical. If there is air in the radiator, the valve automatically opens and permits the air to escape. But if steam should attempt to follow the air, the valve closes instantaneously and confines the steam so that it performs its function of heating. Not a drop of water can pass through the valve. Spoiled floors in a room and ruined ceilings in the room below are an impossibility when radiators are equipped with Hoffman Valves.

The No. 9 Hoffman Return Line Valve for vapor, vapor vacuum, modulating and vacuum systems—the kind you usually find in hotels, apartments and office buildings.



Call in your steam heating contractor and in a few hours you can have your steam radiators Hoffman-equipped. Hoffman Valves are guaranteed perfect for at least five years or money back.

Wholesale heating supply houses all over the city are stocked with Hoffman Valves and can immediately furnish your heating contractor with the right ones for your steam system.

I. AND R. BODY TO MEET WITH NONE TO BACK SCHEME

Outside of Cook State Repudiated the Idea.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 31.—[Special.] Chairman F. R. Dove has called a meeting of the committee on initiative, referendum and recall for next Tuesday. But this committee is one of the very few to which nothing has been referred. No proposal on the I. and R. has been presented to the convention.

"Please announce clearly and emphatically that I shall urge the committee to give a full and complete hearing to every one who desires to talk upon the subject," Delegate Dove said. "I desire all information and facts available. Until some phase of the question is referred to the committee, I do not know what it can do, but we will have a meeting any way."

Fear I. and R. Bomerrang.

Some of the delegates fear that the I. and R. propaganda may be used to the detriment of Chicago's home rule program and also in promoting the downstate plan of limiting Chicago's representation in the general assembly.

This line of reasoning follows:

In the election of delegates to the constitutional convention the voters approved of the I. and R. idea by a majority of 48,292. The total vote for was 257,640 and aaginst 209,348, according to the official returns of the secretary of state. Therefore, the I. and R. enthusiasts urge that the convention obey the expressed will of the people.

Won Only Twenty-six Counties.

But the I. and R. idea carried only twenty-six of the 102 counties of the state. One of those counties is Cook. The vote there was 148,646 for and 76,267 against, leaving a majority of 72,379.

But it was different in the other 101 counties. If they had had the final say on the question it would have lost by a majority of 24,087. The downstate for the I. and R. was 108,994 for and 133,081 against.

In the strength of the I. and R. among the delegates, estimates vary. Some put it as low as thirteen and others as high as twenty-seven, with the delegates from Cook as the big factor.

Delegates Against Scheme.

Excluding the thirty-eight delegates from Cook, there are sixty-four downstate representatives. Of these sixty-four, only twenty-six come from counties which gave a majority for the I. and R. The other thirty-eight live in counties which voted against the idea.

Cicero J. Lindly said today:

"I only agreed to support the I. and R. if it carried my territory. In Bond county, where I live, it received 297 votes, and 1,200 were cast against it. Madison, the other county in my district, voted for it, but the district as a whole gave a majority of 228 votes against the I. and R., and I shall vote in accordance with that advice."

SEEK GIRL, STRANGELY MISSING.

The police were asked yesterday to search for Florence Goldenstern, 18 years old, 7741 Parnell avenue, who left her home Friday morning to go to her work at the plant of R. R. Donnelley & Sons, 731 Plymouth court but did not reach her destination.

LEGION NOTES

South Chicago post will hold a dance at Masonic hall, Ninety-first street and Exchange avenue, on Feb. 17.

The Khaki and Blue club in Grant park at Van Buren street and the South Side Soldiers and Sailors club for colored men at 3201 South Wabash avenue are open day and evenings to men in service, former service men, and wounded men at government hospitals. The clubs now conducted by the War Camp Community Service, will be in charge of the community service after Feb. 1. Meetings of American Legion posts can be held at either place.

Hub post, No. 269, gave a membership drive dinner at the Great Northern hotel last Tuesday, and every guest present pledged himself to bring at least one new member to the next meeting, on March 2. A "drive dance" will be given March 17.

The 108th sanitary train auxiliary will meet Thursday, Feb. 5, at 8 p. m., in the clubrooms at 17 North Wabash avenue, to elect officers and outline plans to increase the membership of the 108th Sanitary Train Legion post.

Blue Island post, No. 50, of the American Legion has elected the following officers: H. M. Schlimmer, commander; Paul T. Klenk, vice commander; Norris Quinn, adjutant; G. Diffenderter, financial secretary; George Heatly, sergeant at arms.

The William Peter LaForge post of the American Legion will hold a reception and dance at the Hotel La Salle Wednesday evening.

The George Irving Keyes post No. 435 will have a mass meeting tomorrow at the Patrick Henry school, Drake and Cullom avenues. Ex-service men in the district north of Addison avenue to the city limits and between Campbell and Crawford avenues who wish to join the post may do so at the hall or communicate with L. M. Sturgeon, 4301 North Sawyer avenue. Phone Irving 5144.

Lawndale post 104 of the American Legion has arranged to meet regularly on the last Friday of each month in hall number 5 of the Douglas park auditorium. The commander, Dr. L. S. Goldstein, has appointed a committee of three to do welfare work.

Midway post will hold its next meeting next Tuesday at Bartlett gymnasium, Fifty-seventh and University avenue. A basketball game with Woodlawn post will be the feature of the evening. Midway post is entering on an extensive athletic program and will be glad to hear from service men who are interested. A special invitation is extended to those men who attended the noncommissioned officers' school held at the University of Chicago during the war.

'CON CON' PLAN TO RELIEVE COUNTY CIRCUIT JUDGES

Cook county's Circuit court judges for many years have dictated to the fee officers of the county the limit of employés they shall appoint. Now the constitutional convention will be asked to turn that power over to the county commissioners, who make the appropriations for pay rolls. It is held that the judges of the Circuit court have all the work they can do to keep even with their dockets.

William H. Cruden, delegate to the convention, following a conference with Commissioner Robert W. McKinlay, chairman of the county board legislative committee, agreed to introduce a proposal to the convention Tuesday to relieve the judges of the duty now imposed upon them by law.

The county commissioners are marking time awaiting the report of the state tax commission before it can take up the work of the budget, which the law requires must be finished by the end of this month.

Two Paisleys Pay $1,400 Fines in Bank Case

Oliver F. and James T. Paisley appeared in Judge Oscar Hebel's court yesterday to pay $1,400 fines for receiving deposists while their three banks were insolvent.

SUSTAINS RIOT DAMAGE SUIT.

Henry Renfore, negro, injured in the race riots of last July, will be permitted to present his $5,000 damage suit against the city to the court. Judge David yesterday overruled the demurrer of the city to the suit. Judge John J. Sullivan recently sustained the city's demurrer in a similar case.

INTERCHURCH MOVEMENT WILL SEEK BILLION

At a conference of field workers of the interchurch world movement held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium yesterday, announcement was made of the forthcoming conference of laymen of every church participating in the movement. Similar conferences will be held in every state, under the direction of Lyman Pierce, financial director of the movement, before the drive for $1,000,000,000 is made late in the spring.

"The outlook for the interchurch world movement is getting brighter every day; the whole swing of sentiment and support is increasingly favorable, and we feel sure that the great object of the movement will be attained," said Dr. Abram E. Cory of New York, director of the field department of the movement.

"The various denominations participating in the movement feel that this great work is a matter of coöperation, and they are going about their task in a most businesslike manner. All the leaders in the crusade are highly encouraged."

Play to Be Given to Aid Protestant Children's Home

Perpetual Care Insures Lasting Beauty of Rosehill

THE tranquil beauty of Rosehill Cemetery so frequently acclaimed by visitors from everywhere is insured permanence by the existence of a Perpetual Care Fund totaling over $1,200,000.00.

Every lot sold in Rosehill is provided with perpetual care. This means that no less than 50 cents per square foot (this has now been increased to 75 cents) has been taken from the amount paid for the lot and placed in the Perpetual Care Fund. The agreement entered into with the lot owner guarantees—"To forever care for and maintain the foundation of any monument or headstone, to cut and water the grass, fill the graves and keep them in good order, and to resoil and resod when necessary."

Compare this with so-called Perpetual Care of other Cemeteries, where the amount set aside ranges from one cent to fifteen cents per square foot, and you will readily understand why there is a difference in prices.

Rosehill is the only Cemetery which agrees to do specific work on the lots provided with Perpetual Care.

Therefore, before purchasing a Cemetery lot, it would be advisable to compare not only prices, but the advantages and benefits derived from the commonly used and abused words—"Perpetual Care."

Rosehill Cemetery is so often misrepresented we think the following facts may be of general interest:

Rosehill is one of the three Cemeteries in or near Chicago which has a Perpetual Charter, granted by Legislature, which guarantees its absolute permanency. Any Cemetery organized since 1870 does not and cannot possess a Perpetual Charter.

Rosehill is not "nearly sold out," as is often reported, but has about half of its grounds yet for sale.

FLORIDA AND CUBA

Tours Leaving Feb 2, 9, 16, 23, Mar. 1 and 4, include both the West and East Coasts of the Summer Land, Florida, with an automobile trip across the Peninsula through the orange groves.

Tours Leaving Feb. 5, 12, 19, 26, include the East Coast and Havana, "The most foreign city in the New World," with its Old World customs and atmosphere, the real carnival Capital.

Leaving ice, snow, discomfort and all the hardships of the Northern Winter, you are quickly taken into the summer land of Florida herself, with her blue skies, tropical palms, famous beaches, warm sea bathing, princely hotels, summer customs and costumes. The East and West Coasts need no crier. The Riviera itself does not call back its sojourners more than do Palm Beach and the Florida winter resorts.

You share with all Americans the desire to "cross the water" on the "sea-going railroad" to out-flung Key West. All tours give this unique experience. Cuba herself would be worth a tour, even with Florida omitted. Here you are transported overnight to Old World customs with American comforts. The "Pearl of the Antilles" is as picturesque and foreign as the strangest parts of Europe.

Everyone wants to visit fashionable Florida in the height of the Palm Beach and Miami season. The only question is hotel accommodations. We have ours and can give you the room numbers when you book. Every member of a Raymond & Whitcomb Tour is thus assured comfort.

While Raymond-Whitcomb Tours are strictly limited in membership, they are unlimited in enjoyment and in all the luxuries of modern travel.

EUROPE

Tours to France and the Battlefields, Belgium, the Riviera, Chateau Country, Provence, Italy, Spain, Switzerland, Holland, Algeria, and Tunisia. Departures Feb. 21, Mar. 20, April 3 and 17, May 1, 15 and 20. Write for Booklet.

CANADA ECHOES BIBLE COMMAND FOR RICH FOLK

Industrial Leader Told to Give Up Millions.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—One of the significant progressive movements in Canada today is the Fifth Sunday Meeting association, which grew out of meetings in Montreal and public discussions during the war. The leader is J. A. Woodward, former conductor on the Canadian Pacific railroad, a man with a passion for the "under dog" such as characterized the acts and speeches of the late Harry Monroe of the Pacific Garden Mission. Though there is no religious tinge to this organization, its spirit is one of moral appeal. It deals with political and industrial conditions and seeks to weave into one coherent whole the radical groups that are forming everywhere in Canada, under farmer, labor, soldier, or other class leadership.

"Bullets or Ballots?"

"Bullets or ballots? Dictatorship or democracy? Chaos or construction?" This is the heading of one of their leaflets, which continues:

"The people of a nation cannot advance beyond the men who make its laws, and the Fifth Sunday Meeting association exists to see to it that the workers by hand or brain are directly represented in the lawmaking bodies of the dominion; to find, train, and elect the right men of our own class in order to secure the kind of legislation that will protect and advance the interests of the workers. It will wage warfare on plutocracy, despotism, economic privileges, and upon all the evil forces which burden the people and rob them of the happiness of living which is their fundamental right."

Laurier Woodward's Guide.

The organization has about 8,000 members and publishes a weekly paper. Its potentiality for guiding the workers along sane paths during the reconstruction period was foreseen by the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who appeared before its members and gave one of his last addresses. He also took Mr. Woodward in hand and guided his thought and reading.

Sir Robert Borden, the present premier, has also encouraged the organization. It advocates a permanent scientific tariff commission to take that question out of politics. It seeks affiliation in a political way with the farmers and the Labor party, and may take the lead in organizing a new national party. This, of course, would be in opposition to the new Liberal party, which is at present conducting a campaign. Mr. Woodward intimates that labor does not trust the promises of the Liberal party and will not be content to take its chances of legislation under that leadership.

"A man who controls probably $75,000,000 worth of property and industry in Canada called me to his office the other day," said Mr. Woodward, "and asked me to tell him what to do."

"'What shall I do?' he said to me, 'in this reconstruction?'

"I asked him if he would rather keep his millions or his position. He said his position. Then I told him that he must give up his millions for the common good.

"'Show me a plan,' he said."

Would Bar Men Servants.

Comfortable, decent, and sanitary housing for the workers is one of the first reforms advocated by Mr. Woodward. He contrasts the slums with the "glittering mansions" of Montreal. He thinks that men should not be kept at menial work that women could do, when the land and the shops are crying for labor. He would not have a fine, strong ex-soldier dolled up in knee breeches and spangles, opening doors, and holding hats, and carrying trays in the hotels of the wealthy.

Mr. A. O. Dawson, vice president of the Canadian Cotton mills, told the social service council of Canada the other day that during the year 1919 the cotton mills in the United States and Canada fell over 700,000 bales behind the same period in 1916 in the quantity of cotton turned into goods of various kinds, although employing more machinery and more workers than in 1916.

Favors Profit Sharing.

"To my mind," said Mr. Dawson, "one of the gravest dangers we have to face is the possibility of the increased power of the organized workers passing under the control of ultra radical leaders, who are continuously, persistently, and aggressively preaching socialistic doctrines. On the other hand, a closer association between brain and hand worker in every corporation is much to be desired." He said he had much hope in the profit sharing movement.

LABOR NOTES

James S. Forrest, secretary of the Pattern Makers' association of Chicago, said last night that 500 pattern makers have had their wages raised to $1.25 an hour, effective tomorrow. Their old scale was $1.15 an hour.

Because it will make them get up earlier, the Milk Wagon Drivers' union, local No. 753, has protested to the city council committee against the proposed daylight saving ordinance.

John McKay, president of the Window Washers' union, said last night that the strike of the window washers was called off yesterday. He said that piece work was abolished and the minimum wage will be $36, with $42 for scaffold and extension ladder work, and a forty-four hour week.

J. Marcus Keyes, Chicago representative of the Actors' Equity association, said yesterday that a dispute with the Messrs. Shubert had been settled satisfactorily to both sides. A threatened strike against the Shubert theaters will not take place.

The Chicago Federation of Labor will hold its regular meeting this afternoon at Musician's hall, 175 West Washington street.

Switchmen's Union of North America, local No. 199, gave its annual ball last night at Eagles' hall, Archer and Campbell avenues.

SUES DOCTOR FOR $50,000.

Mrs. Lilly T. Warner, 4656 Washington boulevard, filed a damage suit for $50,000 yesterday against Dr. W. H. Stackable, 4100 West Madison street. Alleged malpractice, based upon an operation performed by the doctor, is the basis for the suit.

COST UNCLE SAM 700 MILLIONS TO 'PLAY RAILROAD'

Give Figures of Unified Federal Control.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—Operation of the railroads, Pullman lines, express companies and waterways, unified under federay control, has cost the nation approximately $700,000,000 since they were taken over two years ago. Figures made public by the railroad administration tonight revealed a net loss of $594,200,000 from railroad operation alone in the two year period. Statistics gathered from official sources as to operating costs of the Pullman lines and waterways and express companies show the addition of $100,000,000 to the transportation costs.

Heavy losses of November and December are charged to the coal strike in a statement by the railroad administration. A deficit of $111,500,000 was shown for these two months after the two month's proportion of the annual rental was paid. December revenues were said to be about $15,700,000 above actual operating expenses, while the revenues for November, according to interstate commerce commission figures, exceeded actual operating expenses by approximately $19,000,000. The monthly share of the annual rental has been computed generally at $75,000,000.

Much of the loss during 1919 should be charged to the first six months of the year, according to the official explanation. The statement shows that of a loss of $349,200,000 for the twelve months, $228,700,000 came during the first six months' "slump in freight business following the armistice." It adds that "if the rate increase which went into effect in June, 1918, had become effective the previous January, the loss for the two years would probably not have exceeded $104,000,000.

SUES FOR $100,000 COMMISSIONS.

Charging that Attorney J. E. Erb had failed to pay commissions in connection with an oil deal in Louisiana, L. A. Caldwell filed a damage suit for $100,000 yesterday against Erb.

GOMPERS URGES LATIN AMERICA TO FORM UNIONS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—Workers in the Latin-American republics are urged, in a manifesto issued today by Samuel Gompers, chairman, and other officials of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, to organize national labor associations for affiliation with the Pan-American organization.

This action is recommended "to the end that the workers of all the American countries may be better prepared to act concertedly for their mutual protection and advancement and to impose a check upon those forces who would subordinate them to their own material aggrandizement."

Calling attention to the third pan-American labor congress, to be held in Mexico City beginning July 12 next, the manifesto says the workers in the Americas should begin now to make preparations for sending their representatives to this gathering.

JANUARY CORN SELLS AT BEST SEASON'S PRICE

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

An advance in January corn to $1.51, the highest price of the season, which was held at the last, was the feature in corn.

St. Louis cash handlers were the largest longs and the close was 2c higher. Other months gained ⅞@¾c, with the close well toward the highest of the day. Oats finished ¼@⅜c higher, rye up 2½c, and barley unchanged. A more confident feeling prevailed among holders, although they took profits on the bulge and there was evening up for the week.

Closing trades compared with a week ago showed January corn up 6c for the week, February 2¾c higher, May unchanged, and July ½c lower. Oats gained ½@⅝c, May leading. Rye, ½c higher on May, 4½c up on July, and 3c lower for January, while barley gained 3½c. In provisions lard was the feature, losing 90@95c, while May pork lost 30c and short ribs were 2½c higher on January and 20@27½c lower on distant months.

Profit Taking Checks Corn.

Following their experience of the previous day, when corn prices faded away rapidly after being sharply higher early, the local element were not inclined to buy freely, despite the prospective reduction in the acreage of all grains as indicated by the developments at Washington. At $1.36½ for May there was free selling by scattered longs, who were evening up for the week, and from holders of offers. Buyers were readily filled up, and a drop of ⅞@1c followed, the close being at intermediate figures.

Country shorts in January covered freely, advancing prices 2c to $1.51, the best figure of the season, and the full upturn was maintained at the last. After the close 60,000 bu were delivered on contracts. Cash corn sold rather slow, and part of the No. 4 grades brought a full delivery basis under January, the finish being rather easy. No change was shown in the car situation. Reports from the southwest said railroads held out no prospect of relief for some time to come.

Oats Show Firm Undertone.

At no time were oat prices more than ½c under the close of the previous day. The strength in corn led to fair buying early, but profit taking and selling against offers filled buyers up, and the close was at intermediate figures, showing fractional net gains.

Local bulls bought May at 84c, but were unable to check the decline from the high point. Premiums in the sample market showed no signs of weakening, and offers to arrive were above buyers' views.

Scattered commission houses bought rye early, and made a fair advance, but selling by local professionals caused a reaction toward the last. The seaboard was after cash grain and secured 25,000 bu at 11c over May, track Baltimore.

Barley firm, with spot sales at $1.35@1.52. Receipts, 18 cars.

Clover seed easy. Country lots, $45.00@58.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 30c lower; March, $35.20 per bu of 60 lbs. Timothy seed firm. March, $15.50 asked. Country lots, $10.00@14.50 per 100 lbs.

Cash Houses Buy Ribs.

Trading in provisions was not large. A feature was the buying of May ribs by a cash house, which traders were disposed to attribute to packers. The close was at gains of 2½c. July was easy and 2¼c lower. Lard was sold freely by commission houses and packers and bought by commission houses, the close being 5@7½c higher. Armour is buying cash lard at 90c under the May and selling the May. Shipments of lard for the week were unusually large, 18,817,000 lbs, against 10,209,000 lbs last year. Meat shipments of 46,636,000 lbs increased 10,000,000 lbs over last year. Cash trade generally was slow. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

January corn went out at the top of the season, $1.50¾@1.51. The action was distinctly different from that at the close of December, which went out at the low point of the day, or around $1.39@1.39½. It was said by those who watched the trading closely that 500,000 bu were sold at $1.51 and close to 1,000,000 bu were traded in, all told, at a range of $1.49¼@1.51. George H. Powell, a St. Louis cash handler, was the largest long. Mr. Powell has been in Chicago for several days, and said after the close that he had 365,000 bu bought against cash sales for January, February, and March shipment. He bought the February at 8c under the January, as the latter was sold out.

The trade is inclined to be rather more friendly to the buying side of corn on breaks, believing that the movement will not be materially increased in the next thirty days, as the cars are likely to continue scarce. At the same time there are many traders who believe that, as Chicago has advanced to above many of the outside markets, corn from territory that has been going elsewhere will be turned this way. Increasing arrivals are looked for here, while the aggregate movement of corn is not expected to enlarge.

In regard to shipment of Canadian wheat to the United States, a Winnipeg man wires in response to an inquiry as follows: "Understand there is 10 to 20 cars wheat shipped daily from Calgary to Montana in American equipment. This wheat said to be for seed purposes, not for milling. Wheat is being shipped under arrangement with wheat board, and as board has not made matter public very little is known about the deal apart from few details which appeared in daily paper early this week and of which we sent you clipping. About 500,000 bu sold all told."

Southwestern markets are receiving consigned corn from Nebraska and Iowa, although the movement is not large. Railroad officials say they do not look for a big car supply in the near future.

While a majority of the pit element were inclined to make light of the unrest which prevails among farmers, those in close touch with the situation regarded it as very serious, and called attention to the fact that were there a general move to reduce the acreage for only one year, the effect on the cost of living would be extremely drastic. There has been a great change in the conditions in the last few years, and as farmers have plenty of money it would not be surprising if the corn acreage was cut down, especially if prices do not advance to a point where $1.50 per bu can be secured generally at loading stations.

Country roads south of Bloomington, Ill., have commenced to break up, according to E. I. Mansfield, with Bartlett Frazier Co., who returned from central Illinois. He found a lot of grain had been moved out of that section, mainly from one station to another, and to feeders and to the southern trade. Industries have been buying in a hand to mouth way, and if the movement starts to decrease an acute situation may develop.

Provision specialists are inclined to regard the buying of cash lard at 90c under May as a very weak feature. They believe it reflects the slow cash demand better than anything else, and say that the only call is from carriers who are selling May against the purchases. Armour bought cash lard yesterday and sold May. It is understood that some of the storage warehouses are getting rather full of product, although others still have considerable space available.

E. J. Shaack of Ware & Leland, who has been in the southwest, says that railroad conditions in that section are little different from those prevailing around Chicago. Motive power is very short and cars furnished for grain at country loading stations are mainly in bad order, with some impossible to use. Farmers are not disposed to sell, and the demand for cash corn has improved. A large number of changes in farm tenants will be made this year on account of big land speculation.

There was selling of corn around the top price by holders of offers and to take profits on purchases made at lower prices. One house with eastern connections was a heavy seller of May on the advance, weakening it ½c. A local holder was a free seller of May oats on the advance, which checked the upward movement.

Country holders of oats were more disposed to sell for sixty and ninety day shipment. They asked 4¼@4½c over May for No. 3 white, with bids 3½c over. A car of No. 2 white sold at 91½c on team track, the highest of the season.

January deliveries yesterday were 60,000 bu of corn, 60,000 bu of oats, 300,000 lbs of lard, and 150,000 lbs short ribs. For the month of January they were 218,000 bu corn, 250,000 bu oats, 481,000 bu rye, 15,000 bu barley, 1,250 brls pork, 9,700,000 lbs lard, and 1,900,000 lbs short ribs.

COTTON PRICES SLUMP AGAIN

New York, Jan. 31.—Cotton declined and closed at the lowest of the day with losses of 46 to 69 points. Foreign exchange was lower and the disposition is to await the action of the money market and establishing of credits. These conditions are keeping the spot market quiet, and the south is said to be showing no signs of weakness. Weekly statistics were regarded as bearish. Liverpool and the south were sellers and imports of cotton goods are said to be increasing. Prices follow:

NEW YORK BANK REPORT SHOWS GAIN IN RESERVE

With an increase of more than $9,500,000 in the excess reserve, bringing that item up to $22,925,260, the New York bank statement made a much better exhibit than had been expected. The reserve increase was brought about by both a moderate decrease in deposits and an increase of more than $9,000,000 in cash.

The government figures showed that the treasury department had only withdrawn net $15,431,000 instead of a larger amount predicted. There was a fair decrease in loans, $29,334,000. The figures are, if anything, reassuring from the money market viewpoint.

Statement for Week.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank made a rather steady showing of condition for the week. The member banks had a decrease of $2,315,924 in bills discounted secured by government paper, but increased their rediscounts on commercial paper by $1,633,167. Other Federal Reserve banks showed a slight gain in their borrowings, $1,865,500.

The Reserve bank bought in the open market an increase of $12,132,005 in bills.

Chicago Bank Statement.

Like the New York statement, the Reserve bank showing is for the time being reassuring. The figures:

LIVE STOCK ON FARMS JAN. 1 SHOWS DECREASE

Farms in the United States had 215,760,000 head of live stock on the farms on Jan. 1, 1920, a decrease of 2,664,000, or 1.2 per cent less than a year ago, as given by the government report of the department of agriculture in its returns issued yesterday. The valuation was $3,561,443,000, compared with $8,827,894,000 a year ago, a decrease of $33,549,000.

A decrease of 2.2 per cent, or 1,675,000 hogs, was shown, as compared with a year ago, the total being the second largest on record. The valuation of $19 compared with $22.04 last year, which was the highes ton record. Milch cows increased 272,000 in number, while the valuation of $85.39 increased $7.05. Other cattle decreased 700,000, with an average valuation of $43.12 per head, compared with $44.16 a year ago. Sheep decreased 251,000, with the average value per head $10.51, or 99c lower than last year.

Horse Supply Large.

Supplies of horses are large, although showing decreases, there being 273,000 less than last year, and the smallest number in six years. The valuation of $94.72 decreased nearly $4 for the year. Mules decreased only 41,000, while the valuation of $147.25 increased $11.66.

No estimate is made of the live stock in cities and villages. In 1910 the census report was horses 3,183,000, mules 270,000, cattle 1,879,000, sheep 390,000, swine 1,288,000. The number of horses and mules has decreased materially in ten years, being superseded by the automobile and motor trucks.

is today the World's Greatest Business Man. It is on the productiveness of his labor and efforts that all other business depends. To increase such production the farmer must be financed and it is our duty to respond.

Forman Farm Mortgages are Selected Mortgages. For over thirty-five years we have made a specialty of farm loan investments and in that length of time not one dollar of principal or interest has been lost to the purchaser of our Farm Mortgage investments.

The two booklets shown will explain in detail just how our business is conducted.

Fill in the coupon and a copy of each will be sent to you. This is for the large as well as the small investor.

Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation

10-Year 7% Convertible Debenture Bonds

Dated January 1, 1920 In $100, $500 and $1,000 Denominations
Due January 1, 1930

This corporation is the largest single producer of raw sugar cane in the world, its output exceeding one-seventh of the entire production of the Island of Cuba.

The Company has no other bonded indebtedness, nor can any be created as long as any of these bonds are outstanding.

Net tangible assets practically four times amount of this bond issue.

Earnings for the past five years have averaged 5¾ times annual interest charges on these bonds.

The convertible feature should prove extremely valuable from a speculative standpoint.

We recommend these bonds for investment at $100 and interest from January 1, yielding 7%.

FIDELITY BANK DEPOSITORS MAY GET 20C ON $1

Dividends amounting to 20 to 25 cents on the dollar will be paid to the depositors of the defunct Fidelity State bank, formerly located at 2954 Milwaukee avenue, according to an estimate filed yesterday by the receiver, Walter Schrodja. He has been working on the assets and liabilities of the bank since April, 1918.

The bank was closed Feb. 1, 1918, by State Auditor Russel, and in October of that year Edward Szajkowski, president of the bank, was arrested for alleged embezzlement. His trial has been set for Feb. 16.

Mr. Schrodja's report shows that the receiver has on hand $33,864.77, representing a balance of receipts and disbursements. Notes amounting to approximately $120,000, but which are not certain of being collected, are also held. The total claims filed with the receiver are $170,363.93. The total claims not filed amount to $64,336.61.

Building Conditions

Authorities state that it will take five to ten years for the United States to catch up on building operations.

Catching up means that we will then again be able to KEEP UP with the normal demand from year to year. The normal building in a nation of over 100,000,000 people is in itself tremendous.

Albert Pick & Company is the largest concern in the United States catering to the complete equipment of hotels, furnished apartment buildings, cafeterias, restaurants, soda parlors, rest rooms and recreation rooms in industrial institutions.

Think what this tremendous amount of building means to Albert Pick & Company, a successful organization of many years' standing, equipped in every way to take on the vast business that must be taken care of and which will naturally come to them.

We recommend Albert Pick & Company 7% Preferred Stock at 97 and accrued dividend to yield 7.22%.

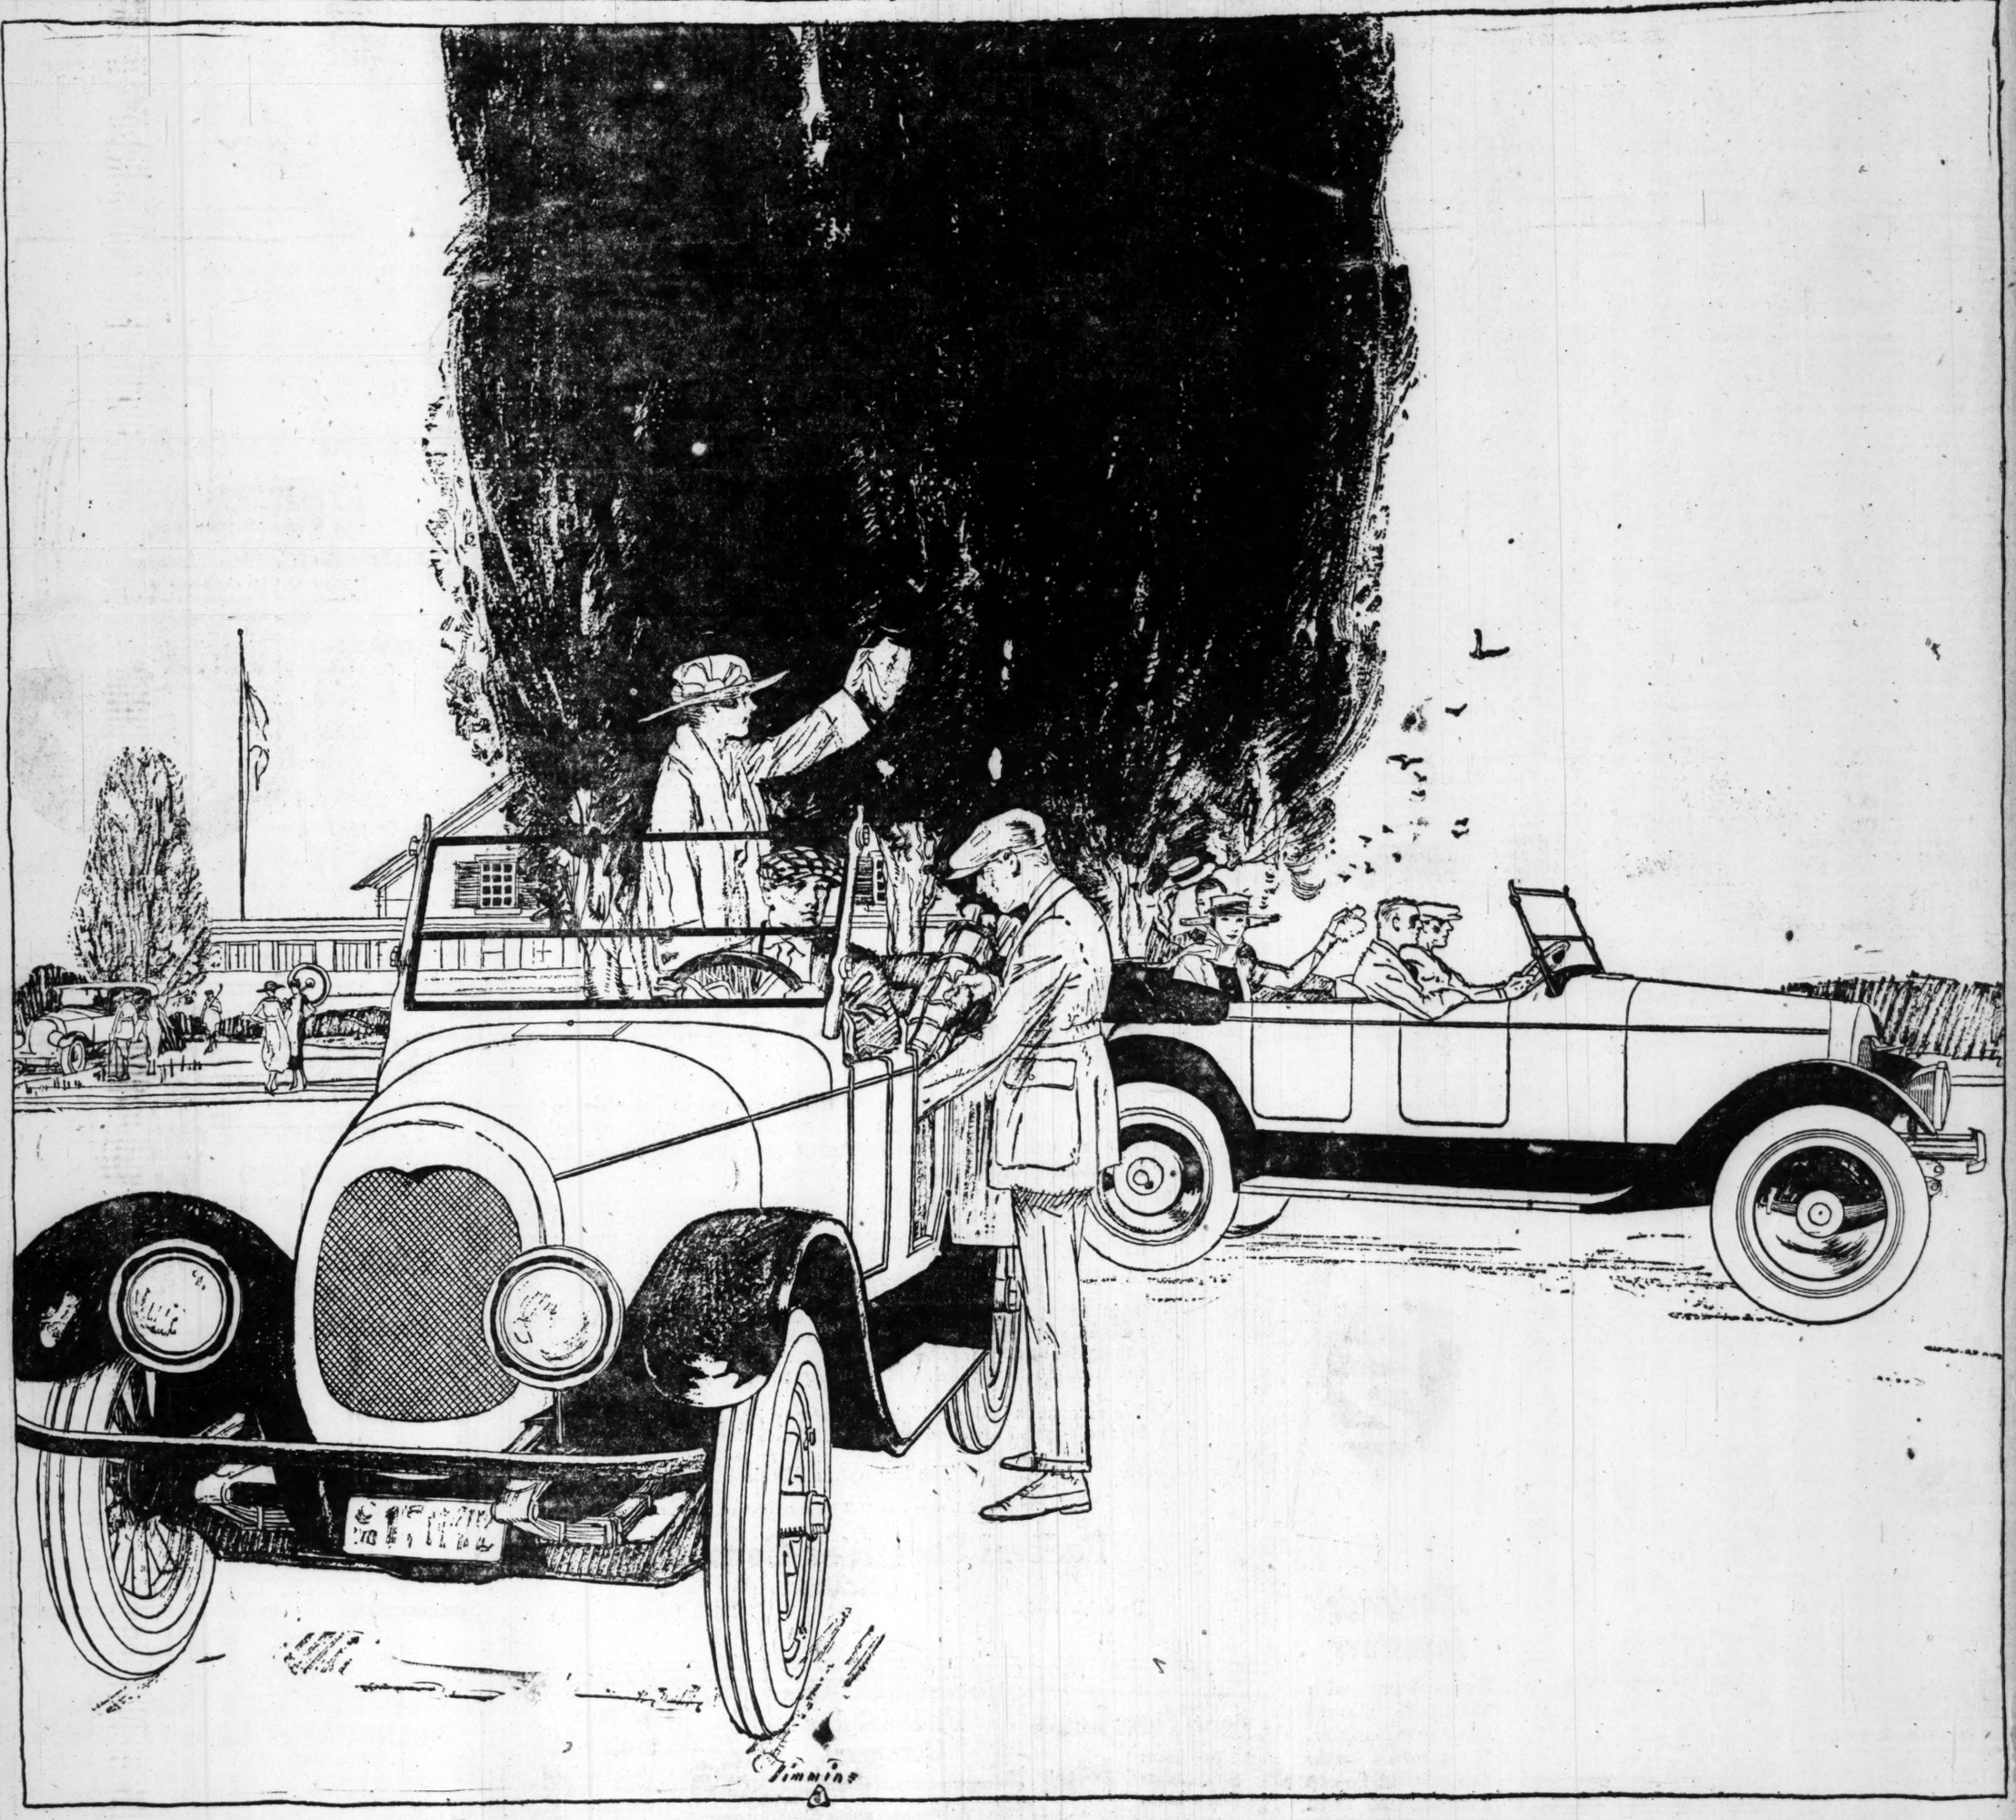
HOLMES

Improved Air Cooled



A Supreme Achievement in Motor Car Construction

THE verdict of experienced motor car owners has been passed. And the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Car has won unqualified endorsement—has been accepted as the leading car in the world in real motor car advantages: Economy of Operation; Comfort in Riding: Serviceability in Road Performance; Luxury in Seating Arrangements; Style in Design.

Holmes Improved Air Cooling, with the power efficiency of the eighteen valve motor, all valves in the head, has brought a fuel economy of 18-20 miles to the gallon to a car of 126" wheel base, carrying seven passengers in the touring car, six passengers in the Sedan. A flexible frame, without rigid cross members, in a car mounted on full elliptic springs, brings boulevard comfort to all roads, permitting speed averages of 30-40 miles an hour where other cars must slow down to 18-20 miles.

The shock eliminating qualities of the Holmes chassis protect the car against unusual wear, bringing long life and freedom from necessity for frequent mechanical attention—in tire economy this is expressed in a service of 10,000 miles to the set.

In the body dimensions, full seating space is afforded for all occupants, the longest rides may be enjoyed without any feeling of being cramped for room.

Body designs are distinctive and dignified, presenting an adaption of the lines accepted as standard for cars of quality. Models include Sedans, Coupes, Touring Cars and a 4-passenger Roadster.

ORIGINAL

CREOLE PRALINES

(GRUNEWALD)

"The South's Most Famous Confection"

If you have ever visited New Orleans then, of course, you have tasted Original Creole Pralines (Grunewald).

For a great many years the Hotel Grunewald caterers have made and sold these pralines. The demand has become so great that we are now supplying them the country over direct by mail, parcel post insured, put up in a special mailing carton, specially constructed so that each praline has its own compartment.

Original Creole Pralines (Grunewald), "The South's Most Famous Confection," are absolutely pure—made only of pure Louisiana Cane Sugar and Louisiana (whole-half) pecan meats. The pecans used are the famous paper shell pecans secured from Louisiana plantations.

Our Pralines are not manufactured by machinery. They are "made," each praline being dropped hot from the copper kettles on waxed paper.

Scrupulous care is maintained throughout in producing this famous candy. Cleanliness and purity are Grunewald watchwords. That's why Original Creole Pralines (Grunewald) are regarded everywhere as the highest quality Creole Pralines made.

A delightful confection, dessert, or after-dinner dainty. Absolutely pure and wholesome.

Do not accept substitutes for Original Creole Pralines (Grunewald).

The Hotel Grunewald Caterers are housed in their own separate specially designed building in connection with the famous Grunewald Hotel at New Orleans.

NICOLAI LENINE—A new photograph of the head of Russia's soviet government, taken in the courtyard of the Kremlin at Moscow. It is undoubtedly the best likeness of him that has reached this country. This Russian aristocrat (he was born of a noble family) has been the virtual dictator of "red" Russia since 1917, when the Kerensky regime was overthrown. His real name is Vladimir Ilitch Ulianoff.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS isn't in evidence as much as she used to be, but if you saw her supporting Marguerite Clark in "A Girl Named Mary" you'll admit that she was never a better actress. To Miss Williams largely belongs the credit for the first coupling of public attention to the screen. In the serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," she attracted world wide notice.

This popular lady was born in Butte, Mont., and educated at Wesleyan university and the New York School of Dramatic Art. She was on the stage for a number of years and started her screen career with Selig. She then went to Morosco-Paramount. She has appeared in oodles of films, but never has she been sweeter than in "A Girl Named Mary." She should always play Mrs. Jaffrey sort of roles.

HENRY B. WARNER is a gem'man to be jealous of if one were his wife! Why? Well, aren't all the girls simply dippy about him? I have a sneaking feeling, though, that Mr. Warner takes his adulation with the proverbial grain of salt and is not unduly elated thereby.

He's an Englishman, you know. Born in London, 1876, and educated at the Befford Grammar school. He first appeared on the stage with his father in 1883 in "The Streets of London." In 1905 he came to this country and made his American debut in "Nurse Marjorie." His screen career started with Ince. He's been with McClure Pictures, with Frohman, and is now appearing in Jesse D. Hampton productions. The much envied Mrs. Warner is Rita Stanwood.

"Just like your mother—you always have a bottle of Sloan's Liniment handy!

"WHENEVER I complained of a Rheumatic Twinge, or suffered from Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Sore Muscles, Stiff Joints, she used to say, 'We'll just apply a little Sloan's, Father; that'll relieve the pain in short order!' and it did, too!"

Sloan's Liniment owes its national popularity to its unfailing ability to penetrate without rubbing to the afflicted part and promptly produce a warm tingle of comforting relief. In thousands of households it is constantly kept handy for the quick relief of all external pains and aches. "The World's Liniment" for thirty-eight years, it never breaks faith.

Obtainable at all druggists, 35c, 70c, $1.40.

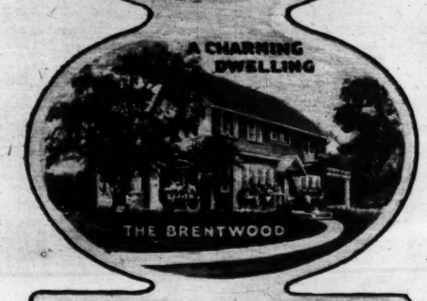
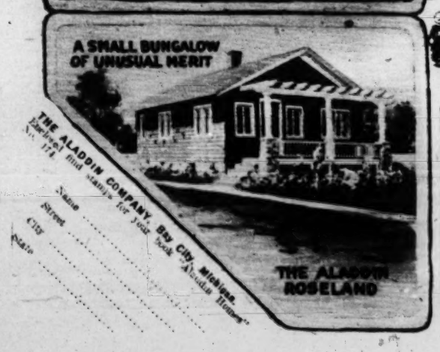
Aladdin

Readi-Cut Homes

Reduce Present High Building Costs





$100 Minus Lumber Waste $82

Save the Waste

$100 Minus Labor Waste $70

SAVE THE WASTE AND REDUCE THE COST—The Aladdin System scientifically prepares the materials and conserves the labor. You can save 18% on the cost of the lumber and 30% on the cost of the labor.

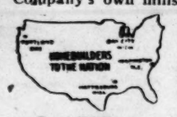
Certified records of thousands of Aladdin Homebuilders in every state prove these statements. You can prove these statements for yourself, for there is an Aladdin Home near you wherever you live.

The pictures at the right tell the story of scientific preparation and handling of materials and the efficient conservation and direction of the labor.

Fourteen years' success of the Aladdin System of construction have firmly established its many advantages. The Lumber that's wasted costs just as much as the lumber that's used. The only possible way to reduce the present high prices of lumber and labor is to save the usual waste. The Aladdin System prepares all the lumber in our mills ready to be nailed in place. Waste of lumber is reduced to less than 2%. Cost of labor is reduced 30%. One man will do in six days, with Aladdin materials, what it requires ten days to accomplish without Aladdin's System. The book, "Aladdin Homes," sent free to prospective builders, explains this completely and thoroughly.

Greatest Distributing System of Lumber in the World

Shipments of Aladdin Readi-cut Homes will now be made from the four greatest timber producing sections in the United States. From the Atlantic to the Pacific—from Canada to the Gulf—Aladdin can serve you wherever you live. Aladdin houses are manufactured and shipped direct from the Aladdin Company's own mills in Michigan, Mississippi, North Carolina and Oregon. Wherever you live, Aladdin houses come to you in a straight line from the nearest timber region.



Four Mills—Four Offices

Aladdin's National Homebuilding Service means shorter routes, quicker delivery and lower freight rates for builders in every part of the United States. Three days to a week are saved in shipments reaching destination.

Complete Sales and Business Offices are maintained in connection with each mill. Fully twenty-four hours time is saved in your mail reaching our offices.

Bungalows, Dwellings, Garages—Send for 100-page Book

Beautiful Aladdin Homes shown in the Aladdin 100-page book have a charm for every one desiring a home. Bungalows of 4 rooms to 10 and 12 rooms, in shingled walls, heavy siding or stucco, are well represented in this book. Dwellings of one and two stories, Colonial types and cottages to suit the designs of every builder. Many illustrations in actual colors. Exterior and Interior illustrations, made direct from actual photographs of each Aladdin Home as it is now built and occupied in many parts of the country, portray the most popular designs of home today. There is an important message for every homebuilder in this book. It points the way to a better home at reduced costs. It helps you to avoid present high building prices. Send for a copy today.

Dollar-a-Knot Quality

Aladdin's Dollar-a-Knot Guaranty is Proof of High Quality. Knotless Lumber, the purest and clearest that ever came out of the forest, is the kind that Aladdin houses are made of. This is evidenced by our famous Dollar-a-Knot guaranty, which has now been in effect for over four years. Better quality lumber does not grow. The highest grade paints, hardware, doors, windows, millwork, etc., are all included with every Aladdin house. The same grade, for best, is furnished for the small as for the large houses.

20 ft. of Lumber from a 16 ft. Board

The Aladdin System of Homebuilding has been practicing for fourteen years the principle the World has only learned during the war—the elimination of waste of lumber and labor. The Aladdin Book explains this System thoroughly, shows how 20 feet of lumber is cut from a 16-foot board. The great Aladdin organization, composed of experts in every branch of homebuilding, stands ready to help you build your home at a saving. Put this group of experts to work on your problem. Send for the interesting book, "Aladdin Homes."

Aladdin Houses Cut-to-Fit

The Aladdin Book of Homes has a message for you. Amongst its pages, profusely illustrated in colors, leading home designs are represented to you. Aladdin houses are cut-to-fit as follows: Lumber, millwork, flooring, outside and inside finish, doors, windows, shingles, lath and plaster, hardware, locks, nails, paints, varnishes. The material is shipped to you in a sealed box car, complete, ready to erect. Safe arrival of the complete material in perfect condition is guaranteed. A New Air Thriller

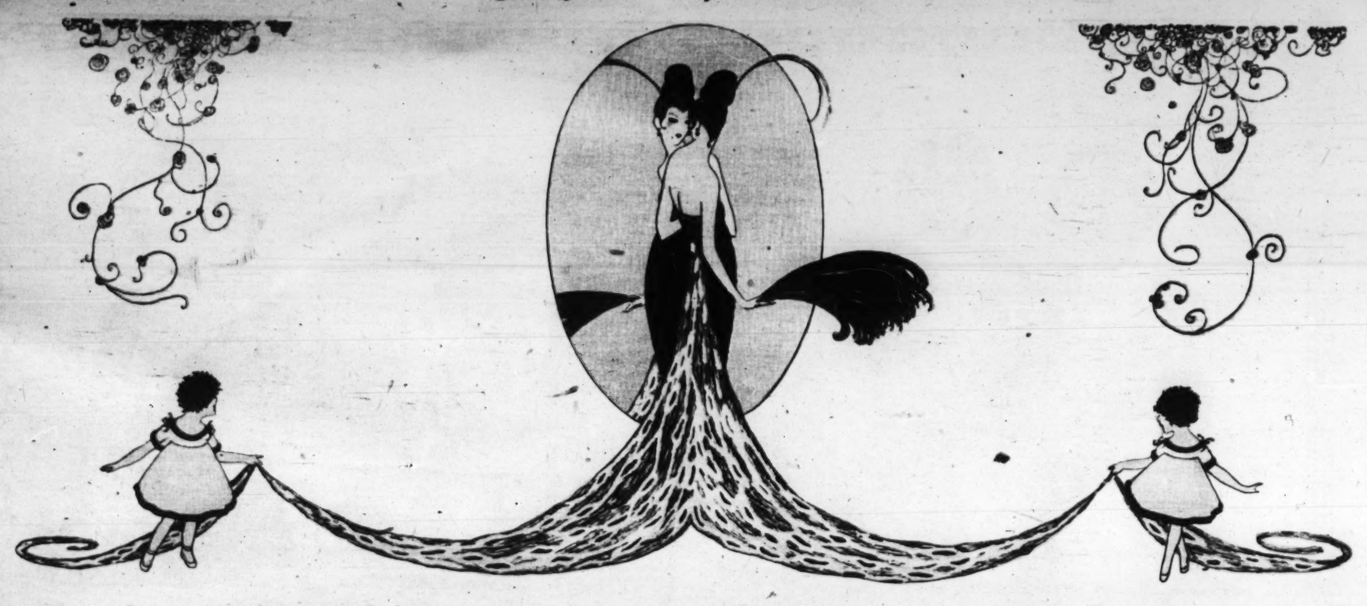
AL WILSON

"THIS IS POSITIVELY THE LAST THING IN AVIATION," said Miss Ruth Law, the aviatrix, when she brought these photographs to The Tribune the other day. The stunt pictured was performed in California for Miss Law's benefit by Al Wilson, civilian flying instructor at Los Angeles, assisted by Lieuts. Hoyt and Remlin. Wilson climbed to the top of his plane, stood upright, grasped the lower wing of another plane as it passed above, and swung himself aboard. The feat was performed entirely without the aid of the ladder, rope or other contrivance which flyers have used heretofore in attempting the exploit.



She's as vivid as a tropic bird

Blouses every color in the rainbow, underwear blue, pink, lavender —dresses, wraps, collars singing with color.

THE smart woman goes more brilliantly this season than she's ever gone in America before. She wears radiant colors on things we never dreamed before of having anything but white. Blouses, underwear, collars, handkerchiefs—this year they are only smart if they fairly scatter color as they go. Only often you can't get the colors you want till months after you first read about them. It takes so long to get a new color into fabrics, and then made up into clothes. But you don't have to wait and fuss any more. There is a wonderful new way to get the latest colors at once. You can wash your waist turquoise or old rose, you can wash your chemise yellow, or the very latest—light gray.

A new product—as wonderful for giving colors as Lux is for preserving them

YOU can give your clothes any smart color you want, at the same time they're laundered as perfectly as with Lux! The merry flakes give all your things not only pretty colors, but smart ones. Every Twink color was chosen with the help of the authorities in this country on the colors of women's clothes. And never do your blouses come out streaked or dingy, but lovely, even colors—and so fast you can wash them several times with Lux before they need another Twinking.

You just swish your waist about in the brilliant lather and all in a twinkling you've made a rather scorned blouse into one you adore. The rosy pink one that the sun had faded—bright as a peony again, and the blue that was too babyish—a rich copenhagen.

Get Twink in all your favorite colors today and follow the surprisingly easy directions that come with the package. Twink won't injure anything water alone won't harm.

All the department stores, the 5 and 10 cent stores, and your druggist have Twink. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass. (Makers of Lux.)

All these gay new colors:

Flesh	Bright Red	Navy Blue	Dark Green
Pink	Dark Red	Yellow	Light Gray
Coral	Baby Blue	Lavender	Taupe
Peach	Copenhagen	Purple	Bisque
Old Rose	Turquoise	Light Green	Dark Brown

You use some of the Twink colors like Lux. Others require boiling water and salt. Read directions both outside and inside the package before using.

The WHIMSICAL THREE

SIR JULIAN KAND PREFERS NEW YORK

by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

"Jimmy, I would not stay in London another month if you gave me—well, what have you that is precious?"

The Dancer's Warning and the Vanished Eldorado—and the Whimsical Three Depart.

MR. MENDEL HONEYWOOD had never been more entirely satisfied with himself and his immediate outlook upon life. He had spent an hour in true American fashion at the barber's, during which time he had submitted his chin, his hands, and his hair to the skillful care of willing and complacent myrmidons. He had been electrically massaged, sprayed, and shampooed—he had, in fact, exhausted the resources of what he humorously termed "the male beauty parlor." His Tuxedo coat, with its assisted shoulders and unusual length, was carefully brushed. His little court shoes shone with polish. His white shirt with its solitaire gold stud was impressively dazzling, and his black silk bow was tied with the little flop which was always his aim.

He was seated at his favorite table in the Milan grill room, with his partners in crime on either side of him. A tray of cocktails, borne in the hand of the one sommelier whom he could trust, was less than half a dozen yards away. The menu in front of him comprised American dishes of rare succulency. A gold foiled bottle stood already in a zinc pail by his side. Mr. Honeywood was happy.

"My friends," he said, raising his glass, "to our next adventure!"

"Some way off, apparently," the massively built young American with the millionaire's name remarked, setting down his glass empty.

"Perhaps," his very beautiful vis-à-vis murmured hopefully, "we may pick up something for ourselves."

Mr. Honeywood beamed.

"There," he declared, "spoke the artist. That is what I feel myself. That is why this long deferred freedom in which I may say that I am now reveling is such a joyous thing to me. I walk, as it were, on tiptoe all the time. I say to myself: 'This is the city of adventures. I have met with one. I shall meet with more.' Every face I see, therefore, attracts me. Every hour of the day is interesting. And meanwhile we have lobster Neuberg."

"Reminds me of Sherry's," the young man remarked.

"I look upon our little dinner tonight as a festivity," the host continued. "It is nearly a year since I landed in England, since I sneaked up to my room across the courtyard there because I hadn't enough money to pay the taxicab."

"You have found London an Eldorado," the girl observed.

"London," Mr. Honeywood replied, "has provided me with more than money. It has given me such associates as I certainly had not the right to expect. You, Lady Felicia Lakenham, a young lady with great connections, the entrée to any sort of society you fancy, and yet admitting me to a much esteemed companionship because of that one taste which we share in common—the love of adventure."

"Don't forget that my impecuniosity counts," Felicia laughed. "I dare say if I had had the usual income I should have lived the usual humdrum life."

"It is hard to believe it! Then," Mr. Honeywood continued, "I turn to Mr. Van Clarence Smith here, a scion of one of those great American families whose name I never heard in the States without a feeling of awe. It is marvelous for me to sit here and reflect that he, too, through kindred tastes, has become my other associate."

"Kindred tastes and lack of dollars," the young man reminded his host.

"There is plenty of money in the world—plenty!" Mr. Honeywood pronounced as he sipped his champagne. "All that is necessary is to see that it is diverted into the right quarters."

Felicia laughed.

"What a delightful way of putting it! I do wonder, though," she went on, "whether we shall have to wait till Sir Julian gets back from the States before we get another thrill out of life."

The swing doors of the restaurant opened at that moment to admit a very wonderful vision in pink muslin, a white floppy hat, and white shoes and stockings. The young lady herself was dazzlingly fair and her features sufficiently recognizable through the united efforts of the weekly illustrated papers.

"Ella Rumboldt," Van Clarence Smith murmured under his breath. "And gee! Look who's with her!"

The young lady was attended by a maid who carried a small dog, a flat jewel case, and a bunch of roses, and followed by a tall, well groomed Englishman of familiar aspect. He glanced at Mr. Honeywood's table in passing and met the latter's half anticipatory smile of greeting with a stare of bland nonrecognition. Van Clarence Smith chuckled as the two seated themselves at a neighboring table, and the maid, having laid the jewel case and roses upon the table and arranged the dog upon a cushion, retired.

"Isn't that Capt. Ashford?" Felicia asked.

"Say, he didn't seem to recognize us!" Mr. Honeywood observed in a hurt tone. "He was quite genial down at Sir Julian's."

"That's all right," Van Clarence Smith explained. "It's one of the queer tricks they've got over here. He loves us just the same, but if he's caught out with anything of the Ella Rumboldt type, and we've our own womenkind with us, both sides play a little game. We've got to imitate that glassy eye, Honey."

"Pretty hard to tumble to some of their customs over here," Mr. Honeywood grumbled. "Can't see how a nod and a how-do-you-do matters, anyway. The young lady," he went on with a little cough, "strikes me as being extremely attractive."

"So a good many other people think," Van Clarence Smith declared. "She gets a hundred pounds a week for waltzing once round the stage at the Frivolity and smiling at the audience."

"It makes one feel very humble to realize how little we understand our fellows," Felicia sighed. "Capt. Ashford is the last man I should have thought likely to be amused by this sort of thing."

"Another hero fallen off his pedestal," her vis-à-vis remarked.

"Mind you stay on yours," Felicia warned him. "That's the second time I've caught the minx looking over her shoulder at you."

Van Clarence Smith loved Felicia, but he was young and human. He straightened his tie, talked vigorously about something else, and was ready to receive with empressement the third glance which the young lady undoubtedly threw him a few minutes later.

"I'm glad I didn't embark upon that last adventure you suggested," Felicia said with just a spice of malice in her tone. "I should hate to have to keep guard over a husband with all these houri about."

"Your husband would never need guarding," the young man replied promptly. "Your kept-at-arm's-length admirer may surely help himself to a cup of water in the wilderness?"

"I don't think that young lady knows much about water," Felicia murmured. "Isn't she Austrian, or German?"

"Austrian," Mr. Honeywood intervened. "I remember reading about her. She came over with that man who writes wonderful waltzes. I believe she has appeared in New York."

The meal progressed pleasantly and bountifully. Mr. Honeywood was at the summit of his bliss. He was proud of his compar

TILLY TITTER was a great gossip. Being a sparrow and being able to fly quickly about, she was sure to gather all the news worth knowing. One morning she settled on the ground before the shoe house and the Teenie Weenies all ran out, for Tilly was as good as a newspaper and the little people were always anxious to hear the latest news.

"What's new today?" asked the Old Soldier as he stumped down the front steps of the tiny porch.

"Oh, lots!" exclaimed the bird with a very important air. "I was talking to Mrs. Woodpecker this morning and she told me that her husband got it from the little Chipmonk who lives under the pile of stones in the big field back of the woods."

"Well, what is it?" asked the Sailor impatiently.

"The Chipmonk says that old man Wood Chuck told him that there was a Teenie Weenie overseas soldier staying with the Rhyming Rabbit," said the bird, looking around at the many round little eyes staring up at her.

"A Teenie Weenie soldier!" exclaimed the General.

"Yes, a regular hero," cried the bird. "The old Wood Chuck says that he is on his way to visit you here at the shoe house.

"Great butterscotch!" shouted the General. "We'll get out the army at once and go over and meet him. A returning hero must have a military escort."

The Teenie Weenies were filled with the greatest excitement and immediately the little folks set to work planning for the arrival of the hero.

"We must have a banquet!" cried the Lady of Fashion.

"Quite right," agreed the General. "I'll march the army over to the Rhyming Rabbit's house and bring him back with us, while the rest get the school room cleared out for the banquet."

In a very short time the little soldiers were dressed in the tiny uniforms, and at a command of the General they marched away in state.

School was dismissed for the day, the tiny desks moved out, and the room was scrubbed and decorated for the great event.

The tiny stove in the kitchen was stuffed with cooking food and the Cook was so busy all day he entirely overlooked lunch, but the rest of the little folks were so very busy and excited they never thought about being hungry.

Tilly Titters had carried the word to the Rhyming Rabbit that the Teenie Weenie army was on the way and when the little army was drawn up in front of the Rabbit's hole, the new soldier stepped out and stood at attention.

"Sir," said the General, "it gives me great pleasure to welcome you in the name of the Teenie Weenie army. We have come to escort you to Shoe Hurst."

"Buddy Guff is my name, sir," answered the little soldier, "and I accept your kind invitation with great pleasure."

Buddy packed up his baggage, said good-bye to the Rhyming Rabbit, and after inspecting the guard of honor he fell into step with the General and marched off at the head of the column.

SIR JULIAN KAND PREFERS NEW YORK

ions, fascinated with his new life, a genial and entertaining host. There was only one possible cloud to the evening's entertainment, and that was a scarcely tangible one. Miss Ella Rumboldt seemed determined to pursue her flirtation with the good looking young American, and Felicia had intercepted more than one of her glances in his direction. She took the matter, on the whole, good humoredly, however.

Towards the close of the meal the maid reappeared with a wonderful theater coat. Miss Rumboldt glanced at her watch and rose. The theater coat was wrapped around her and the little procession passed out in the same order. As they neared Mr. Honeywood's table the little sideway glance from Ella Rumboldt's beautiful eyes was unmistakable.

"They must have queer customs in Austria," Felicia remarked with some asperity. "The selection of friends appears to rest with my sex. Wouldn't you like to change our box at the Alhambra for one at the Frivolity, Jim?"

The young man was good natured but a little sheepish.

"As a matter of fact," he declared modestly, "I think it was Mr. Honeywood she was after."

Their host waved aside the insinuation.

"In Okehampstead, U. S. A.," he said, "I saw and suffered plenty at the hands of the other sex. I guess I'm fixed up in the path of safety for the rest of my days over here. Life's too good to run any risk of spoiling it."

In a few minutes Capt. Ashford returned, took his seat at his own table, and calmly finished his dinner. Once or twice he glanced towards Van Clarence Smith, and on the last occasion his slight gesture was almost imperative.

"I fancy Ashford wants to speak to me," the young man remarked. "Will you excuse me if I just say how do you do to him?"

"She can't have been so brutal as to send you a message by him!" Felicia exclaimed.

"Capt. Ashford is a very interesting man," Mr. Honeywood declared. "I should miss no opportunity of improving an acquaintance with him."

Van Clarence Smith rose to his feet and strolled across to the neighboring table. Capt. Ashford's imperturbability vanished at once at his approach. He smiled, held out his hand, and motioned his visitor towards the vacant seat.

"I hope I am not taking you away from your friends," he said.

"Not at all."

"You will take a cup of coffee here with me?" Capt. Ashford invited. "I have something important to say."

"Go right ahead," was the amiable response. "I'll take the coffee with pleasure."

"And a liqueur?"

"Brandy, if you are having one."

Capt. Ashford pushed across his cigaret case.

"You've plenty of common sense, haven't you, Van Clarence Smith?" he asked.

"Well, I hope so," the young man replied.

"I am going to talk to you very frankly—just a few words straight from the knuckle."

"We shall know what we are at, anyway."

"I made certain inquiries about you," Capt. Ashford continued, "after that night at Battleden abbel when by a combination of jiujitsu and American football tactics you treated me as though I were a puffball."

"Sorry——"

"No apologies, please. It was a perfectly fair do, only of course I hadn't counted upon your being in the way. You spoilt a little enterprise on which I was engaged that evening, and a certain part of it is still wrapped in mystery so far as I am concerned. Don't be afraid; I'm not going to ask you any questions. I know perfectly well that what you did you did at the instigation of Sir Julian Kand. I wouldn't feel the trust in you that I do at the present moment if I weren't convinced that I couldn't bribe or force you to clear up the mystery of that evening."

"This sounds like the goods," Van Clarence Smith declared approvingly. "Get right on with what you have to say, Capt. Ashford. Yours is the sort of talk I can understand."

"Sir Julian," Capt. Ashford went on, "rather unfortunately for the stock markets in this country, has chosen the present moment for a visit to New York. It occurs to me, therefore, that you might have a little time to spare."

"I've plenty of time," the young man confessed.

"Just so! Now, I've made very careful inquiries about you, Mr. James Van Clarence Smith. You must please hear that without offense, because I did it as a duty, and you know very well that in any form of service we all have to obey our superior officers."

"I'm not worrying," the young man assured his companion tersely.

"I have come to the conclusion," the latter proceeded, "that you have attached yourself to the interests of Sir Julian Kand partly out of love of adventure and partly for the sake of your pocket. I have also come to the conclusion that you do not trouble about his motives, that you have no strong political bias, that so long as he can show you a task with a little excitement in it, a little profit, and nothing that offends your personal standard of wrong and right doing, you are glad to work for him."

Van Clarence Smith was becoming impressed. He had sometimes mocked at the Englishman's slow enunciation and slight drawl. He found in them now a new quality, the quality of precise and well thought out reasoning.

"I have asked myself, therefore," Capt. Ashford went on, "whether, having a few days or a few hours free, you would not accept a commission, an adventure, from another source. It should promise you a certain amount of amusement or excitement. It should also be made remunerative."

His listener did not hesitate.

"If this job you are talking about," he decided, "is not inimical to Sir Julian Kand's interests, and if it's the sort of thing I can tackle, I'm your man."

"I know you too well, my young Hercules," Capt. Ashford said tolerantly, "without knowing you at all, to suggest any enterprise in which you could not honorably engage. All that I want you to do for me is to take Miss Ella Rumboldt out to supper tonight and to find out why she is leaving the Frivolity theater."

Van Clarence Smith stared. This was not at all the sort of thing he had been expecting.

"Say, I don't understand," he admitted frankly. "There must be more in it than that?"

"There is not," was the confident reply.

"But why don't you do it yourself?"

"For the simple reason," Capt. Ashford confessed, "that Miss Rumboldt would not tell me. She knows me, and she has a very fair idea as to what my interest in the matter is. At any rate I am English, and that is enough. I do not mind confessing that I asked her to dine here with me this evening to try to disvorer what I want to know for myself. She seemed to welcome my inquiry. She entered into a long explanation, replete with theatrical terms. I listened and was apparently satisfied. Of course I know that the whole story was a fabrication."

"But why should you think that she'd tell me?" the young man asked. "We've never even met."

Capt. Ashford smiled a little enigmatically.

"Miss Rumboldt," he explained, "is a young lady of swift fancies. She has taken one for you. Besides, you are an American, and she professes to like Americans as much as in her heart I know she dislikes Englishmen. There remains, too, a third reason why I know she would give you the information I want, and deny it to me."

"Let me just get this into my mind," Van Clarence Smith said. "I have to get her to tell me something, and pass it on to you. How do I stand so far as regards the young woman afterwards? Seems a trifle low down, doesn't it?"

"I see your point," his companion acknowledged. "I shall never ask you to depart in the slightest from your standard of what may or may not be honorable. What I would suggest is that you find out what I have asked and then, if you feel it dishonorable to tell me, just don't."

"It's a bargain," the young American agreed. "But say, I don't know Miss Rumboldt!"

"The matter is easily arranged," Capt. Ashford pronounced. "I am supposed to fetch her from the theater myself tonight. I shall send a line from here regretting my inability to do so. You will write a line indicating who you are and asking her to sup with you. Say that you had been promised an introduction, and explain that your impatience, etc., etc. You need not be afraid of her refusing. Be at the stage door at twenty past 11. Engage a table here, and do not be surprised if you see something of me afterwards."

Van Clarence Smith suddenly laughed.

"Are you married, or engaged to be married, Capt. Ashford?" he asked.

"Neither," was the somewhat surprised reply. "Why?"

The young man rose to his feet.

"I am engaged to Lady Felicia," he reminded his companion. "I am just wondering how to explain my supper party."

Capt. Ashford smiled.

"You will have no difficulty," he said. "Lady Felicia is a young lady of sound common sense. Besides, you three stand together in these matters, don't you? We have a note about you somewhere. 'The whimsical trinity,' one of our men calls you."

Van Clarence Smith stared for a moment and then laughed.

"You fellows do find out things over here," he remarked.

. . . . . .

"Mr. James Van Clarence Smith," the beautiful lady murmured an hour or so later, across the supper table. "I like you—I like you very much—only your name is so long."

"It is kind of a mouthful, isn't it?" he agreed. "Call me anything you like for short."

"I shall call you Jimmy," she declared, her really very wonderful eyes quite close to his, her chin supported upon her clasped hands, the fingers of which were aflame with several priceless emeralds. "You make me very sorry that I am going away."

"Why are you going?" he asked carelessly.

She shrugged her shoulders. For a moment she was silent.

"I fatigue myself here," she confided. "London is very well, but it is not Vienna. It is not even Paris. The acquaintances which I make here do not much please me."

"And so you are going!"

"Yes, I go away," she admitted. "They are not pleased at the theater. Why will you not take me to Paris—Jimmy? I do not like to travel alone."

He became Machiavellian.

"Stay in London another month," he begged, "and I'll take you all the way if you like."

She made a little grimace at him, then unclasped her fingers, took a cigaret from her tortoise shell case, accepted a light from him, and smoked meditatively. She had found time to change her clothes since her departure to the theater. Her black gown and hat were of the Rue de la Paix, her makeup slight but effective. She was quite the most beautiful woman in the supper room, the cynosure of many eyes.

"Jimmy," she said, "I would not stay in London for another month if you gave me—well, what have you that is precious?"

"Not much!"

"Your heart, say, then. No, not even for your heart, my friend!"

"Why on earth not?" he asked. "London isn't such a bad place. A bit cramped after New York, or somber after Paris, but when you begin to find your way about, London has its points."

"And yet I tell you," she insisted, "I would not stay here another month for all the great things which the gods could give."

"I am not good at riddles," he confessed. "Here, waiter! Another liqueur before you take that bottle away."

Their glasses were filled. The lights had been lowered. The atmosphere of the place was a little heavy with the perfume of cigaret smoke, the incense of the women's clothes and perfumes.

"You, too," she went on reflectively, "you are a foreigner. You are not English."

"Bet your life I'm not," he assured her.

"Then what is good for me is good for you in a lesser degree," she continued. "It is good for me to get away before August; so, also, for you. Come with me to Paris, my child."

"Why won't it be good for me to be here in August?" he asked bluntly.

She leaned further still across the table.

"Listen," she said. "I did not mean to tell a soul before I left. My word is really pledged that I should tell no one. I will not count you because you are not English. I have a great friend who is highly placed in the Austrian government. From him I received last week a private letter. He begged me to destroy it the moment I had read it, and he warned me to leave London before August the 1st, because any day after that war might be declared."

"War?" he repeated incredulously.

"Austria and Germany are going to fight," she went on, "against Russia, against France, and against England. It is not we, mind, who wish it. It is Germany. But we are pledged and we must keep our word. My friend has warned me before. He promised to send me word in time. He has kept his promise. So you see, dear Jimmy, that it will be better for you, too, to be out of this country when the blow falls. You will come with me to Paris? Yes?"

"There are difficulties," he admitted.

"Difficulties!" she scoffed, with narrowed eyes, a soft and noiseless laugh. "You are the first man who has ever spoken to me of them!"

There was a single moment during which Van Clarence Smith missed his cue. Then Providence intervened. The maid appeared, looking through the doors. As soon as she had recognized her mistress, she hastened to the table and, leaning over her, whispered something in her ear. Miss Ella Rumboldt frowned angrily. Her eyes flashed, she struck the table with her fist. The two women engaged in a whispered conversation. Van Clarence Smith, to distract his attention, called for the bill. Presently the maid retreated, leaving her mistress white and angry. She turned to her companion, and at her first words he recovered his cue.

"I am broken hearted, dear Jimmy," she said. "A friend has called, a very distinguished gentleman whom I dare not offend. He has been my patron. In Austria he will mean success or failure for me. He desires to see me urgently."

"You must go?" her companion exclaimed in well simulated dismay.

Her eyes soothed him with an unspeakable regret, promised him the next moment a wonderful future.

"I must go," she sighed, "but tomorrow—the next day—yes?"

Van Clarence Smith bent over her hands.

"Until the earliest moment," he murmured. . . .

Left alone, he lit a cigar, paid his bill, stretched himself, and made a leisurely departure. In the lobby he suddenly felt an arm thrust through his.

"Let me drive you home," a familiar voice invited. "My car is here."

Capt. Ashford led the way to a waiting automobile and ushered his companion in.

"Where to?" he asked.

"I am staying at some rooms in Clarges street," Van Clarence Smith answered.

"Good! Then we'll call at my little show in Whitehall court and have a drink. Had a pleasant evening?"

"Great!" was the enthusiastic reply. "She's some girl!"

Capt. Ashford smiled, made a few remarks about Miss Rumboldt's professional career, and said nothing more of interest until they were seated in armchairs in his very handsome study and his man servant had wheeled a little table between them, upon which were set out cigars and cigarets and other forms of refreshment.

"Brandy or whisky?"

"I see ice," the young American observed complacently. "Guess I'll mix myself a Scotch highball."

"I am not altogether sure," his host ventured, "whether I interpreted your wishes correctly in breaking up your tête-à-tête this evening."

"Say, had you anything to do with that?"

"Naturally! Miss Ella Rumboldt has a great admirer, very highly placed in the Austrian embassy here. I managed to have news of your little supper party conveyed to him. I thought perhaps his advent might afford you the means of a strategic retreat."

"You certainly do see things through!" Van Clarence Smith acknowledged. "You bring the young lady to me and you take her away! Incidentally, you gain your purpose. I can tell you exactly why Miss Rumboldt is giving up her place at the Frivolity."

"Yes?"

"She has received an intimation from a friend in the Austrian cabinet that England will be at war with Germany and Austria within a month. She is advised to be out of England by Aug. 1."

Capt. Ashford sat quite still for a moment. The hand which held his richly chased tumbler was steady enough, and his expression scarcely changed. Yet he had the air of one whose brain is strangely occupied.

"Thank you," he said. "That is exactly the suspicion I myself entertained. His majesty's government is your debtor, Mr. Van Clarence Smith."

"Let it go at that," the latter begged. "I've had a pleasant evening and an interesting one, an adventure which has been thoroughly worth while."

His host nodded.

Happy Ever After — by Oney Fred Sweet

"I Don't Want to Readjust," She Pouted. "It's Too Drab and Tiresome."

THE house was away from the main traveled highway, the road leading to it being in summer little more than a grass grown trail. It was midwinter now and the grass was dead and patches of it were covered with snow. Winds complained across the prairie and the black branches of a row of roadside willows clawed at a sky a shade less black. The place was ten miles over frozen ruts from a town that wasn't much of a town.

Out by the barns a man swung a lantern in the darkness and sang in a voice that made no pretense of quality or keeping a tune:

"And whenever the moon shines over the cow-shed, I'll be waiting at the k-k-k-kitchen door."

He had learned the song in camp. The first time he had heard it half a hundred throats had make the barrack rafters shake with the chorus. Now he sang it alone into the wind. It was something he had brought back. . . . He glanced toward the house. A mile to the north there was a tiny square of red against the blackness; the neighbors had lit up. His own house had no light shining in the window.

"You were going to town tonight and you're peeved because I got home late," he accused when, his chores finished, he came in to touch a match to the lamp's wick. "I was over having it out with Rausch about those egg shipments. He says he's only making a small profit himself—said he could show me his books. He says you can't take 5,000,000 men away from producing and then expect——"

"Aw, I don't care what Rausch said. I don't care about anything around here." She came in from the other room where she had been lying down. "I told you a week ago that I wanted to go to town tonight."

"Without any supper?"

"I've already eaten mine."

"I see. Well, I'll take you to town. And I know what it means. I know how you've acted ever since you got that letter from Mae Belmore. You don't intend to come back." He flipped the burnt match toward the wood box. "So you didn't mean any of those things you told me down there at Camp Dix, none of the guff you wrote me while I was overseas, nothing you told the preacher. I know—the band was playing those days and I had on my uniform."

"I guess I ain't the only girl that got stung on a war romance," she came back, chin lifted. "You've started it now and we might as well have it out. The fellow that came back of the stage in the theater there at Camp Dix and the mutt that's trying to make a slave of me out on this lonesome old farm are two different birds."

"Same guy—absolutely the same."

"I didn't know when you talked and wrote about your farm that it was anything like this. What do you expect me to do all day—listen in on the telephone line and read the mail order catalogue?"

"Listen, Doll, we could clean up in a few years if you'd only show a little pep. We're right in the best place there is during this readjustment period that's going on in the world."

"I don't want to readjust," she pouted. "It's too drab and tiresome."

He looked at her steadily for a moment and slowly shook his head. "And you told me that you'd be willing to go with me any place—even if it called for living in a tent."

"Aw, the war's over now. There was a lot of stuff pulled during the war that sounds silly now."

"The big war is on, little girl, don't forget that. There's more than one way for a country to go to smash besides being pounded with guns. We've got plenty of fight on our hands. And this billet suits me. I've seen enough far places to last me the rest of my life."

"You can stick here," she flared. "It's all you've ever known outside those eighteen months in the army. But I'm going and I don't want you to go with me. I saw we weren't going to get along. I saw it that day you met me at the train—that big fur coat of yours and those overshoes. I saw I was stung, and I was sick enough to back out then, but I thought maybe I could do something with you, and I thought maybe a farm was a good place to rest—quiet and hot biscuits and honey. It's quiet, all right."

"Never mind going over it all again, Doll. Get your things on and we'll start right away. We may miss the first act."

"Mae wrote that they could use me if I wanted to come on."

"That's what I thought. Well, get ready."

They were half way to town before he spoke again. The condition of the roads had kept him occupied with the machine. "I think if you'd waited until spring you might have felt different about it, Doll. It's pretty here then—everything green. There ain't a prettier country anywhere than it is here in June. I used to shut my eyes and see it."

"I was wondering," she answered, "how the Betty's Boudoir company happened to play a burg like Bradford just for one night even. I didn't know they ever got anything there besides Mary Pickford every Monday night. Mae said in her letter that they had ten in the chorus. Say, how much farther have we got to go. Did you ever see anything so bleak in your life?"

"I've experienced less friendly landscapes," he replied, and they rode on in silence.

He left her in the Greek candy store to get warm while he went to put his car away. She was to wait for him there, but when he came back she was gone. He bought a cigar of the Greek, lit it, meditated. Upon the stillness that was over the town, there came music from the brilliantly lighted opera house. The town was taking in "Betty's Boudoir." The Greek had one of the lithographs for it in his window. She was over with her friend, Mae, and the old bunch. He strolled up the street, passed down a dark alley to the rear of the theater, brushed through the stage entrance door.

"Why, hello, 'Props.'"

A thin youth in shirt sleeves, busy at shifting scenery that showed but its canvas sides, looked around sleepily, took the cigaret from his lips.

"Why, how are ya, sergeant? Hardly knowed ya at first in the civies. I can't let ya back there. Against the rules."

"Seems funny, you and I wrangling again because I want to see her." A smile played on his hard, set lips. "You remember how I got past you down there at Camp Dix. No, I ain't going to treat you rough." His attitude changed. "I don't want to see her. You can tell Doll all I've got to say. You can tell her for me."

"What ya want to tell her?"

"Tell her for me that I'm just as glad to have her go as she is to go. Tell her that with her housekeeping act she 'gets the hook.' Dust, 'Props,' the dust around that place out there—if there'd ever been an inspection of quarters she would have been given three months in the hoosegow. Tell her that I had thought Buck McGee could beat the world as a greasy cook, but that she's got 'em all skinned. I'm on my way now. That's all."

There was a moan from the orchestra's violins out in the pit, the blend of brass, the plaintive wail of a clarinet. Half way to the entrance door the man in the fur coat hesitated, a choke in his throat, his eyes wistful. It was twanging on his heart strings, the music was. It hurt. Twanging as the orchestra had that night at Camp Dix when she had sung:

"And the smiles that fill my life with sunshine
Are the smiles that you give to me."

She had smiled just for him that night—at him, sitting out in front with all those men, heart hungry, and homesick, and apprehensive, with the sailing date set. He pictured her now as she had been the first time he had seen her—her flashing eyes, her red lips, her feminine frailty. The daily clashes that had gone with their married life were forgotten. The glamour was about her again.

"Tell her to come out here, 'Props.'" He spoke in a different voice.

"She ain't here."

"Don't lie to me." He was the sergeant again. "Get out of my way!"

And suddenly, coming out from the other side of a curtain, she stood before him.

"I'm here." In the black eyes there was appeal. "I was just on the other side of that drop. I could of swore when I heard your voice there at the last that we was both back there at Camp Dix again and that you had on that military police belt and pistol. You have got it on, somehow—it and the fur coat, too." She came nearer, and her voice lowered. "Do you know why I sang just to you that night, why I was so glad to have you come back to see me? It was because I had seen you that afternoon with your men—standing in front of 'em, yelling out their names in that husky voice of yours, defying any man in the line to meet you man to man down in the woods if they didn't like your style." The glamour was about him again. "You got me that afternoon, and you had me all the time that you were gone, up until——"

"I understand," he interrupted, reaching for her hand. "I guess the girl I came back of the stage that night to see wasn't anything real. She was just a vision that I made mistier and more unreal the longer I was away from her. I know—I know for sure now that there couldn't be any other woman, Doll, but that morning I met you at the station to marry you I noticed you looked kind o' worn and I saw your yellow hair was black close to the roots. I never said anything. Times was sort of high strung when we met each other. You see, we fell in love when the world was on a big jag." He laughed. "And we settled down to married life in the gray dawn of the world's headachy morning after. Doll," he finished soberly, "do you want to go back home with me as bad as I want you to?"

She looked up. He knew the look, and a fur coated sleeve all but smothered her.

Sitting out in front, he tried to pick up the plot of "Betty's Boudoir," but in the middle of the second act, he leaned toward her and undertoned:

"About your cooking, Doll, I didn't mean that exactly. No cook could be as bum as Buck McGee was. You're a rookie at it, that's all, and it's been thoroughly proved that it's shortsighted to look down on a rookie who's got the right kind of morale."

She made no answer.

"I know what you're thinking about, Doll. You're thinking about the bunch. I think about my old bunch, too, sometimes."

"I was thinking about you," she whispered, "about the place out there—about us."

involved him in a crime for which there was no possible pardon. In his impotent fury he lost his head, sprang forward, and struck savagely at Ole with his fist.

And then the pot began to boil. Ole, at the limit of his self control from two long nights of worry and nervous tension, went suddenly "baresark." The fist of the Russian gashed his mouth, loosened his fine teeth, and drove him raving crazy. He was a skilled boxer and his answering blow started somewhere behind his right knee and stopped more or less under the pointed beard of the chief. Thus turned to on the job he carried on with wild and exultant abandon. Tony's jaw fell within the arc of a swing which landed him a senseless heap under the hall table. The others, having no time to escape, were caught up, smashed down, battered, smothered in swift driving blows. One of them reached the front door and with his hand on the latch was gripped suddenly by the nape of the neck and his head dashed against the wall.

And then, with all hands down, Ole's head suddenly cleared. The fit of madness rushed whirling off like a cyclonic squall. He was an adventurer, an opportunist, and his agile brain leaped at the chance of a coup de theatre. He would turn the fracas into a rescue, make Marcia believe that he had fought his way through barely in time to save her life.

Ole rushed up the stairs. The chief had left the door unlocked and he burst in to find her standing nearly dressed in the middle of the room. "Come quick," cried Ole. "I've smashed the scoundrels. I'll take you home."

From somewhere outside a police whistle blew and they heard the rush of feet under the window. One of the men able to do so had bolted and run into the cordon of Spice and his bluecoats. There came the tramping of heavy feet on the stoop. Ole understood. The police were at hand. No doubt the chief of the band had been followed. Ole saw that he was trapped, but there was still the opportunity to pose as Marcia's protector. But he was too far up-stage for the right effect. He must be found in the act of having just defended her. The curtain should rise on an heroic tableau.

"Quick," said he, "I'll save you, but there's not a second to lose." He drew his pistol, rushed her down the upper stairs. It was his object to be discovered supporting her at the lower. And he was—by Tony, who seeing the game to be up and believing Ole to have double-crossed them, drew his automatic, aimed and fired.

The bullet pierced Ole's heart. And in that mortal fraction of a second his splendid vitality enabled him to vindicate the truth of a lying statement—a paradox, but then much about Ole was paradoxical. He swayed, leaned against the wall, aimed at Tony, and shot him through the head. Then, as the front door burst open he lurched forward and came crashing down the stairs.

Thus died Ole the Bull as he had lived—a sham.

The Corridors of Dream

that he, in his trial, should enjoy any possible solace. And she, more lonely than himself, had gone to her own trial utterly, pitiably uncomforted. Her "last conscious moments" had been given to fears for him.

"Tell me," he began, imploringly, but his pallor and too evident weakness alarmed his visitor into vehement, misleading denial.

"I'll tell you nothing!" Tom shouted, ringing for the nurse, and himself administering first aid to the all but fainting victim of his jovial loquacity. "I'll tell you nothing but to keep still and try to get back the strength I've snatched from you. Tomorrow," as the victim weakly protested, "I'll tell you all about everything if you're a good boy."

But tomorrow found Billy, shocked beyond his present powers of endurance, in no condition to receive visitors, even visitors distinguished by "M. D." as a name-tail and title. Several days elapsed, in fact, before Sullivan again was admitted to the sick man's bedside, and even then he was distressed by his friend's appearance. He made instant resolve of a few lightsome remarks and a speedy exit. But Billy, who had suffered much in the interval, refused to allow this sensible program to be carried out.

"I want to know about Alice," he began as soon as greetings were over. "Don't try to put me off, Tom. I'll be no better until I know all about it, and no worse off for knowing. What was the matter with her, and—why did she die?"

"Die!" Tom stared at him in breathless amazement before giving vent to a loud whistle of sudden comprehension. "Die, man! Why, she didn't die; she won't die for ages. What on earth did I say to give you such an impression? I supposed, of course, that you knew a lot more about her than I did—I saw a gorgeous bouquet come in, with her card, one of the first days when I came up to ask your nurse how you were faring. I thought you were still trying to spoof me when you wanted to know how she was."

"Then she isn't going to die?" Bill asked foolishly, his soul on fire with joy but his nervous heart pounding as though to choke him. "She isn't——"

"Die!" exclaimed Tom, with the great laugh that made so many love him. "Why, man, she couldn't die until she drops off from sheer old age exhaustion! You couldn't kill a girl with a heart like Alice's within her—though I'll own that old Sim didn't feel so sure in advance, even warned her, I believe, that there might be danger. Die, nothing! She's weaving rings all around you, in the mattery of recovery. Sitting up already, talking Sim's head off in her hurry to begin some wild journey to the Philippines or Alaska or somewhere equally convenient. I can't imagine, if you're acting honest, old chap, why you haven't heard from her; she's usually so kind to the poor and ailing. Unless," a bright idea bursting full and fair upon him, "the two of you tried quarreling as a sort of pre-operation delight."

"No," said Bill, his thin face alight with deepest joy and satisfaction, "we didn't quarrel. Far from it. And," with a smile that made him look ten years younger, "I'll undoubtedly hear from her soon."

SIR JULIAN KAND PREFERS NEW YORK

By E Phillips Oppenheim

"Complete my obligation, then. I particularly desire to entertain Lady Felicia, Mr. Honeywood, and yourself at lunch tomorrow. Do you happen to know if they have any engagement?

"I am sure they haven't," the young man replied, "because they were both lunching with me."

"Will you bring them here at 1 o'clock?" Capt. Ashford begged. "Apologize to Lady Felicia that I do not ask you to a restaurant, but there are reasons why I should prefer to receive you here."

. . . . . .

Precisely at 1 o'clock on the following day Capt. Ashford welcomed his expected guests in the same apartment. On the sideboard was a silver cocktail shaker, a bowl of ice, and a long row of bottles. Mr. Honeywood's eyes glistened.

"My servant," their host explained, "is moderately expert, but I have an idea, Mr. Honeywood," he added, waving his hand towards these preparations, "that you could teach him something in that direction."

"At the Okehampstead Country club," Mr. Honeywood confessed, as he set to work with zeal, "they christened my favorite concoction 'The Honey Bitter.' Perhaps you would like to try it."

They sampled the result of his efforts, in front of the great windows looking out upon the Thames, and Mr. Honeywood received compliments of a nature which necessitated a second visit to the sideboard. Then the butler rolled open some folding doors, announcing luncheon. They passed into a dining room which also commanded a view of the river, and were served with a meal which seemed to call for some explanation.

"I have just given up my little flat in Paris," their host told them, "and I have brought my chef over here for a time. He was at the Pré Catelan before he came to me, and his omelette aux fines herbès is supposed to be a wonderful creation. Lady Felicia, I hope, will appreciate my fraises de bois au vin rouge presently. There is something in the red wine sauce which defies analysis."

Luncheon was a delightful and unexpectedly recherché meal, served to the accompaniment of a pleasant ripple of general conversation, interspersed by many amusing reminiscences of travel on the part of the host. Coffee was served at the table, with many sorts of strange liqueurs. As soon as the servants had left the room Capt. Ashford leaned a little forward in his place.

"I have something to say to you, my three guests," he began, "and I wish to say it to you together. It refers, to a certain extent, to a person with whom you have recently had associations. I mean Sir Julian Kand."

"Sir Julian has been very kind to us," Felicia murmured warningly.

"I shall only state facts," Ashford continued. "Any decision which you may make rests entirely with yourselves. The warning conveyed to Ella Rumboldt from Vienna is well founded. The present European crisis will lead to war. If this crisis had not arisen another would have come in its place. The war arrives according to the program of Germany."

There was a moment's pause. The speaker knocked the ash from his cigaret.

"Sir Julian Kand," he went on, "has been one of the chief schemers on behalf of Germany in this country. He has known precisely what was going to happen, for a very considerable time. He has taken refuge in the United States in ample time but with very sufficient reasons. In the meantime he has thrown upon the stock exchange here the whole of his enormous holdings of stock in this country, he has ruined very many highly respectable firms, and the proceeds of his sales are being remitted, day by day, to Germany and New York, a step which we are powerless to prevent."

"But Sir Julian always declared," Felicia protested, "that he was working for peace! Why, when Prince——"

She stopped short. Ashford nodded gravely.

"I am well aware, Lady Felicia," he said, "that you believed in Sir Julian Kand. You believed in the very plausible explanation he no doubt gave you, before you consented to enter upon certain enterprises on his behalf. The same applies to Mr. Van Clarence Smith here, and Mr. Honeywood, although they, being Americans, might naturally look upon the matter a little differently. What I have told you is word for word the truth. Sir Julian Kand has been one of the worst traitors with whom we have had to deal. I do not ask for your belief. Give it to me or not, as you choose. I only anticipate what the world will know in a very short time. But I do ask you, until that time, to bear my words in mind if by any chance Sir Julian should attempt, from the States, to make any further use of you. Your acquiescence might be looked upon seriously, a little later on, by the government of this country."

Not one of the three dreamed of disbelieving their host. His measured words brought instant conviction. Nevertheless they looked at one another in something like dismay.

"Our Eldorado gone up the spout!" Van Clarence Smith muttered.

"This is some shock," Mr. Honeywood sighed.

"It is utterly hateful!" Felicia declared.

Capt. Ashford passed around the liqueurs, lit another cigaret, and leaned a little further still across the table.

"You three," he said, "have come within the sphere of my observation for some time. I feel sure I understand the position so far as you are concerned. You all need money, but you have a greater craving still for adventure. You have found something of both, serving Sir Julian Kand. Now I beg you to wait. Wait till the inevitable happens, and then make up your minds where the right lies. Of you, Lady Felicia, there can be no doubt, because you are English, but you others are neutrals—for anything I know, with German friends. Balance, when the time comes, the rights and wrongs of this war that is to be, and if you can throw in your lot with us, with England and her allies, come to me, and there is no need why you should not yet find adventures and the profit that goes with them."

"That sounds good to me," Mr. Honeywood acknowledged.

Van Clarence Smith stretched out his hand.

"We'll wait, as you say," he declared; "but I'm backing the old country every time."

Capt. Ashford led them all to the window. In the center of the street outside was a very handsome Rolls-Royce two-seater.

"I happened to hear you say, Van Clarence Smith, down at the abbey, that you had sold your car. In this country, the custom of engagement presents is becoming popular. Will you allow me, in offering my congratulations to Lady Felicia and my best wishes to yourself, to beg your acceptance of that little runabout which you see down there? Your fiancé," he added, turning to Felicia, "performed a service for me last night which I appreciate officially at far more than the value of the trifling gift I am venturing to offer him."

There was a great deal of the boy about Van Clarence Smith, and a great deal of the child about Felicia. In the midst of the former's protestations of gratitude, his impatience to depart became obvious. Capt. Ashford smiled.

"Shall I seem inhospitable now," he said, as he rang the bell, "if I tell you that I have an engagement? Before many weeks are past, I shall send to you for your decision."

"If I can help," Lady Felicia began——

"I guess our decision will come out all right," Van Clarence Smith declared.

"I follow my leader," Mr. Honeywood assured his host.

They hurried down in the lift and crowded around the car. The man recognized his new master and at once vacated the driving seat.

"I am Capt. Ashford's chauffeur, sir," he announced, "but I am to stay with you for a fortnight. You've got a flier here," he added.

A few minutes' enthusiastic discussion followed. Then the proud possessor of this reputed "flier" took his place at the wheel, Felicia by his side. Mr. Honeywood looked a little forlorn. Van Clarence Smith waved him up into the dickey.

"You hold on behind there, Honeywood, and catch on with your eyebrows," he directed. "I'll take you down to Guildford for tea."

"Any old place for me," the little man assented blithely, as he scrambled up.

They glided up Whitehall into the Mall, along Piccadilly to Knightsbridge, across Hammersmith bridge, and on to the Portsmouth road. Then Van Clarence Smith's heart grew light within him as he toyed with the accelerator.

"We'll have a good week's holiday," he shouted, turning a little round towards Honeywood, "and then we'll get level with old Kand."

"What?" Mr. Honeywood bellowed, half rising from his place and clasping his hat. "Come again!"

"Get level with old Kand," the driver roared, with even more prodigious vigor.

"Sure!" Mr. Honeywood agreed, settling down contentedly in his place.

The Corridors of Dream by Ethel M. Colson

Dan Cupid Acknowledges a Little Blunder and Encounters a Surprise.

"I LOVE you!"

The man, lost in gloomy abstraction, came to the surface as one who fancies he hears the impossible. The woman repeated her statement clearly.

"I love you!"

The man colored.

"But, my dear Alice, I—it's awfully good of you, and—and I appreciate it and all that, but——"

"You don't love me!" the woman broke in, with a laugh that held a sob in its music. "I know all about it, sonnie. If I didn't, I shouldn't have spoken. You can't love me because you love Rose Greely, and she loves—O, well, life's a queer mixture! And since none of us can help it, I suppose it's nobody's fault."

"I didn't speak with any thought of drawing love from you, Billy. Love can't be bought, and I haven't sunk low enough to beg for it. I spoke because I thought I might perhaps give you a little comfort. You're going to the hospital tomorrow—O, yes, I know your secret; I dragged it out of Tom Sullivan—and there's not a relative, any one of your own, to go with you. And you don't care, really, whether you come back or not unless you can hope that Rose will be kinder. And I thought—well, sonnie," the maternal smile transfiguring her look of wistful adoration, "I thought that to know that any one, even I, loved you might seem pleasant when you come to take the anesthetic. One finds comfort in such little things, sometimes, when the lonely moments come."

"Dear Alice!" cried the man, slipping his arm about her, their corner of the park being temporarily deserted. "Dear Alice, you're the best pal ever, and it does me proud to know that you love me, only——"

"Only you don't want me to have the heartache? Don't let that worry you, sonnie. It's better to love without return than not to love at all, isn't it? Don't you think so, now and then, when Rose isn't so cordial as she might be? And—and there are reasons why I don't matter, Billy. Anyway, I've had my own lonely hours, comrade, and it will comfort me in the next one to know that you know that to at least one person your recovery means the dearest thing in the world."

"Dear Alice!" cried the man again, moved beyond his custom, and he caught and kissed her. But it was the kiss of appreciation, of admiration, of friendship, rather than the kiss of deeper feeling. And the girl's face, smiling, brave, yet sharp with love and longing, told him that she understood and knew.

Oddly enough, it was her face that flashed before him in the long, dreary hours of the night immediately preceding the operation, whose outcome he knew to be so doubtful. It was her face that smiled upon him, still brave and sharp with tender sorrow, as they made him ready for oblivion. He had wanted—meant—to dream of Rose, who, her interests lying elsewhere, had made no sign, though Alice, greatly renouncing, had seen to it that she knew of Bill's danger. But it was of Alice that he thought, almost unwillingly, as consciousness was blotted out.

A moment—or was it a century?—later he was following her down a long, mysterious corridor that seemed to end, a world away, in a blaze of light and glory. Dimly he sensed that he was somehow floating, borne along on some swift and tideless current that transported him quite independent of his own volition. Alice, he sensed, floated a little before him, looking back over her shoulder. She waved a friendly hand, as the blaze of light drew nearer, but whether to bid him back or beckon he could not tell.

Her smooth progress seemed to be arrested for an instant, and in that brief period two things happened. Alice made to stay his advance with an imperative gesture, and Billy suddenly learned that he loved her; that while Rose might elicit tender emotion, charm his beauty loving senses, it was Alice who, all unrecognized, unwitting, had crept into his secret heart.

A moment—or was it a century?—later he awoke to the dull misery consequent upon certain physical experiences and again it was the face of Alice, once more lovingly wistful, that flashed fleetingly before him, that returned, again and again, in the desolate hours that followed. He thought of it surprisingly often in the succeeding days in which strength slowly but steadily returned to him. He thought of Rose but little, and then, with but languid interest. At first he wondered feebly, but as health increased the dream memory welled slowly up from the mind space inhibited by the ether and at last the strange truth became clear.

He loved Alice. And she had told him that she loved him! But, came the concomitant recollection that meant not too easy winning of her, she had told him for his sake purely, when she thought that he might not, probably would not, recover from the operation. Knowing Alice, he realized how great, for love's sake, had been her sacrifice of pride and maiden modesty and all the most sacred instincts of her nature. It must have cost her dear to utter that brave "I love you!" Intuition, keen and strong with the physical life so largely in abeyance, hinted at unsuspected conditions, circumstances back of and beyond that unfaltering admission, but material confirmation was not.

The first hours of unclouded consciousness had brought flowers from Alice, but nothing had been heard from her later. Of course, since he was recovering, she would keep from his sight and knowledge unless he insisted, as he was presently unable, upon direct communication with her. More and more he found himself eager to do this as the convalescent era dragged onward. Other methods failing, he was constrained to ask aid of a club comrade at last.

"How about Alice Graham?" he inquired, carefully casual, the first time jolly, unthinking Tom Sullivan was allowed, by virtue of his medical degree, to see him. "What's she doing, these days?"

Had Sullivan been a woman he would have giggled. As it was, he indulged in ribald laughter and all but clapped the invalid on the shoulder, though he grew as suddenly grave.

"No such thing as platonic affection, is there?" he rather impertinently pondered. "Here we thought you and Alice just chums and comrades, and all the while you've probably been having a lot of fun at our expense. But the game's up now, old chap, and we're all onto your curves with a vengeance. You gave the thing away in the first place, but Alice was a pretty close second. Jim Duane, who did such a good job of carving on your behalf, tells me that you yelled 'Alice!' when coming out of the ether, while Simon Bellew, who officiated in behalf of Alice, says that she occupied her last conscious moments in trying to discover just what he thought might happen to you."

"Her last conscious moments!" Bill sat up with a look and air that filled the good natured blunderer with contrition. "What do you mean, Sullivan? Isn't Alice—all right?"

"Lie down, you idiot!" thundered Tom, suiting action to the word and ready to weep for his error. "I ought to be kicked for rattling on in such manner! But it never occurred to me that poor, dear Alice hadn't told you, seeing that various other people seemed to know all about it. I supposed, of course, that you knew that Alice underwent a capital operation just about the same time as yourself."

So that was it! Alice had told him that she loved him because, believing herself as good as vanquished, she had been determined

SPICE by Henry C. Rowland

SYNOPSIS.

Sydney Penfold Isham Chester Elting is his name, but his initials spell "Spice," and the nickname has stuck. Back from France, with nothing to do since his discharge from the aviation service, he stumbles on an unexpected adventure in the home of Bernardo Aria, a famous financier, where, by chance, he helps shoot down three would-be murderers, emissaries of a band of anarchists against whom Aria is secretly operating on behalf of the government. Aria needs some one to pilot him on night trips to Washington by airplane, and Spice jumps at the opportunity for excitement. He quickly encounters a disturbing element in the breezy advances of Marcia Briggs, his newly acquired stepsister. His father, an admiral, married a widow while his son was in France, and Spice resents this bitterly. Moreover, he finds himself infatuated with Aria's beautiful daughter, Esther. Marcia is irrepressible, however. At the Aria country home, to which the Elting yacht has brought the Eltings and Marcia for a visit, the girl comes upon Dr. Adrian Isaacs, the financier's chief aid, just as he has killed another of the plotters, a scoundrel named Johnson, who has been acting as the yacht's steward and has [illegible] Aria hanger to disable the airplane [illegible]. Marcia learns that Spice has gone to town with one of the Aria automobiles to investigate a mysterious dive known as the 101 club. A [illegible] the dead steward indicates that this is the assassins' headquarters. When Spice telephones that his car has been stolen from in front of the club Marcia takes a hand in the game. Being a born mimic, she telephones the club, simulating the voice of the dead Johnson, and commands the inmates to return the car forthwith. By this chance she overhears talk of a plan to attack and capture Aria from the air and shoot them down [illegible] their flights to Washington. Warned by Marcia, Spice captures two of the conspirators, [illegible] of them in the airplane seat usually occupied by Aria, and sets forth to battle, the second [illegible] that Spice's prisoner and the two occupants of the attacking plane are killed. Spice's other captive, an aviator named Tony, escapes and as a last resort determines to kidnap Esther Aria. In this he is aided by a smooth-tongued scoundrel known as "Ole Bull," who masquerades as a secret service agent and turns up at the Aria estate with the crafty suggestion that the girl permit herself to be kidnaped voluntarily to keep her friends out of danger. The scheme works, but Ole has mistaken Marcia for Esther, and it is Marcia who assumes the rôle of willing captive. Taken to an isolated house, she has just concocted a letter revealing her hiding place in an impromptu code when she hears footsteps outside. Fearful of what may happen when it is found that she is not Esther, she considers calling for help, but decides that this would mean immediate rough handling and perhaps death.

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

Ole's Last Battle.

MARCIA did not believe that she stood in any danger of other ill usage. These conspirators had but one, definite motive, which was to prevent Mr. Aria from smashing their attempt at solid organization. They might be individually capable of any brutal crime, but in the present case they were concentrating on a single objective for the accomplishment of which they would be highly paid.

The sudden uplifting of a man's voice in anger below drew Marcia to the door again. It was not loud, but of a penetrating quality and the speaker must have been standing at the foot of the lower stairs, for Marcia was able to catch distinctly the tone and inflection. It lasted only a few seconds, then sank inaudibly again. But this had been long enough. In those brief instants Marcia had recognized distinctly the voice and words of "Ole the Bull," and the words were: "You pay up now, you blighter, or I'll blow the game."

There could be no doubt. The resonant pitch and suggestion of an English accent were unmistakable. It was the voice of the man whose craftily imparted information had got her into this trap. Marcia could not help but understand. It had been a cunning ruse and she had fallen its ready dupe. Her supposed secret service agent was actually one of the band, or some clever criminal subsidized for the purpose so cunningly accomplished. He had been given her description by the mistaken Tony, then, on discovering his error had been acute enough to see the means to profit by it. And now, he had come to collect the promised wage before the error should be discovered.

Marcia sank down in a chair and covered her face with her hands.

Mr. Christian Oleson, alias "Ole the Bull," or "Ole Bull," made his way to the railroad station thinking that he had never earned $10,000 so easily. Then he reflected that he had not got it yet, and felt less elated.

It seemed to Ole that the fates had played directly into his hand. Instead of meeting with obstacles he had run full tilt on a willing, almost eager coadjuter ready to run any risk to safeguard her stepfather, an old gentleman whom Ole did not believe to be in the slightest danger. In fact, he did not believe Aria himself or any of his associates to be in any danger. He had gathered that the murder committee had drunk its full of strong measures and that this effort to obtain the custody of Esther Aria was its last and not very brilliant hope.

Ole had inquired the time of the next train for New York and had calculated that taking this and a subway express for Staten island ferry, on arrival he ought to reach the yellow house at least an hour before the car containing Marcia. He wished her to continue to think that he was one of Aria's unseen protectors, but on the other hand he purposed that Tony's receipt of her person should be F. O. B., C. O. D. He wanted to be on the premises though invisible to her on her arrival, and did not intend that she should enter the house until his account was duly settled.

Unlike the chauffeur and Tony, Ole was not outrageously surprised at Marcia's act. He had reaped many material benefits from his extraordinary powers of insidious suggestion. He was more than a student of human nature in general and that of impulsive young women in particular: he was a master of it. Marcia's type, a daring, generous, impetuous disposition which comes to a quick decision without counting the cost, then resolutely sees it through, may be said to have represented Ole's specialty.

He did not believe that she stood in any danger of harm from Tony's gang. For one thing there was nothing to be gained and a great deal to be lost by any maltreatment of her. It was possible, Ole thought, that if Aria failed to be coerced (as of course he would) they might demand a big ransom for Marcia and very likely get it, whether or not they were got themselves afterwards.

"You damned idiot, that is not Aria's daughter!"

But this was her own affair. He, Ole, had not been a party to her kidnaping because she had given herself up of her own free will to insure the safety of Mr. Aria, Admiral Elting, his son, and Dr. Isaacs, and nobody could deny but that they were all in danger.

There was this to be said about Ole, that his criminality stopped with theft. He was a swindler, obtainer of money under false pretenses, a confidence man, blackmailer, and would not hesitate at actual larceny, but farther than that he would not go. He refused to engage in any criminal operation where a killing, or even the employment of force might be required. This was not because he was afraid, as he was anything but a coward. But he was good natured, easy going, even capable of generosity when his emotions were aroused, and a good deal of an artist. He had been an excellent actor, and had a good deal of the histrionic temperament. If he had believed that Marcia's life would be endangered by her act he would not have let her go. She had aroused his admiration. She was the sort of girl he liked.

Ole's phenomenal luck got its first setback at the station. The train was half an hour late. Then half way to the city it suffered another delay. He had to wait for an express, and on reaching the ferry just missed a boat. He had never been to the yellow house, Tony having looked him up in town, and it took him some wandering about to locate it. Marcia had already been there half an hour when he arrived.

Tony greeted him with a warmth which did not deceive Ole, who came immediately to business and demanded his money. Tony protested that he could not settle until the following day, said that he had not counted on any such speedy action, and did not have anything approaching the amount, all of which was perfectly true.

Ole was angry and worried. He did not believe that Marcia's friends and family would make public her disappearance for a day or two when the police failed to turn up any clue. They might fear a possible scandal. But there was always the danger of Marcia's betraying her identity, and although she was the girl whom Tony had described and he was still himself deceived, yet he would unquestionably repudiate the obligation if the mistake were to be discovered.

"Look here," said Ole, angrily, "when you give out a contract like that it's up to you to have the cash in hand. Could the job have been better done? Here's the girl come of her own accord and stopping here of her own accord with no fuss or bother for anybody. Now you come across."

"But I tell you I ain't got it, Ole. Honest to God."

"Then get out and rustle it."

"How can I rustle it this time o' night? I don't know where to find my man, and if I did it ain't likely he's got it on him."

In vain Ole fumed and swore. Tony did not have the money and persisted that he could not get it until the following day.

"All right," said Ole, finally, "then I'll stick right here until I get it. I've got to play submarine for a few days, anyhow, and lie on bottom. I was seen talking to her for half an hour before she beat it, and my description doesn't fit such a lot of guys. Got any grub in the house?"

"Sure," said Tony, who had really no intention of bilking him. "Plenty of room, too. You stay here tonight, Ole, and we'll square up tomorrow. Come out in the dining room."

He led the way and Ole followed, grumbling. "This is no way to do business," he growled, and then in a louder voice just as he was passing the foot of the stairs. "It looks damned phoney to me. But don't you think for a second you can get away with it, old dear. You pay up or I'll blow the game."

"Sh'h'h!" whispered Tony, and pointed up the stairs. But Marcia had heard. She might have felt better about it if she had known how much her situation was improved by Ole's presence in the house. He made Tony send that night for the Italian woman who had been concierge of the 101 club and who slept in the room next that occupied by Marcia to be summoned by a rap on the wall. He inspected the food served her, and when the next morning four of the other conspirators arrived he refused point blank to let them interview or so much as see her. Ole had, of course, his own good reasons for this, not wishing her true identity to be discovered. They did not like it, of course, but dared not start a shindy with this big fellow whose good nature was no longer in evidence.

For Ole was getting more and more savage at the postponement of his promised premium. Tony could not get in touch with the holder of the purse. He tried to reassure Ole, but without marked success, and as another night approached and the swindler grew ugly and suspicious, Tony would dearly have loved to knife him and drop him in the narrows, but Ole took excellent care of his handsome and athletic person. He had always despised the criminal type of Tony and his fellows, their theories and methods, and he was not afraid of them at all. Ole actually feared the law, but held the underworld in contempt.

Another night of tension passed in the yellow house. Ole's room was on the second story at the foot of the upper stairs, and he slept with his door and one eye open, a small automatic under his pillow. He had considerately explained to Tony that anybody entering unannounced would meet a bullet coming out, also that such was the vitality of his race that two of his brothers had lived to get their man after being shot through the head and heart. Tony believed him. The convincing quality of Ole's vivid narratives was by no means confined to impressionable women. He had extracted money for chimerical schemes from shrewd business men and on one occasion prevailed upon a hard boiled sheriff to connive at his escape. He kept the temperamental Tony in a ferment of fear, rage, and indecision. Ole to him was a blond, smiling devil. Smiling ferociously, Ole assured him that if he cought him going to Marcia's room he would wring his head off his shoulders as one twists a cocoanut off its stem. Tony believed this, also.

Matters came to a focal point when early Saturday morning Ole was first drowsily then alertly conscious that somebody had passed his open door and gone up the stairs. He sprang up half dressed and, pistol in hand, stepped out into the hall just in time to see the door of Marcia's room close behind a squarely built man in dark clothes. Looking down the first flight he beheld Tony and three of his gang standing at the foot of the stairs.

"Who's that blighter just gone up?" Ole growled.

"And high time, too," snapped Ole. "What's he doing in her room?"

"Well, you don't expect him to buy a cat in a bag, do you?"

"Huh," grunted Ole, "he must have about as much confidence in you as I've got." He stepped back into his room, slipped on the rest of his clothes and went downstairs, anxious and ugly. The crucial moment had come. Ole knew that if this chief had ever seen Esther Aria, or even a portrait of her, he might whistle for his bonus. In such a case he did not intend to make a fight for it, because however such a row might turn out it must lead to certain arrest.

He had not long to wait. A door slammed upstairs and a man came running down. He had Slavic features, a pointed black beard, and his face was pale with anger and consternation.

"You damned idiot," he snarled savagely at Tony, "that is no Aria's daughter!" He glared around at the astonished group. "Which of you is the fool who kidnaped her"

The blood rushed into Ole's face. "You shut up, Mr. Rasputin," he growled. "I'm the guy that persuaded her to come here on the description given me by your men. Now you come across, and quick, or I'll raise hell with you!"

The white face of the Russian grew livid. His yellow teeth were bared and his savage features seemed to draw back, giving him the expression of a mad wolf. All of his plans had miscarried. Their death blow would be struck within the next few hours. He faced ruin, imprisonment, and now these stupid hirelings of his had by their careless blunder

HANG NAILS

You Never Can Tell What Is Going to Happen When Love Is Young and a Man's Hard Boiled.

O PITY the poor manicure. She has to flirt yet remain circumspect, for it is a barber shop axiom that if the frails had to wait for men to patronize them who really pined for shiny nails and high "moons" they'd starve; she has to stand for imperious scoldings from the head barber, who, from his eminence, cannot afford to fall in love with her, she has to listen to the jabber of her customers, usually strung on a thread spun of these standard brands:

"Busy for dinner tonight?"

"What's your phone number?"

"You're some baby; ever go out?"

"Say—when you hold my hands——"

"I wish I looked like you—with what I know——"

Strange to say—or, maybe, not at all strange—comparatively few manicures marry either the tonsors or customers whom they meet in their every day affairs.

Birdie Jackson surely was immune against both. Birdie was comely, medium in height, thoroughly adamant to dinner bids, auto invitations phone number queries, and transbasin subtleties. She held many men's hands in the process of her trade, but the holding was entirely clinical, as was even the slight though definite raising of the eyelids which generally hooked her victim.

Birdie was not without culture, having nearly finished a semester at high school. And she had as gentle discretion in wardrobe selection as a duchess of the blood. On a Sunday, walking to church, she never raised those eyelids, and the many eyelids raised at her gave vision to eyes that saw no hint of manicurishness.

She had entertained and been entertained by some scattered suggestions of matrimonial persuasion, but Birdie trafficked so much with men in her official affairs that she had a sort of numb tympanum for that kind of conversation.

However, in the boarding house where she starred there was one man who had he cornered her and made a noise like wedding chimes or a motion indicating the circumnavigation of a certain finger by a certain kind of ring, Birdie would have chirped language greatly resembling a famous word of three letters, and that would would not have been "nix," for Birdie never employed slang—knowingly.

That man was Gene Troy, night clerk of the Holworth-Brewster hotel.

Gene and Birdie breakfasted together every morning. He "got off" at 7 and she "came on" at 9; the shop where she labored was in an office building. Promptly at half after 7 Gene would come in and she would come down. All the others finished before then, and the two were almost always undisturbed during the morning meal.

A friendship developed between them which Birdie took seriously and Gene regarded as fortunate only in that it supplied him a receiving end for his battery of nifty small talk. Gene ran to "flip" observations, favoring for subject matter the inexhaustible natural comedy topics: mothers-in-law, love, babies, women, suffrage, prohibition, strikes, divorces, shows, politics, and that monarch of mirthful matter—marriage.

A typical breakfast passage between them would be of this order:

Birdie—I saw a peach of a picture last night. It was a beautiful story. A western.

Gene—Yeh? Western movies are all where a cowboy that ain't human kills a bad man that never lived.

Birdie—O this was nothing like that. It was where a big, handsome ranchman fell in love with a half Spanish girl. Do you like dark complected girls, Mr. Troy?

Gene—Who knows what's the honest complexion now'days of a girl over 7?

Birdie—Well, anyway, he saved her from a dirty Mexican that had a band of bandits help him kidnap her and drag her up in wild mountains, and he threw her across his saddle and rode her back to the plains, where he lived, the plains he loved.

Gene—She was half Spanish, huh? If she was any part United States she'd have prob'ly kidnaped a bandit and dragged him to a justice o' the peace.

Birdie—Gee, you're unromantic. But even you'd have loved the finish. It was a fade-out in the moonlight, on top of a hill——

Gene—A hill? On the plains?

Birdie—I never thought of that. But it was lovely. It wasn't a very large hill, just enough top to it so the horse could stand there with his four feet all hunched up like, and the girl came to and he held his arms out and she just snuggled up with her head over his shoulder——

Gene—Facing the camera——

Birdie—And he just let his big arms kind of fit around her and they were silhouetted against a western sunset and—O, well, I cried.

Gene—And you think I'd have liked that? I don't care for that kind o' pictures. I like 'em with a happy ending.

But Birdie wasn't discouraged. She spent hours ruminating about it, and came to the illogical but comforting belief that if she, with her sincere worship of sweet romance, could feel drawn to this one man of all men who despised it: moreover, the one man who never offered it to her in any manifestation; he might by the same or some equally paradoxical token come to see in her the complement of a hitherto unawakened emotion, the expression of a yet veiled ideal, the consummation of a suppressed impulse.

Gene rarely thought of Birdie except during breakfast. His spoken views on men and women pairing off were his true ones, for the Holworth-Brewster was a fashionable family hotel and he was on the "inside" of more weird scandal and married incompatibility than any other person in town. Nowhere is that brand of thing more concentrated than in a higher priced "family" hotel, housing well to do pairs, almost all childless, where the women get together because they are lonesome or gaddy or idle, and where there is always one female of insidious or mischievous proclivities to tempt the other and circumstantially suspectible ones

So Gene intercepted or "listened in on" many telephone conversations that might have surprised a lot of folks but had long ceased to surprise him; he saw cigaret smoking girls contraband cocktails, surreptitious and suspicious meetings and partings, clandestine communications, thin ice complications, and a general spectacle of cosmetics, camouflage, duplicity, double crossing, and plain cheating.

He seldom spoke to women other than the guests and Birdie. She was not at all like any of them, but it was a rather heavy burden on her, alone, to redeem the sex, especially since he was with her but half an hour each day except Sundays, and when he was so sleepy that he sometimes but faintly heard her.

On Sundays he remained an hour longer at his desk. Sunday was his day "off," and it was also the fiscal finale of the week. Straightening of accounts began at 6, when the day relief arrived an hour earlier and the night watch ran over an hour later, so that within the two hours figures could be checked back and balances struck. In the Sunday morning period breakfast was brought in for him "on the house," and he always went directly to his room in the boarding place to sleep his goodly eight hours. Sunday "supper" he always "passed up" because that repast was cold stuff, whereas on other days, when he reported to his work at 7, he ate at 5, before Birdie or the other boarders appeared. On Sundays he went out for the matutinal meal, after which he regularly attended a vaudeville show, always alone.

Gene was a young man of some means. He was frugal and his compensation ran to substantial totals, for he was a man worth tipping in that hotel. It was accepted that Gene was 100 per cent trustworthy and could hold a letter "to be called for," transmit a precarious message, exercise tact in a tight situation, and all without ever forgetting his place or failing in his courtesies as a clerk. He kept bellhops on the leap, he knew the private whims and personal obsessions of the inmates, and he could divine with one look at a telegram whether it should be sent up post haste or not be sent up at all. There were eight divorces in the Holworth-Brewster so far within Gene's nocturnal stewardship, and none was due to any clumsiness or bad faith from him; had he been weak or opaque there might have been eighty, and he might have been poor or elsewhere.

He dressed neatly, almost well, which doesn't cost much when one maintains a pepper and salt business suit that shows no dirt and little wear, and when one folds the trousers each time upon retiring and lays them under the mattress to be pressed by weight, besides a "Sunday suit," that institution now rare but once indispensable and still practical. He smoked only gift cigars, shaved himself, walked to and from work, had his boots shined gratis by the night porter, and laid away to clear profit that greatest item of expense in the accounts payable of man—a woman: his bookkeeping was single entry.

Many a flash guest at the gypping Holworth-Brewster had less in bank though more in bunk than the unobtrusive night clerk who did his "yes, sir," and "thank you, ma'am" so diffidently behind the almost marble counter. The giddy gadflies who lived there never looked upon him as male or even human—just of the clerk species, yet he could have lent some of them good money at more honest interest than they were paying the sharks and shylocks.

But to Birdie he personified perfection, for he was what none of the kidders and drop-ins who infested her professional life attempted to be—he was substantial. Substantiability to a sensible girl of sane pretensions suggests that enduring, desirable monotony which makes happy marriages. If it was love she felt for Gene it wasn't the style of love she loved, the movie love, the Cinderella plot expression which is in the makeup of almost every girl, in spite of the odds. It was a love which always contemplated durability, staple existence superinduced by matrimony, emancipation from manicuring.

Gene had never been let in on this trend of Birdie's fancies. His relations with the girl had been of quite impersonal color. But a manicure may dream, and, surely, she may dream of marrying a man of phlegmatic disinterest in her sex, with a healthy savings account and no vices beyond one vaudeville per week and souvenir cigars. Better that she sigh for a Gene than for a trifler, a barber shop vampire in a silk shirt, or those other fiends in the guise of "customers" who hand over their hands with no true craving for pushed back cuticle or high lighted thumbnail, but who use the situation to pursue that modern downtown indoor sport, phone number hunting.

But that was just it. Would Gene, with his hard boiled attitude toward women, behind his worldly callouses, allow a wholesome sentiment to penetrate him and thus be open to the soft allure of a woman who meant business? Of all women, would he react to a manicure?

Birdie knew the popular impression of those in her trade. Full well she realized how unjust that thoughtless but fixed verdict was; yet there it was. She understood the inception of the social prejudice against those of her calling—the constant association with men in places naturally "stag," the commercial necessity for being outwardly approachable and even ostensibly flirty, and above all, the holding of hands which was of the modus operandi.

She had held thousands of hands. The maze of hairy hands rose before her eyes when she thought of her future and of Gene. Could he give her his hands to hold in that spirit which enfolds a man when he first feels his ungainly digits in the clasp of the warm fingers of the woman of his heart? Would he not feel in the touch the practiced professional technique, the hardened softness, of continued commercialized contact, the soiled cleanliness of sold soapsuds?

She knew many men willing itching—to forgive her this or anything. But they were brazen men who had done blacker crimes than manicuring, who were frivolous, who tipped her too prodigally to be sincere. They not only would absolve her from her barber shop transgressions, but would perhaps charge her with less justifiable ones and excuse the lot. But to what end? Many a "party" had been whispered at her, but no minister had ever been mentioned as officiating on the reception committee.

One man had proffered marriage, but he was a nomadic barber, who had left his patients lathered and helpless while he answered telephone calls from women, proving two ways at once that he was worthless husband stuff. He had rushed Birdie scandalously from the first day he entered the shop to run chair 5, and she had repulsed him.

A fat widower with two children had also offended her with overtures of marriage; him she had met in church. This one was staid and stupid enough, but otherwise atrocious, for even a wife must be a woman.

These, only, had made advances to her beyond the hand held mashings of her commerce. And, until Gene had crossed her life line, she had been well pleased to keep it that way—the less men asked of her the better she liked it. But Gene had aroused in her the cottaging impulse which is hidden beneath the shirtwaist of every garden girl somewhere, and Birdie, longing for her nest, was systematically if vainly vamping Gene to the full extent of her voltage.

Gene chose to be blind, deaf, and preoccupied. He knew. Indeed, he knew. Men are likely to mistake common courtesy from a pretty girl as a symptom of impassioned adoration, but never does one misread aerograms of love from iridescent eyes to be ten word messages of mean temperature. He wasn't agitated over Birdie's frame of heart. He expected it. The bowing night violet of the Holworth-Brewster had his day after 7 and he knew he was a choice catch, a man of fascination, and a tidbit. He had fleetingly considered marriage, yes; but in his lights it had appeared with a wealthy grass widow, who would seize him and gently yank him ver that desk and out of his servitude as ich women had been known to capture their haufeurs or riding instructors, or else it ad seemed it would be a blue eyed darling f 17, fresh, guileless, dewy with bucolic erfume, smuggling through his rhinoceros ecurity, a breath so aromatic of youth and nnocuous innocence that his petrified heart would melt.

Birdie was a "wise dame," and he felt that e needed no wisdom by alliance. She was f the world, that world for which he had a mart Alec sneer, fed the more by his sycohantic concealment of it in his diplomatic ost. There had been two stranded chorus irls at the hotel in his clerktime, either of whom, he knew, would have leaped at a hance to be Mrs. Troy, and chorus girls anked far beyond manicures in the army of he social ineligibles. But he hadn't "given them a tumble," for he was vaccinated with he virus of his observation, immuned by the night counter irritant of contemptuous familiarity with city spoiled sirens.

If this poor fish, Birdie, was eating out her heart for him, and that heart was on her sleeve, where he couldn't help watching it paint up and phoney themselves until a crow looks like a bird o' paradise, it's just bunco steering, that's what it is."

"Well, look at it this way: don't men do the same thing? Don't you shave? That's putting it over on nature. Don't you get your hair cut? That's improving on the facts. Don't you . . . No, I guess you don't."

"Don't what?"

"Don't ever you get your nails fixed up."

"Aw—that's sissy stuff. I admit I get shaved and that stuff, because if I didn't I couldn't hold a job. I never gewgaw up to be beautiful; it's strictly business with me. But having my paws and my nails rasped is carrying even business a little too far. I don't have to, and I ain't going to."

"O, that's an old fashioned idea, not worthy of an up to date man like you, Mr. Troy. It's like the wrist watch; before the war there was a superstition that real men didn't wear them. In fact, they were used

"They could be made to look ever so much more—well, you know, refined. Why, say—you've got hangnails."

squirm, he should worry. Manicures had lost their amateur standing, anyway, and with that every call on consideration from gents on whom they turned their trained big Berthas. He liked her well enough as a breakfast vis-a-vis, but when it came to eating breakfast opposite her through all his years—well, all your life is a pretty long time; and if he had to pay for her breakfasts through eternity, moreover, the proposition appeared preposterous.

Birdie was crooning at him. It was Saturday morning. Breakfast had passed the egg course and was nearing the coffee period. Gene had been as undemonstrative and hopelessly crusty as always. Birdie was thinking that soon the meal would be over and two days must pass before she should be with him again. A little sigh expressed her state. Gene let it pass. He had been pillorying women, hunters, and trappers who loaded with powder and fired with lip rouge, who baited with courtplaster beauty spots and sprung with court actions.

"Well, gee, Mr. Troy," contested Birdie weakly, "a woman wants to look as good as she can, don't she?"

"Oh, does she? For what? To snide some feeble minded simp into an insane desire to pay her chow and room rent? It wouldn't be so bad if they'd let nature alone, then if a man wanted to fall, let him. But when they even then by who? By surveyors, cowboys, engineers, aviators, and effeminate men like that. Manicuring used to be in the same misjudged class. But no more. A man who thinks anything of his appearance at all gets his nails done just like he gets shaved or his shoes shined."

"Is that so? Maybe you're right, at that."

"You've no idea, Mr. Troy, what an improvement it would make in the appearance of your hands. You have good looking hands, Mr. Troy, mighty good looking."

"H—have I? Well, of course, I never did any what you might call rough labor, and——"

"Certainly. And they could be made to look ever so much more—well, you know, refined—if you'd let me—I mean if you'd let some expert manicure have 'em for about fifteen minutes. Why, say—you've got hangnails."

Gene suddenly pulled back his hands, as though she had discovered murderer's blood on them.

"I have?"

He looked them over closely.

"Sure. Those ugly little bits of skin coming out from the root of the nail. No gen'leman should have fringes on his nails any more than he would on his trousers. Especially you; you mingle with people who naturally would notice those things."

Gene was not impervious to suggestions for "class." There was something in what the girl said. The nails did look unkempt and dull and irregular.

"Well," he said, "this isn't exactly a sudden revelation to me. I've often been on the point. But when I see those manicures I always weaken. It ain't exactly like getting your hair cut, you see."

"But the sex of the operator has nothing to do with it. That's what I always preach and I try to live up to my preaching. You let a girl get you a phone number; you let a girl wait on you here at table; you let a girl——"

"Yes; but none o' those girls have to—to hold my hands."

"It isn't hand holding any more than when a girl fits a glove on you, or any more than a tailor is hugging me when he fits a coat on me. I let a dentist stick his hands in my mouth—I don't think I'd let my own brother do that to me if he wasn't a dentist. You need a manicure. And if you're really afraid of these strange girls, come on over and let me do it. I didn't plot this out. In fact, I'm sorry I spoke, now, because I see you can't divorce a profession from a person, and when you see me at my little white table, where I hold sometimes a hundred hands in one day, you'll probably be off me for life.

"I ain't proud of my work. But nobody's work is all roses—anyway, nobody's work that has to live in a boarding house. You tell me you have to smile and act back of your desk; that doesn't make you a woman chaser or a coward. I have to take men's hands in my hands or I can't fix their hands; that doesn't make me fresh. Suppose I were a nurse and had to——"

"Where is the shop where you trim customers?"

"Where I trim customers' nails, you mean, Mr. Troy," said Birdie, with just a touch of 32 degrees Fahrenheit in it. She realized she had junked her bridges; that her paltry defense of her art would scarcely "go over" with Gene Troy.

"If you're going to be that fussy about it—yes. Where is it?"

"Just a block from the Holworth-Brewster, the Consolidated Steel building."

"I'll drop in on you—say about five-thirty, on my way to the H-B, huh?"

"I'll be there, Mr. Troy. My office hours are from 9 till 6. My customers always find me on the job and always ready to serve—on the job."

And she rose and walked out of the room. She was furious at herself, and bitterly sorry she had opened up the fatal subject. All that day she bit her lip and twice she cut cuticle, very bad manners for a deft nail surgeon. She felt uneasy as well as vexed. He was coming. He would see her in the barber shop, see her at her unwomanly task—unwomanly no matter how logically she spoke for it. And in he came, catching her in flagrante delictu, laving in soppy suds the fat fins of a mustached walrus who looked at her as though he expected her to throw him a fish—or, who knows, a kiss?

Gene sat down. The porter busied up to him, but he said he was waiting. Ah—for which barber, please? For no barber—for the manicure.

Birdie finished with the walrus, who grandiloquently dropped a ringing half dollar on her almost marble table, as spurious as Gene's desk. And Gene stepped forth, sat down, shut his eyes and held forth his hands. She reached across and took them both in hers.

The girl loved him. She was a manicure. Hand holding was her business. But there was no business in her soul when she felt within her hands his hands.

His eyes opened. He had come half unwillingly, as though on a dare, half reluctantly, like a growing boy about to have his neck washed for a "party." But, what was this? Something was coming over him that he had never known before. He tried to pull himself together like a man who has taken one too much (in the good old days), felt himself slipping, tried to straighten before he collapsed, but couldn't quite conquer with wilted will power the chemical elements already distributed through his blood.

His head grew light. He felt faint. Then the blood rushed back in a wave. His face was flushed.

She had dipped his hands—still within hers—into tepid, smooth, soothing, slippery, slathery water. She was rubbing them gently—O, so gently, with a feathery touch lubricated with soap, scented soap that filled his nostrils. He looked across the little table. Her eyes were limpid; they were sad. But they were large eyes, lovely eyes.

"M-miss—Birdie," he gulped. "You—you mustn't——"

She dropped his hands suddenly, and they splashed in the little crystal bowl.

"No, no; I mean you mustn't—you mustn't ever again hold any other man's hands."

"Why? How—I've got to live; I don't know any other way to make a decent living."

"But I do. As soon as I leave here I'm going to tell Holworth that I go on days or I quit. A married man has no right to work nights."

"But how does that let me out?"

"It lets you out, all right. It lets you in. You're the girl I'm going to switch shifts for. Do you——"

She did. She was squeezing his hands down in the concealing water, and no one but he knew or felt, for isn't that a manicure's business?

The Plait's the Thing

by Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Palm Beach is more than a state of being. It's a prophecy. And everybody knows that what "they" wear in the south we shall wear in the spring.

Of course, this year Palm Beach is a generic term. What with Havana playing to crowded houses and Florida busier than usual, the north seems to act in only one rôle. That is to supply the frocks to go south. And certainly we are supplying them with a cornucopia. Never in this world were New York windows so thoroughly populated by fluffs.

We show you today what the designers have been about. First of all, here is a suit of oyster white serge, indicating the present passion for plaiting. In looking over the late imports from Paris one is impressed by this feature. Skirts and suit coats and separate coats all show some new trick of plaiting. To be sure, this is not generally the old fashioned kind. The brand new plait is a fine knife or accordion one, and as such does not interfere with the light and lissome line.

On skirts the plait is usually assigned to sides or back. Plaited side panels are, for example, used on several chic tricotine suits of navy. Sometimes, too, these panels are fastened up under the hem. Another favorite form of jazzing the plait is to use it on tiers, occurring in the back alone. For it must be remembered that the dictum, plain in the front, is still the most authoritative in skirt legislation.

Suit coats as well as separate coats show an infinite variety of plaited inserts. Nothing can illustrate this tendency better than the suit at the left. Here the back inset of plait contagion spreads to collar, bindings, and to the narrow panels on each side of the skirt. It is a stunning model and one which may be carried out in tricotine or serge of dark color.

Tricotine is the favorite cloth for both suits and frocks, and I should hate to take the census of the tricotine garments traveling south. Poiret twill and plain, old fashioned serge are, however, both good, and, like tricotine, will be much in evidence during our northern spring. Navy blue is, of course, in the lead with these fabrics, yet gray, beige, and toast color are all noted constantly.

READING from left to right, one finds a suit of oyster white serge trimmed entirely with knife plaits followed by a white embroidered net decked with Nattier blue ribbons. Next comes a suit of white Shantung silk embroidered in self-colored floss and varying the box plaits of its skirt by accordian plaits. The last is a white crepe de chine bound in silk duvetyn of pale rose tint and finished with gilet of Valenciennes and Brittany lace.

But we don't just let our dull colors alone. O, no, indeed. Everything is bright and cheery as the mid-Victorian era with the horse hair furniture left out! Much of this cheeriness is due to the present mode of combining cloth with silk. A vivid green taffeta hood may nowadays set off a blue tricotine frock. Insets of finely plaited silk in orange or rose are likely to occur in the collar and cuffs of a gray serge suit. And the redingote suit, of which, by the way, we shall probably see as much this spring as it was predicted we should this fall, gives unlimited opportunities for combining dull colored cloths with dashing tints of silk.

Speaking of this last combination, Jeanne Halle has just contributed something quaint as a real compromise. This is a redingote of toast color twill opening in front and back over a slip of bright foulard. The bell shaped sleeves are split to show plaited lingerie undersleeves. And the last touch comes from narrow black ciré ribbons beginning at the neck and falling down to loop under the hem of the skirt.

A word about these ciré ribbons. Ciré, as you know, is the French word for waxed, and these ribbons live up to the word. They are all shiny and, just at present, they are all chic. The French designers use them plenteously as insets, girdles, bindings, and what not? They are a feature of the early spring millinery, and even street wraps do not disdain their glossy touch. Thus one imported model of a cape coat has its gray cloth enlivened by a binding of dull red ciré ribbon placed on the inner side of the short cape. And, by the bye, this banding on the inner side is something we borrowed from the old Godey books. It and the bell shaped sleeves and the plaited bands sometimes bordering the draped skirts are all quaint modes, contributing to the up-to-dateness of modern frocks.

The second frock which we show today is a lingerie model. This is of white embroidered net set off with

How to Use the Patterns

If you have any question relating to sewing that you would like to have answered write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

I IMAGINE many girls who see the drawing for No. 9534 will want to have one of their new spring frocks made by that pattern. It is delightfully simple and girlish, easy to make, and with the pockets, has the desirable bouffant effect at the hips.

The skirt and waist are cut in one, and it may be made with or without the pockets, as they are sewed into the side seams of the skirt when putting those seams together. If the dress is made with the narrow shield in the waist it would be pretty to make the shield, collar, and pocket lining of some contrasting silk or satin.

Of course, the pockets must be finished before being set into the skirt seams. If they are not to be lined there are perforations marking the width for a hem across the top, but if they are to be lined the lining can be laid right side to the right side of the pocket and stitched in a seam across the top. Then press the seam open and turn the lining to the wrong side. Pressing a seam open makes a perfectly flat turning and is much better looking than when the pressing is done from the right side only.

If the dart is to be used in the sleeves to make them close fitting, baste one sleeve up and try it on before cutting the dart seam. In fitting a sleeve always see that it comes well up on the arm and see that the arm can be freely bent. If no cutting has been done and the dart as basted makes the sleeve too tight, it can easily be made right.

The boy's suit, No. 9,533, will be smart looking made of striped and plain linen, galatea or gingham, or in white duck or pique. Whatever wash material is chosen it should be well shrunken before being used.

The lower edge of the waist is turned up in a hem, and the buttons are sewed to the hem, but to help prevent the buttons being pulled off and tearing the cloth it will be best to stitch a strong tape on the under side of the hem and sew the buttons through this. Another help is to sew the buttons on loosely enough to let a good shank be formed by the thread. If the buttons are sewed close down to the cloth they are much more apt to tear the cloth.

About the easiest way to get the right effect at the neck is first to sew the shoulder seams together, then have the upper and under collar sections and the front facing cut. Cut the facing and middle front of the blouse to the points indicated, and then take the collar section that is to be on top and pin it at each end to the front facing, with the seam on the wrong side. Then stitch the seams from the front edges to nearly the end of the facing. Make a little clip in the collar on each side, just where the seams end, and press the seams open.

Now stitch the under collar section to the blouse, stitch from each front edge to the shoulder seam, this time having the seams come on the wrong side of the front. Then lay the right side of the collar and facing to the right side of the under collar and front, and stitch from the triple perforation point on one side up and around the collar and down to the starting point on the other side.

The seam where it begins and ends [at the point the front is cut open to] must be run off at the point to almost no width, then gradually widened until it is a half inch seam. Press the seam open as well as you can before turning the collar right side out.

Then the edges of the front facing can be turned in and stitched, and after clipping the upper and under collar sections so that the edges will not "draw," stitch the under collar section in a seam on the wrong side to the back of the waist, and hem the outside collar section down over it.

The holes for the eyelets should be punched with a stiletto and a shallow over and over stitch taken around the hole.

The house dress, No. 8,891, is a pretty design and will not present any difficulties for the home sewer. Waist and skirt are cut separately and set into the same band, and the front section of the skirt is cut in two pieces and hemmed down the middle front the entire length, the edges being turned back in hems and stitched together, leaving the skirt open to twelve inches below the waist for the placket.

It is sometimes nice to have a wash dress made so that it can be opened the entire length of the skirt. It always makes ironing easier—a reason not to be despised. I know a woman who makes all her wash dresse for morning wear that way. One set of pearl butons with shanks is used for all the dresses. Buttonholes are made on the right front, and eyelets worked on the left front, and small rings are used to hold the buttons on. The buttons do not lose their luster, as they will with constantly being in the water, do not break or pull off, and it is really little work to take them in and out for laundering.

When trying on a waist and the armholes seem too close and tight, remove the waist and gently stretch the armholes around the lower half of the front, where the edge curves the most. The stretching must be carefully done, and it will often give enough "ease" there. Of course too high an armhole is uncomfortable, but is not nearly so bad a fault as one that is cut out too much.

9534—Misses' or small women's one piece dress, to be slipped on over the head. The width at the lower edge for size 16 is 1⅝ yards. It is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years.

8891—Woman's house dress, sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 36 inch or 4 yards of 42 inch material, with ⅛ yard of 36 inch contrasting material. The lower edge of the skirt measures 2¾ yards.

9533—Boy's suit. It is cut in sizes 2, 4, and 6 years, and size 4 takes 1⅛ yards of 27 inch in striped material and 1⅛ yards of 27 inch in plain material.

WHAT BETTY DID FOR JACK.

BETTY was really her employer's right hand man, but he was totally unconscious of the fact, really never realizing how much he did depend on her and simply considered her as a clerk with nothing much to do However, Betty got the flu and Mr. Employer was up in the air. He called her on the telephone regarding this and that until her fever began to soar and the doctor ordered all telephone communications cut off. He was wild then.

One Monday morning found Jack and I, two recruits, on the job. Jack was a young western chap just back from overseas and as green as I was in the advertising and publishing line. We worked hard and tried to please Mr. Employer, but the harder we worked, the less we pleased him, and he was continually in such a rage that Jack dubbed him "Grizzly," and "Grizzly" he remained.

After two or three days of raving both of us decided to quit and told him so, but he would not hear of it. We both showed up next morning, vowing to ourselves that we would never put in such a day as the one before, but it was just as bad and so was the next. We handed in our resignations every night and the next morning showed up as usual until one particularly trying day. Grizzly had just called both of us down and we were miffed about it, so handed in our resignations again. He was desperate by this time and told us that we could quit if we wanted to, but for the "love of Mike" please stay until Betty returned.

We naturally thought Betty would return in a few days, so consented to do so. But the few days rolled into a week, and the weeks rolled into a month, and finally six weeks rolled around until the happy day. The office was humming with the customary noises and lo and behold, I heard some one call Betty and I looked up. There I beheld a tall thin girl, with dark eyes and short curly hair. Every one was making a fuss over her and Jack said to me then, "I never felt so much like kissing anybody in my life, as I do her; we can both quit now and we'll celebrate by taking in a show."

In due time Betty reached her department. She was introduced to me, but Grizzly ignored Jack completely. That didn't seem to bother either one of them, for next morning when I arrived; I found the two of them chatting like old friends. We both liked her, taking her to the theater and to dinner. Everything went along swimmingly until one day he told us he was going to be married. It was like a bolt out of the blue, but Betty looked at him, smiled, and wished him all the luck in the world.

The day set for the wedding was but a short way off and Jack was rather rushed for time, so he turned to Betty for help. Would she look at this flat and see how she liked it? She would, and did. Would she go and look at the rug he picked out for the living room? He depended on her taste and judgment for everything. When it came to the kitchen would Betty pick out just what she would like and buy it? Well, Betty did it—she entered into the game heart and soul.

The night Jack left for the west to claim his bride, Betty and I had dinner with him. He praised Betty for her taste and thanked her for her kindness and in bidding us good night, told Betty that next to the "girl in the west," he loved her best. He handed Betty the keys to the flat, as we were going out to wash the dishes and put them on the shelves, so that everything would be in readiness when they returned.

The morning they were due was a nasty, damp, rainy Sunday, and Betty rose much earlier than usual in order to meet them and escort them out to the flat, where steaming coffee and hot biscuits awaited the newly wedded pair. After pouring the coffee, Betty sneaked off to church, leaving them alone, to enjoy their first meal in their own home.

That's what I call true love. A. F.

For WINTER TROUBLES CHAPPED HANDS— LIPS— TOUGH SKIN

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads; flat-chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Tribune."

EVERY season has its own beauty troubles. The summer burn and freckles have a lively rival in the winter chaps and chilblains and the contemporary trouble makers of Mr. Jack Frost's time.

Skin irritations in winter are apt to be many. The change in extremes from a warm heated flat to a cold outdoors atmosphere sometimes registers irritations on face or hands and on sensitive toes. Much indoor living during the cold weather when there is a lack of moisture in the air results in the skin on both face and body becoming dry. An excellent protection against this is the following lanoline cream: Two parts lanoline, one part boroglyceride, six parts cold cream made with white vaseline. Rub well into the skin at night. Or apply before going out during the day.

Maybe chapped lips is your winter beauty ill? Slip into your handbag a camphor ice stick which you can buy reasonably at any drug store and apply it to your lips three or four times a day. They are a combination of camphor and vaseline with white wax added for coloring. If the lips are in pretty bad shape, wet a lump of alum with the tip of your tongue and apply this frequently.

Chapped hands, perhaps? The old fashioned rosewater and glycerin in equal parts with a few drops of benzoin added is excellent; also equal parts of glycerin and camphor is highly efficient.

Chapped face? Chapping does not occur in warm seasons, because at such times the sweat and fat glands are active and keep the skin thoroughly oiled. People with dry skins are more afflicted with chapping than those with naturally oily skins. Too frequent washings, especially with strong soaps and failure to dry the parts thoroughly after washing, will cause the skin on both hands and face to chap. An oily soap for extremely sensitive winter skins should be used. Or grease the skin lightly with a good cold cream a couple of times a day. The secret in preventing and curing chapped skin is to make up the deficiency of fat which the skin is failing to supply for itself.

Or is it a red nose you have a-bothering you? Troubles of circulation and bad digestion are generally to blame. Cold feet are found usually traveling along in the same "carriage" with a red nose. A cold sponge mornings and a four mile walk a day will do marvels for both the digestion trouble and the circulation.

Chilblains? A mild frostbite is the definition of chilblains. Anything which impedes the circulation predisposes to chilblains—tight shoes, narrow pointed shoes, any footgear which fails to give the toes necessary room for movement, tight garters, tight corsets, insufficient daily exercise, and long hours standing with little moving about. Victims of excessive perspiration of the feet are easy sufferers from chilblains, too. The remedy for these latter naturally is to remove that trouble. The aluminum chloride treatment, which is a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water dabbed gently over the feet and between the toes, is recommended.

For chilblain treatment use camphorated oil, or bay rum, or vinegar, applied with brisk friction to give relief to the burning and stinging accompanying the redness. After the natural color is restored the skin should be smeared with fresh cold cream, covered with a layer of gauze and cotton, and bandage.

grosgrain ribbons in Nattier blue. These are looped at the sides and are run through sleeves and skirt. The frock exemplifies our present method of drawing in even lingerie models about the hem.

The fact of it is that in spite of the wide skirt which threatens us for summer wear the most of the lingerie models have hems not more than a yard and a quarter in width. And where the wide floaty tunic appears the underskirt is frequently narrow indeed. These skirts are still short, and it is a matter of interest that even women who were formerly kilt shy are now donning skirts eight or nine inches above the ground. More daring spirits wear them twelve inches above.

The lingerie frock is more in evidence now than for many seasons. Paris has sent us for southern wear exquisite hand embroidered batistes. Vying with these are marvelous embroidered gowns from the Philippines.

The lace timmed lingerie gown is also with us once again. Valenciennes, binche, filet, and Irish are all used this season. Speaking of the last, the revival is being done so thoroughly that we feel ourselves transported back to the good old days when the Newport casino was one web after another of the handsome Irish lace. Blouses, too, record the return of the fancy. Some of the most exquisite of those taken to southern shores have baby Irish collars and cuffs and jabots, and the blouse done of Irish lace dyed to the fashionable toast color is one of the most stirring of our blouse imports.

The knife plaiting of which we have spoken is another noteworthy feature of new lingerie waists. Some of them disdain lace assistance entirely in favor of cuffs and collars and insets of the material done into the most minute plaits. Inch wide tucks with picoted edges are another way to make a blouse self-supporting. The fact of it is that the picoted tuck is found in every domain of the spring dressing.

Among the suits one finds numerous Shantung weaves. We show you an excellent model of such a suit in the second figure to the right of the page. Here the skirt is replete, complete—everything but depleted. For it mixes accordion plaits with knife plaits and bids you admire the orchestration. The coat is embroidered in self-color.

The last is a frock of white crêpe de chine bound with pale rose silk duvetyn. The skirt of this is also plaited, and the vestee mingles Britanny lace with Valenciennes.

Family Jars and Budgets

By Alice Manning Dickey.

A budget is the plan by which a year's income is apportioned in advance between the different branches of expenditure. The Tribune Budget editor will furnish sample budgets upon request, and assist in planning individual budgets, with the coöperation of the woman's department, fair price commission, of Illinois, and the budget experts on its staff. Address Budget Editor, The Chicago Sunday Tribune.

NINE-TENTHS of the family jars, small and large, which most American families encounter from time to time are due to annoyances over money problems. But if we would put our family jars into a family budget we would never be able to find them again.

It is difficult to feel aggrieved over the mild extravagance of some other member of the family while one's own pet desire remains ungratified, if each has had a perfectly just and equitable share of the contents of the family purse; but when the income as a whole is drawn upon first by one member to meet a special emergency and then by another for a coveted outing, it is almost impossible to make the distribution of family funds an equitable one. The most insistent or the most selfish or the first to ask get the best of the arrangement and there is sure to be disappointment somewhere, even when good breeding prevents bickering and recrimination.

The father of a family who hands over unrelated sums, as requested, with the vague idea that they must be covering all the daily expenses, grows irritable over the unpaid bills which grace the first of the month. The wife who has debated anxiously whether she dare buy a pair of shoes this month, after a mental estimate of what the grocery bill, the laundry bill, and the milk bill are sure to be, is not in the frame of mind to soothe evidences of irritation on the part of father. He cannot understand why women do not use more judgment in spending money; she cannot understand why men are so blind to feminine needs and so perennially surprised at the cost of groceries. There are apt to be, if not a few barbed words, at least some acid silences.

Budget for All the Family.

There is but one solution to such a situation—a family budget. Not a budget decided upon by the husband wherein his accustomed indulgences are set down firmly among the necessaries before any allowance is determined upon for other members of the family, nor a budget decided upon by the wife with all the things she would like to add to her household equipment or personal wardrobe carefully added in, leaving no margin at all for savings.

The budget which brings family peace in its train provides first for savings—that anchor to windward which unquestionably adds to a man's earning capacity. The knowledge of a nest egg to fall back upon in cases of disaster in business or the loss of a salaried position lends a man that confidence and independence which are the basis of real success. No man can carry both the responsibility of a business position and the worry of nagging bills at home without impairing his working efficiency. His way out is through the family budget.

As for the wife, there are few women who would not welcome the opportunity to live on even less money than they have been accustomed to spend, if a definite weekly allowance was determined upon for each branch of family expenditure. The sensation which goes with submitting a sheaf of unpaid bills to another person who must pay them but who has no first hand knowledge of present costs is one no woman would willingly court.

Put Home on Business Basis.

Sensible men and sensible women, then, both for the good of the family pocketbook and their individual peace of mind, should as promptly as possible put the home on a business basis. Whatever record has been kept of last year's expenses, even if it only exists on check stubs or in bill files, will serve as a basis for the budget of another year.

Setting all the figures down in black and white and separating them into certain general classes will help in determining what per cent of the family income should be allotted to the different needs. It is not an infallible basis, however, for last year's expenditures for clothes or food may be out of proportion to the income as a whole, and in a just budget these items may need reduction.

Make yours, then, a trial budget. Test it for a month, keeping careful account of all expenditures and trying to hold them within their allotted per cents. If some of your estimates prove inadequate revise your budget at the end of the month and make another trial. After one or two such readjustments you should be able to settle upon a budget which will stand up under a year's strain.

Personal and Emergency Allowances.

There are two points I wish to reemphasize as essential to a satisfactory budget, even a trial one. First a personal allowance to each member of the household, which is his or her private affair, and which should cover clothing as well as other expenses. If one chooses to spread this record before the family gaze, well and good; but nothing is so exasperating as the critical eye of another cast upon our small follies expressed in dollars and cents. So long as each member of the family lives within his or her allowance, how it is spent should be no concern of the other members, except in the case of children or young people.

The second point I wish to stress again is that a generous per cent be allowed for emergency expenses. It is astonishing how regularly emergencies rear their heads and what havoc they make of a budget which has made no provision for anything but the most obvious expenses of the family.

(Note.—Next Sunday Mrs. Dickey will offer some suggested budgets for the unattached business woman. In the meantime she would be glad to hear confidentially from a number of girls in the business world with all the information they are willing to give as to what they find it necessary to pay under present conditions, for room, meals, laundry, and especially clothes. How you manage may help some one else; or, if your salary is a small one, the problems which are bothering you may be ones which need to be solved for hundreds of other girls.)

Skates for Some Kid.

"I have a couple of pairs of good steel skates which I would be glad to give to some kiddie who would call for them. Won't you let them know?

"E. W."

So here's letting you know. The skating sason is brief, so hurry and make application before the thaw sets in.

This Baby Wants a Chair.

"I am in need of a high chair for my 10 months old baby. If some kind person has one and would let me know I would gladly call for it. I am a widow and cannot afford to buy one.

"M. E. W."

Another call from one of the rising generation. Who can provide the high chair?

Likes Story Books.

"I am a girl of 12 years and I am much interested in story books. I wish I could get the Wizard of Oz books.

"THELMA S."

I wish you could, too, for I remember how much I liked them. Here's hoping you may have the pleasure of reading them soon.

Needs a Baby's Wardrobe.

"I wonder if there is some one who has some discarded infant clothes. I will shortly need a baby's wardrobe and would pay parcel post charges on it. I am in difficult circumstances at present and would greatly appreciate any help given me. MRS. J. J. C."

Infants outgrow their baby clothes quickly, so there ought to be some garments which could be sent for the new arrival from Babyland.

Pictures to Cut Out.

"I am a little boy 10 years old. I was run over by an auto truck and cannot go out. I should like to get some books or magazines or some pictures to cut out. ROBERT E. S."

You little fellows who are able to be out and about having your fun would like, I am sure, to share some of your favorite stories with Bob. Write to me for his address.

Drawn Fashioned by Peggy Paige New York

BEAUTY is a real thing. It has a meaning in every girl's and woman's life. To her who possesses it the lovely land of Romance opens wide its gates. So a girl craves frocks that will set off the glory of her hair and skin and emphasize the grace of her youthful slenderness.

Peggy Paige is the sympathetic interpreter of the girl and young woman. Peggy Paige has created a line of dresses suited to every type. They are for street and afternoon wear, for sports, for informal evening occasions. Taffeta, tricolette, satin, georgette are the materials of which they are made, and touches of hand embroidery, or quaint little frillings, or tiny bunches of hand made flowers, give them an altogether unusual distinction.

Peggy Paige dresses are to be had at all the leading stores. You will find many charming models for late winter and early spring wear, at a price astoundingly moderate.

Boarding House Tales

Wouldn't Hold Much.

I boarded at a so-called fashionable boarding house. If a lavish display of fine china and cut glass with a microscopic showing of "eats" is one of the essentials for a place of this type, ours was certainly a top-notcher. Meals were served on little round tables accommodating two or three persons.

At dinner one evening a soulful young woman opposite me said rapturously: "Aren't these little individual round tables darling?"

"Perhaps," I responded ruefully, "they are the reason for our never getting a square meal." K. A.

The boarding house is teeming with human interest stories. Tell us a tale about the funny characters you have met in your experience as "paying guest." The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Address Editor Boarding House Tales, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Anything to Get Them.

For several weeks last fall I lived at a boarding house in a resort town in northern Michigan. The meals were good, but the service was slow at times.

One evening at supper we had eaten everything in sight, stacked our dishes and waited a long time for the waitress to bring the dessert.

At last she came to our table and said, "Will you boys wish for dew berries and cake?"

Before any of the rest of us could smile and say, "Yes, please," one fellow said, "If that's what we have to do to get them, I'll wish for them."

Picking the Bones.

The place was clean and the food was good, but sparing—one chop was served apiece. Across from me sat the hungriest looking man I had ever seen. His face looked so hungry and emaciated that I couldn't bear to look at him. The man next to him left his seat. With the words, "I guess there is a little more picking on that," he reached over to the deserted plate, picked up the discarded chop, and greedily munched the bone. L. W. P.

"California Syrup of Figs"

For a Child's Liver and Bowels

Mother! Say "California," then you will get genuine "California Syrup of Figs." Full directions for babies and children of all ages who are constipated, bilious, feverish, tongue-coated, or full of cold, are plainly printed on the bottle. Children love the delicious laxative.

"PERSONALLY INTERESTED"

A FRIEND asked the question, "What to you is the most gratifying feature of the success of your business?" My reply was, "The personal interest and seeming pleasure of our customers in the progress of our business. They notice every improvement in the store's service, the added conveniences, remark about the increased assortments of high quality merchandise and the lower prices; in fact, they seem to take as much pride in these signs of advancement as the members of our organization who are responsible for them."

We attribute this "Personally Interested" attitude of our customers to the quality of "Personal Service" we render them, and to their kindly interest the thousands of new customers each month who look to us for their needs.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

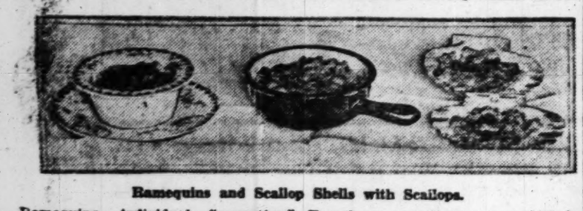
This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

By Jane Eddington.

THE NEWER SIDE DISHES.

IT is not so many years since hotels and boarding houses wreathed a guest's dinner plate with ugly little stoneware dishes containing a dab of potato, of turnip or squash, of peas or beans, etc. Oliver Wendell Holmes, who justly hated these "vegetable dishes," called them "bird's bath tubs." They were really little cold tombstones set up to indicate that heat had departed from anything served in them. In some kitchens they were kept in a warm place, but in most kitchens they were not.

We do these things better now.



Ramequins and Scallop Shells with Scallops.

Ramequins, individual "cocoottes," and certain dishes of the more primitive but yet rather elegant scallop shell, all heated with the foods served in them, are much in use today. These are suitable for creamed dishes of every sort—fish, meat, macaroni, or vegetables, and what are called made dishes and madeovers as well.

We need these dishes in winter in order that our foods may be hot. We need them at all seasons to preserve quality. We know what happens to the quality of any save the most highly seasoned potato as it cools. There are losses as great, but not so manifest, to the ordinary palate, as these of the potato, in the case of the other vegetables.

The real principle of this sort of food preparation is that we reduce the surface exposed to the air. This means that we lessen the evaporation surface, a surface from which not only heat is lost but precious flavors as well.

Some Dishes in Baking Dishes.

In cold weather, when a meal cannot be served on the minute, there is no better way of serving side dish foods than in the earthen baking dishes, the individual, or the large ones. These dishes may be of the baking glass or even of china, but enamel cannot be fully recommended. It is not as clean and safe as the earthen ware. Vegetables which have been cooked on top of the stove may be easily transferred to these dishes when a meal is delayed, with the seasonings necessary, and with the bread crumb covering, and put into the oven. Fifteen or twenty minutes baking improves their quality in almost every case, and they will then keep hot for ten or fifteen minutes out of the oven.

Take macaroni for which you have no sauce, because you have no milk on hand and no meat stock or gravy of any sort. Cook it in a little water in a closed vessel, and when it is done add salt, some butter, and a little cheese, then put it into a ramequin, sprinkle with the fine bread crumbs, which keep for weeks if properly prepared, dot it with butter, and bake under the broiler or in a hot oven until it puffs or browns. The little water not absorbed by the macaroni will, with the melted cheese, make it wet enough. Not so many years ago I thought it unjustifiable to put macaroni to cook in cold water. Now I always do, and for small quantities use only as much water as macaroni, by cup measurement.

In Scallop Shells.

Having had the "coquilles St. Jacques" in France, I was as proud as possible when I found I could imitate these quite well with salt codfish or by making what we might call scalloped codfish. The French cook puts infinite patience and quite endless time into preparing the mixture, which is served in the scallop shell (coquille), and is no more to eat than a great spoonful. This is nevertheless an economical dish, where many people are served because of the tiny portion.

For filling six scallop shells, or small ramequins, take one cup of boiled and shredded salt codfish, one cup of white sauce, one raw egg, and seasonings which include some grated bread crumbs. The codfish and white sauce must be cooked gently together until perfectly blended, then add the egg beaten and cook gently until bubbles disappear.

In pre-prohibition days one teaspoon of sherry wine was added to this because some of the ingredients of the French preparation were cooked in wine. But a tiny bit of garlic will not be distinguishable as such, and we need it the more now that we have not the teaspoon of wine. Butter six scallop shells, put the mixture into them, sprinkle with grated bread crubs and little slivers of butter, and put under the broiler or into a hot oven for ten or fifteen minutes.

Celery in White Sauce.

Coarse outer stems of celery, if scraped and peeled out into quarter inch cross slices and cooked in a little water, may be made to go further and seem nicer if served up in the little glass baking dishes or in scallop shells than in any other way. After the celery is cooked tender it may be put into a white sauce, but is finest if after it is drained it is put into a sauce made of a cup of cream, one teaspoon of flour, and one ounce of cheese, with salt and pepper to taste.

It takes longer to prepare this sauce if the flour is used, but if we are to use the scallop shells we can fill them fuller if the sauce is thicker than the ounce of cheese will make it. Neither will there be so much evaporation, so the sauce goes a little farther. Put the celery into the sauce and when blended fill dishes or shells, sprinkle grated cheese over the top, and bake ten minutes in a hot oven or under broiler until cheese is evenly browned. Celery served hot and in cream will be a new thing to many people.

Chicken in cream sauce, almost any fish in a cream sauce, white fish flaked and in as near a Newburg sauce as we can make today, creamed sweetbreads, creamed vegetables, and mixtures of meat and vegetables may be elegantly and gratifyingly served in these dishes which have themselves been to the oven. Potato in as small portions as these is not satisfactory, but in general the small portion if prepared to a near perfection satisfies the appetite as well as twice the quantity not so nicely seasoned and so hot.

It is one of the lessons many a housewife has to learn what may be served in small portions and what in large. The old fashioned table groaned with heaps of everything. Those were the days of the wasteful leftovers. These newer side dishes furnish an opportunity of utilizing quite unbelievably small amounts left over, without making some of the atrocious mixtures recommended by too enthusiastic pantry rummaging.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery

By Elizabeth O. Hiller.

Tomato Sauce.

Melt four tablespoons of butter in a saucepan; add two tablespoons of chopped onion, two tablespoons of chopped carrot, and one tablespoon of chopped parsley. Cook five minutes without browning. Strain, and to the butter add four tablespoons of flour; when well blended add slowly while stirring constantly one cup each of hot brown stock and thick tomato pulp. Bring to the boiling point, reduce the heat, and let simmer thirty minutes. Strain and serve as directed. If a peeled clove of garlic is dropped into the sauce and allowed to cook in the sauce three or four minutes before straining, the sauce will have the flavor of Sauce a l'Italienne.

Salt Codfish Fritters.

Soak one cup of "picked up" salt codfish over night in cold water. Drain and remove all the water by squeezing the fish in a cloth; add four well beaten eggs, one cup of milk, and one-fourth teaspoon of black pepper and mix thoroughly. Cook by tablespoons on a well greased hot griddle; when browned on one side turn and brown the other side. Serve at once from the hot griddle.

This is an inexpensive breakfast dish and an economical way of extending a few eggs. The recipe makes eight fritters. Serve with corn muffins.

Stuffed Green Peppers.

Cook one finely chopped small onion in two tablespoons of butter or margarine three minutes without browning. Add one-fourth cup of finely chopped fresh broiled mushrooms [canned mushrooms may be used, the flavor is not as fine, however,] one-half cup of finely chopped lean raw ham; continue cooking two minutes, stirring constantly. Add one-half cup of brown sauce and enough soft bread crumbs to make of the consistency of bread stuffing [about two-thirds cup.] Season with salt, pepper, and a few grains of cayenne. Cut thin slices from the stem ends of six medium sized green peppers, remove the seeds and white portion. Parboil in boiling salted water ten minutes; drain and fill with mixture; cover tops with buttered crumbs and bake ten minutes in a hot oven. Place them side by side in a well buttered baking dish when baking. Serve them in rings of hot buttered toast and pour around brown sauce. Serve as an entree or for the main dish for a light luncheon.

This Tells You How to Get Benefit of the Best Senna

Finest Grade of Egyptian Senna Leaves used in compounding Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

PROMINENT importers and wholesale dealers in crude drugs and medicinal herbs gathered from all parts of the world do not hesitate to say that the market for the better grades of medicinal herbs, roots, oils, etc., is practically confined to the leading manufacturers of the so-called package medicines, who buy only the very best, and that the manufacturers of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are the largest users of the best grade of Egyptian senna leaves in the world.

The potency of a tea brewed from senna leaves to relieve constipation has long been recognized, not only by the medical profession, but by the public generally; in fact, senna has been known and used in medicine for more than five centuries. The cheaper grades of senna, such as are usually sold at retail, have, however, a tendency to gripe and cramp which makes their use unpopular with most people.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the finest Egyptian senna is combined with pepsin and other valuable agents, essential oils and pure cane sugar syrup to make an exceptionally valuable tonic-laxative for the relief of constipation and resulting disturbances of the stomach and bowels. The complete formula is plainly printed in English, French, and Spanish on every package. Thousands who formerly bought an inferior grade of senna leaves now use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin instead. It is sold in drug stores everywhere.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there being over 6 million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 511 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

The Above Sales for Monday at Both Stores

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.

SKIRTS A BIT WIDER.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Have you had any indications of spring in your town yet? How about that first robin on the lake front, and the Chicago river—is it high and muddier than ever? In our town we are enveloped in fog and misty rain, so that we cannot tell whether it is Paris or London, and yet there are these little preliminary signs of better days to come.

Evening skirts are getting a little wider, as a preparatory note of the openings which mark the official arrival in Paris instead of the calendar date of March 21, employed in America. Buttons are appearing as trimmings; the entire Galerie Lafayette is laid out in check and plaids.

Model of Fur Cloak Which Will Be Seen Frequently Later.

At the big houses young and ardent buyers are asking to see the things that are still "in the work," in the hope of pulling off a scoop on the older buyers, not yet arrived. These know how idle is the neat little scheme of their young competitors, perfect in all of its appointments except for one detail, which is that the smart houses won't show them or anybody else the things. These smart houses might adopt a phrase that every Chicago reporter has had handed to him more than once. They are arranging that "all of the papers shall be treated exactly alike and the reporters will be sent for when the management is ready to make a statement." Meantime, the houses show to old and trusted customers certain models in their private rooms, so that if they wish to order frocks they may be sure that they are getting something which will not be out of style for at least five years.

Joan Sawyer's Green Taffeta Dancing Frock.

I should mention that as the length of service for an up to date Paris gown. Some American women are always looking at the cut of the material to see if it would make over to advantage. The economy of a French gown is that it never has to be made over—at least, not in the first two or three years of its life—and after that the matter is optional.

The cape of fur shown herewith illustrates the point I was mentioning a moment ago. The customer was treated to a private view of this creation in soft velour.

The distinctive feature of the cape is that it has a vest coming round the back and over the shoulders in gilet shape and held in place with one large button. To it the back of the cape is anchored. Fastened to the cape proper is a scarf of the same fur which can fall down in the back to the waistline or draw up round the neck to the ears, thereby insuring to the cape something that all French winter wraps do not go in for and that is warmth.

Evening Gown With Full Tunic.

The evening frock is the one worn by Joan Sawyer at Claridge's when she dances. I was saying that evening skirts were getting it a little wider round the bottom. You can see for yourself. The frock is of bright green, stiff taffeta. The girdle has two trailing ends, which the dancer holds in her hands while dancing. It is of silver, black and lemon yellow brocade. Strands of emeralds serve as shoulder straps.

The third sketch emphasizes a new indication for spring styles. The tunic is getting fuller, so far as the naked eye can detect, and perhaps shorter, while the underskirt, if possible, is apparently a little tighter. The gown is of gold cloth and coarse gold lace in the underskirt, the thin train, and the Moroccan jacket. The bodice and the tunic are of gold cloth. A zigzag band of brown fur runs round the hips. Two bands of beads, crossing over the chest, hold the jacket and the bodice in place. The fan is of flaming vermilion ostrich plumes.

Some fashion expert was saying he would not be a bit surprised to see wiring in even the most practical of skirts. The lady of decoration No. 4 is not wearing what we of Chicago would deem a practical frock for the regular meetings of the woman's club, but she admirably exemplifies the new style. Her frock is by Poiret. The skirt is stiffly wired, and the material is gathered in round the ankles with pearl anklets that hold it in close, opening like trousers. The material

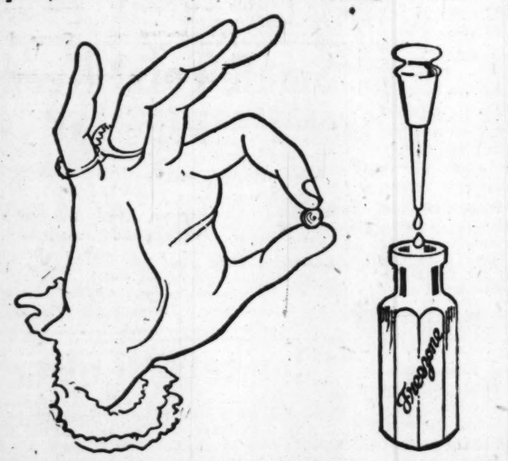
LIFT OFF CORNS!

With the fingers! No pain at all! Drop a little "Freezone" on a sore, tender corn or a callus. Instantly that corn or callus stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without pain, soreness or irritation. Yes, magic!



Why wait! Costs only a few cents! Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes and painful calluses on bottom of feet just loosen and fall off. Truly! You feel no pain when applying Freezone or afterward.

Blinding Headache!

Long hours, nervous strain, constant worry, confined atmosphere—

You cannot stand it—you need a rest.

And while you're resting let Chamberlain's Tablets, mild, safe, tonic, laxative, stir up your liver, gently cleanse the stomach and bring about a natural and healthy action of the bowels.

Take one tonight—and while you sleep and rest, win back much-needed strength and nervous energy.

Simple enough, isn't it? Don't neglect it—Headaches are Nature's warning.

Ask your Druggist for Chamberlain's Tablets, 25c, or by mail from Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des Moines, Ia.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

SORENESS, PAIN, ACHING JOINTS

Don't suffer! Relief comes the moment you rub with old "St. Jacobs Liniment"

Don't stay sore, stiff and lame! Limber up. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment" right in your aching muscles, joints and painful nerves. It's the quickest, surest pain relief on earth. It is absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

"St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain. It instantly takes away any aches, soreness and stiffness in the head, neck, shoulders, back, legs, arms, fingers or any part of the body—nothing like it. You simply pour a little in your hand and rub "where it hurts," and relief comes instantly. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle now from any drug store. It never disappoints—six gold medal awards.

Far Above the Clatter of Higher Prices for Women's Fine Footwear Throughout the Country Comes This—

A Clarion Call to Real Shoe Economy—Women's

$8 to $12 Shoes, 14 Latest Spring Styles Here in Complete Size Range, at 5.35

(Fourth Floor, Center—No Mail or Telephone Orders Filled.)

Truly it is the unexpected that is always to be looked for, but who indeed ever thought that such a Shoe sale was to be expected, and though Shoe sales will be fewer than during the past, there will be no sale that will even attempt to offer values of equal prominence upon the very threshold of the spring season, nor at any other time this year—a notable transaction that makes it possible for us to offer

Fourteen of the spring season's foremost styles, made in the most exacting manner, that show their worth in every smart line and beautiful detail, and each style in a complete range of sizes and widths, at so extraordinary a saving, so remarkably low a price.

The purchase comprises 17,825 pairs in all, a purchase that in size alone towers far above the usual, just as it does in the economies it makes possible. As to the details, we cannot advertise the makers' names; the shoes are here, in all their newness and glory, and tell a radiant story of beauty, attractiveness and style. Included are:

2,750 pairs of $8.00 shoes
3,150 pairs of $9.00 shoes
4,400 pairs of $10.00 shoes
4,225 pairs of $11.00 shoes
3,300 pairs of $12.00 shoes

Never in our experience has so great a shoe stock in complete ranges of sizes and widths in only the most popular styles been offered under price, seldom at most stores at regular prices, and so we expect to be busier than ever before, but every arrangement has been made to wait upon the greatest throngs of shoppers rapidly. The fourteen styles are shown and described here. You can come tomorrow and call for the styles you want by the manufacturers' style numbers listed below.

No Mail or Telephone Orders Filled.

Great Closing Out Sale

$75,000 Stock of MAX SINGER Co. Purchased at a Big Sacrifice by

CHICAGO'S GREATEST CHAIN of FURNITURE STORES

EST. 1892

Stock Placed on Sale at All Stores To Accommodate Our Patrons

Our original intentions were to dispose of the entire $75,000.00 stock of Max Singer Co., as it stood in the Singer store at 2348-54 W. North Avenue, but, notwithstanding this fact, thousands called at our different stores and asked us to get the articles for them and save them the trip to Singer's. The bargains listed were so extraordinary that many asked the privilege of ordering direct from the advertisements without seeing the merchandise rather than risk losing out on the money-saving opportunities; therefore, in order that all may reap the benefits of this great sale and to make it doubly easy for you to share in these rare bargains, we have divided the stock among our eight stores where it is now on sale.

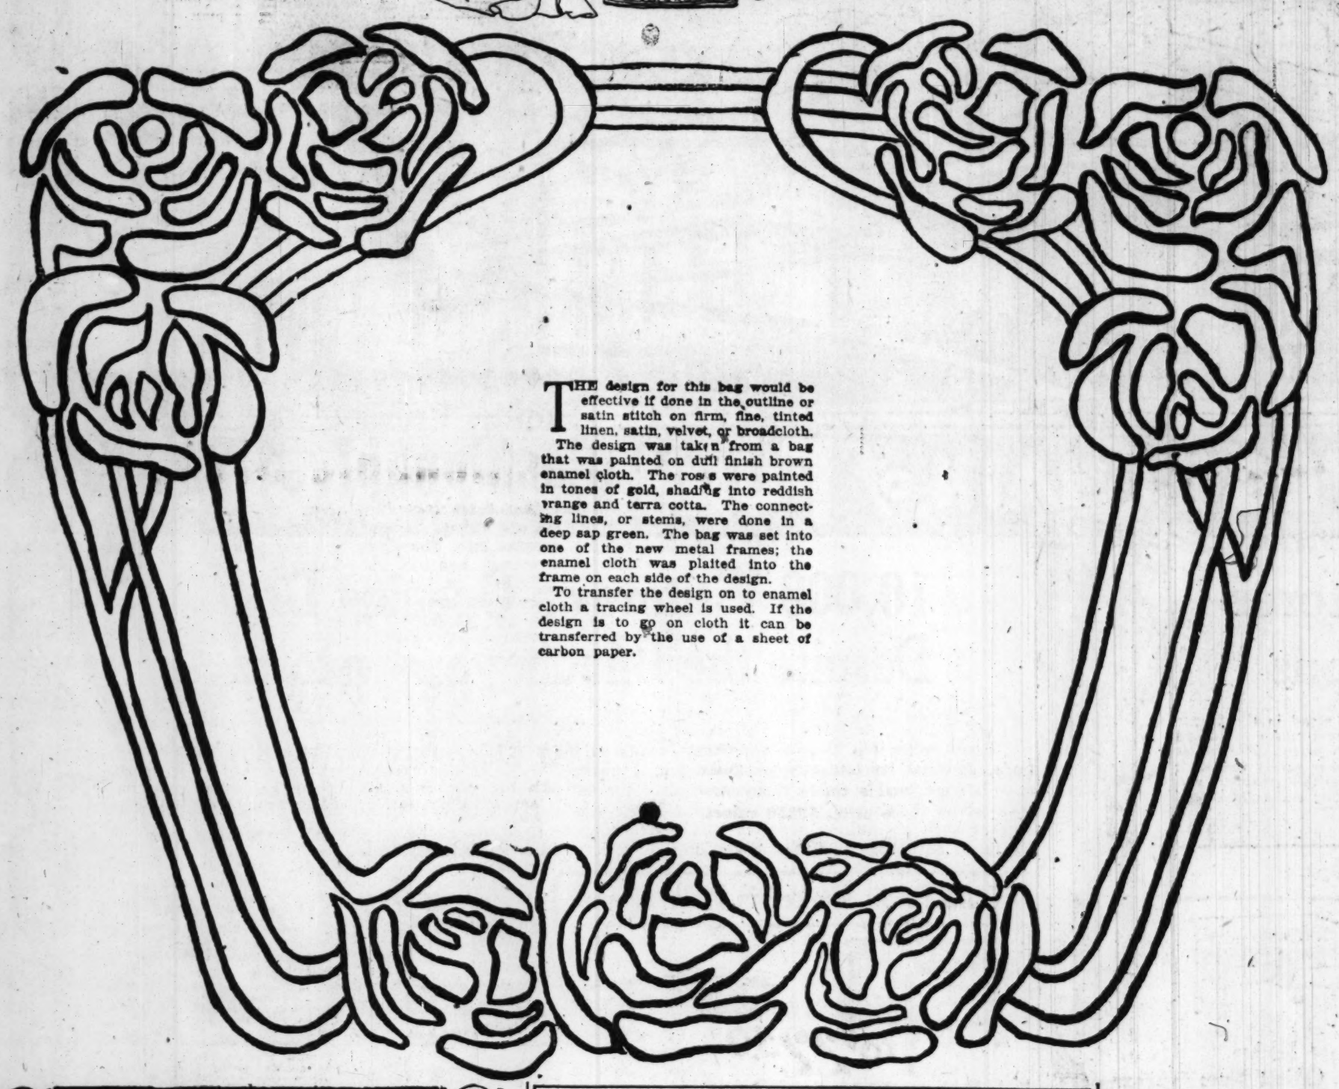
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



THE design for this bag would be effective if done in the outline or satin stitch on firm, fine, tinted linen, satin, velvet, or broadcloth.

The design was taken from a bag that was painted on dull finish brown enamel cloth. The roses were painted in tones of gold, shading into reddish orange and terra cotta. The connecting lines, or stems, were done in a deep sap green. The bag was set into one of the new metal frames; the enamel cloth was plaited into the frame on each side of the design.

To transfer the design on to enamel cloth a tracing wheel is used. If the design is to go on cloth it can be transferred by the use of a sheet of carbon paper.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

KEEP TONGUE UNDER CONTROL.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

IT is often a great temptation for a girl in business to "talk back" if criticized in any manner or spoken to in a sharp or commanding tone of voice. No matter how great the provocation, however, the wise girl knows that the only safe and sane course for her is to keep her tongue under control.

More lost positions may be charged to a failure to guard one's tongue, I believe, than to almost any other single cause. I heard a story not long ago about a girl who was constantly stirring up trouble in an office and whose quarreling proclivities finally forced her out of the job.

This girl was employed in a large office with a number of men and women. The employer and his manager occupied private offices on the same floor and both men were cut off from sight or sound of the people in the general office, except for an occasional interval when their work took them into the office for a few minutes. Constant complaints about the difficult disposition of this girl were made to the manager and to the proprietor, but with little or no effect. Her manner to them was ingratiating, and her eagerness to serve and please them was as pronounced as her antagonism to her working associates and her reluctance to help any of them.

Those of her fellow workers who spoke to her were sometimes greeted by silence, but when she chose to answer it was usually with impertinence. For a while any one who got into a controversy with her usually came out of it with a reprimand from the manager.

In spite of the fact that she was always one of the parties to an office quarrel, while the other was a different member of the force each time, she always placed the blame on one or two people in the office.

This situation lasted for nearly a ye Then she got into a serious disagreement with one of the men in the office. It was her first antagonistic experience with him. The proprietor was finally appealed to by the girl, who believed that he would champion her. He was inclined to take the girl's side without knowing all the circumstances, and as the matter had reached a climax it is probable that he would have discharged the young man, had not the other members of the office appealed to him through a letter signed by every one but the troublemaker.

The employer finally had to admit that the girl was interfering with the peace and efficiency of the office and dismissed her.

If a girl cannot learn to talk civilly to the people with whom she is associated in business she may as well give up all hope for a successful business career, as one of the most important assets toward success is the ability to work in harmony with every one with whom she comes in contact.

Too Wet to Dust.

We have a bright chap in one of our departments, who is sometimes so absorbed in his thoughts and work he becomes absent-minded about other things around him. Leaving for home one evening, he reached the entrance of the building and found it was raining. He went back upstairs to his office, picked up his umbrella (as he thought), again reached the entrance, and discovered he had the feather duster. F. G. C.

Showing Dexterity.

We were several yyoung women riding on a bob-sled with several men. We were having a good time and to show my dexterity I essayed to stand and ride without support, but just at that moment the driver started the horses smartly and I catapulted off with my head and shoulders buried in a deep snow bank and the stems of my being decidedly in evidence. The others were much more amused than I. V. H.

Handy for Hubby.

One Christmas a friend sent us a gift over which we spent many puzzled moments. It was a long, narrow wicker affair lined with zinc. Finally hubby tied it to the arm of his Morris chair and threw cigar ashes into it. One day the friend who had presented us with this gift ran in for a call on us. She seemed quite horrified on viewing our improvised ash receiver. "Why that's a flower basket to hang on the wall," she said. F. H. D.

Too Smart.

One day in school my teacher asked, "Who can give the tenses of ill?" Upon raising my hand she said, "All right, Adele." I replied, "Ill, dying, dead." The class immediately snickered, and it wasn't until I was on my way to the principal for being "too smart" that it dawned upon me just what I had said. A. I. C.

Telling It to the Judge.

My most embarrassing moment was when I took the stand to tell the judge I lacked judgment in selecting a gentleman for a husband. Therefore, the judge released me from the one I selected. B. M.

CAT SUPERSTITIONS

DORIS BLAKE

CATS have been the object of superstition from the earliest ages. In Egypt they were held in the highest reverence. Temples were erected in their honor, sacrifices and devotions were offered up to them, and it was the custom for a family in whose house a cat died to shave their eyebrows. In the middle ages they were regarded as the familiars of witches, and the black cat was the form taken by the devil whenever he pleased.

"A black cat in the morning of an accident gives warning." That's why some folk will run around a block rather than let one cross their path. Others would die rather than let a cat lick their faces, for that, superstition says, brings much trouble in the near future.

It's bad luck, too, they say, to cut a cat's whiskers.

If a cat of any color follows you it brings good luck.

To own a cat of three colors is lucky.

As weather prophets they have seemingly acquired quite a reputation for themselves. "True calendars the pussies are; they wash to tell what change is near," is an old Saxon rhyme. If a cat, lying down, turns its tail north or east, there will be a storm; if it turns its tail south or west, there will be clear weather.

If the cat's skin looks especially bright, fair weather tomorrow. If you see a cat marching around with its tail stiffly erected instead of hanging down as usual, a storm is approaching. Those cats having the most electricity in them will have their tails most erect.

"If a cat washes over the ear, storm is near; if a cat washes over the eye, storm will pass by."

If the ear washes its face at night, it will rain on the morrow.

If a cat's fur snaps with electricity, it is a sign of cold weather.

If a cat tears at the cushions and rugs with its claws, it is a sign of wind. Hence the expression, "The cat is raising the wind."

A Scottish belief is that when cats became lean in appearance, it was due to the witches riding them in the night.

A male cat of three colors, black, white, and yellow, is the luckiest cat possession.

Don't stop a cat's singing if you do not wish something interrupted that you are doing yourself.

A tortoiseshell cat coming to your house means money is coming.

A strange cat spitting at you means you have an enemy.

A cat that never purrs is as dangerous as a snake.

To find a cat asleep in a chair which you wish to occupy signifies good luck.

It is bad luck to take a cat out and try to lose it. Give it away instead.

To stroke a black cat's tail seven times brings good luck, especially at cards.

If your black cat has kittens in the garret, it is a good omen. If in the cellar, bad luck.

A black cat coming between two people presages a quarrel between them.

If a cat looks straight at you, says an old Irish superstition, when it is washing itself, you must make a wish to break the spell of bad luck.

If the cat sits and washes itself while the family eats it is a sign of company coming soon.

To be presented with an Angora cat brings scandal, vexations, disappointment, poverty, and other misfortunes.

Never transfer a cat from one house to another on a Friday.

If you see a pure white cat on a moonlight night it is a sign of marriage.

When a cat wags its tail it is a sign it is angry.

A cat sneezing indicates colds for the family.

If a cat scratches you it is a sign that some one will try to do you harm.

It is a sign of a party if a cat sits on the window sill outside and mews.

To stumble over a cat in a dark room is a sign you will soon dine at a wedding.

"Kiss the black cat and it will make you fat; kiss the white one, 'twill make you lean.'"

If a cat shows itself friendly to a stranger it is a good omen.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c.

GIRLS' WASHABLE FROCKS

For SPRING

Lively with Checks and Fresh with Finishing Touches of White

ALTHOUGH space limits this showing to two new models, the Girls' Dress Shop now displays an almost unlimited number of youthful frocks for Springtime.

162—Bands of checked gingham make a pretty contrast on this frock of chambray. The collar and cuffs of the white lawn detachable guimpe are piped with checked material. Hand embroidered cross-stitching forms squares around the buttons on the belt. Blue, pink or brown. Sizes 6 to 10 years. 5.95

164—Especially adapted to growing girls is this two-piece frock of checked gingham with collar and cuffs of white poplin and hand embroidery in block design trimming the front of the blouse and pockets. Pink, blue or brown checks. Sizes 12 to 16 years. 8.95

The HOME HARMONIOUS
By Anita de Campi

Anita De Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita De Campi, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for a personal reply.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

NOT every person wants to build a home of standard design. Many want the architect to plan a home that is out of the ordinary and entirely different from the other houses in the neighborhood; others have distinctive ideas of their own that they ask the designer to incorporate in the plans.

There is no denying that this sort of originality produces some exceptionally handsome homes, but many of them are what the architects call "freak" houses. But so long as the owners are satisfied and are willing to pay the price—for such houses cost more than the average—there is nothing to be said against homes of odd design.

The home pictured in the accompanying illustration is out of the ordinary, to say the least. In order to realize what an unusual house this is, the exterior view and the floor plans should be considered together. At first glance the home appears to be a rectangular story and a half house, but a study of the floor plans will disclose that it really is eight sided, the walls proper being irregular, but "squared" by the almost continuous porches.

In architectural style this plan follows somewhat the Japanese, as the roof extends over the porches. As Japanese rugs and other furnishings now are much in favor, a really artistic home both in exterior and interior balance would result from building from this plan and furnishing it with oriental materials.

But in construction this is far from the flimsy homes that we associate with the Japanese. This house is of concrete blocks, covered with stucco, and has a tile roof, making it as nearly fireproof as a home can be made and still be attractive and comfortable.

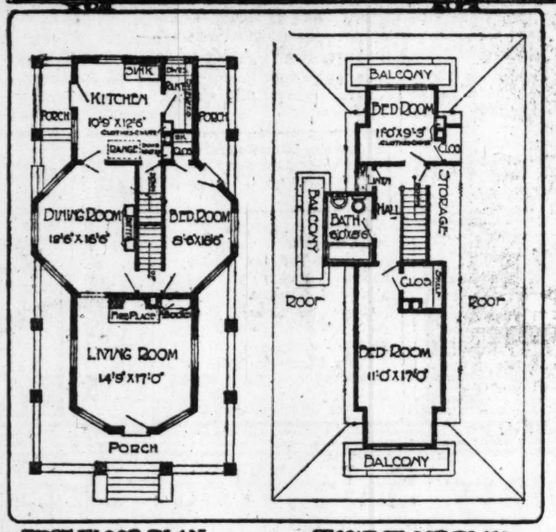
Speaking of concrete blocks, let it be said that as material for homes they will be exceptionally prominent during the next few years. Prices of other building materials have increased from 60 to 100 per cent during the last two years, and architects and builders now are looking with favor on concrete. They have long since passed the experimental stage in the manufacture of concrete blocks, and there are thousands of good buildings, such as the home shown, erected of them.

The size of this house is 26 feet 3 inches by 53 feet 6 inches. It contains six rooms and bath. The floor plan shows the dimensions of the rooms and their arrangement. The living room is 14 feet 9 inches by 17 feet, and is entirely surrounded by a porch. In the center of the first floor, side by side and separated by the stairway, are the dining room and a bedroom, both of good size and attractive for the reason that the outside walls face three ways and have a wide window in each wall, making them pleasant, light rooms. At the back is a large kitchen equipped with the modern kitchen conveniences.

There are two bedrooms and the bathroom on the second floor. The one at the front of the house is exceptional in its shape, being 11 feet wide and 17 feet long. The wide dormer window, with a small balcony, is an attractive feature of this room. The rear bedroom also has a balcony, as has the bathroom.

This is an exceptional home design and, as has been said, will appeal to the home builder who likes the unusual.

COURTESY AMERICAN BUILDER



FIRST FLOOR PLAN

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

D. M.: I would suggest, instead of clinging to the two woods you suggest, adding a third—brown wicker, for instance—to make the arrangement all the more informal. Finish the floors in the bedroom with walnut filler. A piece of old brocade on the piano would be nice. I would preserve the idea of the piano as a musical instrument and not use bric-a-brac on it. Use curtains you have. Curtaining three rooms alike gives a feeling of space. There are so many lovely ways to treat space above a fireplace. I know of bas-relief that makes a charming decoration lifted a little above the level of the shelf above the fireplace and flanked on either side by a plaque. A fine old clock and a glazed Italian pottery vase at each end makes a nice arrangement. Lovely crystal pieces are used, and the porcelain birds one sees in the shops now in old blues, peacock green, and other bright splashes of color give cheer and charm as decorations.

ETIQUETTE
By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, Chicago Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

LEAVING VISITING CARDS.

MANY recent inquiries as to visiting card etiquette have made me realize that a few remarks on that subject might not come amiss just now. There are first calls to be made on newcomers, party calls in return for dinners, luncheons, and receptions, and the other kinds that bob up to confuse even the most careful woman of today.

The former ruling in regard to cards was that a married woman left one of her cards and two of her husband's when calling upon another married woman; one of each when calling upon an unmarried woman or a widow.

Now, however, probably arising from the prevailing spirit of economy which the war created, there has come a new fashion which allows a woman to leave just one of her cards and one of her husband's, whether there be one hostess or several, and regardless of the fact that the one called upon may be married. Many women will cling to the old custom, but for those more up to the minute who do not fear being known as such, this more simple practice will doubtless prove practicable.

T. N. N.: In response to a toast, you need only smile and say, "Thank you so much!" The only people who prepare real speeches beforehand are those guests at banquets who are told that they will be called on to say a word or two.

Tell Things Around.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are girl sisters, and are writing to you for advice. I am 17, and Mickey is 16. We are in love with two boys, who are also brothers. There are two other boys that are very much in love with us, but as we do not love we will not accept dates and presents. These boys are very jealous of H—— and D——, so they tell things around that are untrue. These things are lowering our names. We appeal to you; what shall we do? BLUE EYES."

I'd cut the young men very properly, girls, before they could do any more damage to your good names. What despicable boys they must be!

She Dropped Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I like a certain boy in our school very well. He is at the age of 16. One time as I was enjoying myself skating in one of our public skating rinks in the city I saw him there smoking a cigaret. It do not approve of smoking at that age, especially in a public place. Since then I have not spoken to him. What shall I do, because I really like him? "PAT."

Now, Pat, that's not the way to improve matters any. You cannot be of any good influence by cutting the boy and perhaps giving him no explanation whatever, as to what you are cross about. With a little kindness you might be able to correct the smoking habit, but you will never work any reform in him by the tactics you adopt.

Agreed to Be Pals.

"Dear Miss Blake: Am a young man of 21. About five months ago I was introduced to a young lady two years my junior, whom I have taken out quite frequently since. Our company seemed to please one another, and we both agreed on being real pals. Lately, however, her attitude has become more than friendly, and she even tells me that she now loves me. Now, although I like this young lady's company very much, I do not love her. What ought I do? Your advice will be greatly appreciated. BEST INTENTION."

In that event I should gradually cease my attentions if I were you. It is only fair to do this early in the game with a young woman inclined temperamentally as your friend seems to be.

Don't Drop Her, Henry.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 19 years old and have been keeping steady company with a girl two years my junior. I have respected her and never have kissed her. Lately I found out she went with another fellow and that he kissed her. Should I drop her or ask for an explanation? Please advise me and print this, as I want her to read this. HENRY."

Henry, I think it would be only fair to give the girl a chance to deny the accusation! You would not want to be condemned on hearsay, would you? Maybe she was not a willing party to the kiss. He may have stolen it. At any rate, let her say how it was before you "out" her.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "The Tribune," Chicago.

Winnifred came in from the playhouse one day with the dirtiest face one could imagine. Her mother was shocked and exclaimed, "Why, Winnifred, your face is so dirty!"

"That doesn't matter," said the baby, calmly, "I 'cided not to go anywhere today." J.

Donald went to get a drink when Randall said, "Hand me a drink, Donald!" Mother said, "You mustn't order it like that, Randall, or Donald won't have to get it for you. Say, 'Please hand me a drink, Donald.'" So Randall said, "Please hand me a drink Donald, I'm ordering it!" M. H.

In looking over some old photographs we came upon one taken of Jean's mother when she was a girl. Jean quickly explained, "That was my mamma before she was my mamma!" B.

Cornelia and Benjamin often have childish disputes. One day their mother said: "Cornelia, I wish you would not tease Benjamin so, and quarrel with him so much." Cornelia answered: "But, mamma, we like it." E. S. F.

Curling Iron Kills Hair; New Method Improves It

Many a woman loses the silky, fluffy and brilliant appearance of her hair through habitual use of the hot curling iron. Certainly it can do the hair no good to dry up its natural oil, sear the life out of it, making it harsh, brittle and dull. And there's no excuse for continuing the use of that destructive instrument, now that we know what can be accomplished by applying plain liquid Silmerine.

The use of this harmless product really preserves the life, lustre and beauty of the hair, and the curly and wavy effect is perfectly natural looking and most captivating. If you've never tried it, by all means procure a few ounces from your druggist and use enough to moisten your hair from root to tip, putting it on with a clean tooth brush. The liquid Silmerine is neither gummy nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use.

The Purpose of Our Semi-Annual Discount Sale

To us it seemed unreasonable for the merchant, in any sort of business, to dictate or limit the selection that a customer may have to only such articles that the merchant wanted to dispose of through some selfish motive.

It does not give the customer the privilege of selecting at lower prices just the article needed.

With that in mind we decided to specially price every article in our entire display—without limit. No matter what Home-need is required you can now purchase it at a price less than regular.

Go to our store nearest your home—purchase your Home-needs—then after you have been perfectly satisfied our store manager will give you a discount—regardless of the amount or the articles you bought.

Mandel Brothers' Feb. silk sale

—the forty-fifth; introducing the silks of spring, 1920

February's premiere silk event will possess more than customary interest for fashionable Chicago, since the world's famed creators of modes this season are modeling their masterpieces from silk—and "society" is endorsing them as authoritative.

The silk aisles transformed into a radiant fashion bower

Many of the silks are fresh from foreign wrappings. You will turn their soft folds with delight, and marvel at their melting colors and distinctive designs. White Country Club silks are supreme for outdooring; silk duvetyn in high colors is preferred for wraps, capes, dolmans and suits; printed foulards, radium and pussy willow silks will be vogue for every day and all day; plain and printed georgettes for semi-dress occasions.

36-inch chiffon taffeta silk, 3.95
—obtainable here as nowhere else; plain and glace, and in light, medium and dark colors.

36-inch foulard silk, 2.95, 3.45
—in dots, figures and designs, up to the size of go-cart wheels. A bewitching harmony of colors.

36-inch all-silk wash satin, 2.95
—with a rich satin surface of a special construction that launders perfectly. Ivory and flesh.

40-inch all-silk crepe de chine, 2.95
—soft, pliable, and usable for outer or under garments; white, flesh, black and shades.

36-inch sun chene sport silk, 5.25
—in white only and in smart irregular weave; an "artificial" silk of style and service.

American and Japanese all-silk shirting at 2.45

1,000 yards of shirting, in new 1920 satin and printed stripes harmoniously blended on natural and white grounds. February special.

33-inch hand loom shantung, 1.25
—a silk for all the year round —a silk for every purpose. Natural color only. February sale.

36-in. dress satin, Feb. sale, 2.45
All-silk, brilliant dress satin in a varied selection of street shades, including navy.

32-inch printed radium silk, 2.25
New, original, striking patterns and colorings, in fabric of firm construction.

36-inch black dress satin, 3.95
Excellent quality, all-silk, rich black, soft and pliable, and extremely low priced.

40-inch black charmeuse, 3.85
—soft, luxurious, and all-silk recommended for fashionable gowns. Second floor.

500 yards black chiffon taffetas and suede satins; all-silk and excellent quality; February sale, 3.45.

Silk lingerie—the February sale

Trimly tailored or fluffily elaborate lingerie of silk, replete with charm for women who rightly appraise the importance of correct under appareling. Much of the lingerie was purchased months ago —hence these moderate quotations:

Silk envelope chemise, 3.95
Appealingly fashioned of crepe de chine, with shoulder straps. Illustrated.

Night dresses of silk, 6.95
These, as well, of crepe de chine—with lace and ribbon. Pictured.

Bloomers of fine satin at 5.95
—in very liberal width, and with double elastic at knee.

Silk bodices at 1.95—February sale
Satin bodices in flesh, light blue, maize and orchid; and crepe de chine bodices in flesh tint; many adorned with lace—others plain. Third floor.

February sale of silk petticoats

—late models adapted for wear with negligee or evening gown—with sports costume, afternoon frock or tailored skirt. Many were secured at striking concessions.

Satin petticoats, Feb. sale, 9.75
—in desired street shades; a straight line effect, with fringe. Pictured. Limited quantity.

Taffeta silk petticoats, 6.95
Desirably styled with plaited and corded flounce—as portrayed in the sketch.

Stylish stout jersey petticoats, 12.95
Petticoats in large sizes, fashioned along the same lines as those in regular sizes. All-jersey petticoats with fashionable flounces —an excellent variety—at 12.95. Third floor.

Dress goods: spring weaves

—the prices notably attractive

Selected from a widely varied stock of springtime "novelties" and "staples," these three features merit Chicago's prodigal purchasing:

New cashmere epingles at 3.85 yd.
—medium weight fabrics woven from the very finest quality cashmere yarns—a grade that will be found in the most costly garments. All wanted colors and black.

54-inch French serges at 4.95 yd.
Splendid quality, closely woven, nicely finished materials in the correct weight for spring suits or dresses. Newest colors and black. 4.95 is much below regular.

Fine quality tricotines at 5.85 yd.
Tricotines continue in high favor—and this is a superior grade at the actual wholesale price of the fabric today. A broad collection of colors and black. Second floor.

Delectable new negligees of silk

—the epitome of dainty individuality—figure in a February sale of principal import to women of cultivated taste. Our early ordering has made possible extremely low pricing:

Silk negligees at 12.75
Dainty boudoir garments of crepe de chine; in empire model with coatee effect and ball trimming, or finished with collar and trimmed with tiny ribbon rosettes; both styles illustrated. A splendid selection of colorings.

Boudoir caps, 1.95
—of lace and ribbon, in light blue, orchid or pink.

Boudoir slippers
—made of satin, with heels, and ribbon flowers; $4.

February in the Nikko shop brings from Japan unique apparel for the boudoir—in which artistic fashions of the Japanese, lavish with rich embroideries, have been adapted by artists to the requirements of American women. Third floor.

Advance apparel that foretells silk's vogue for springtime

There is undeniable charm in the newer frocks of taffeta, of soft satins like kitten's ear crepe or peau de soie or of soirie glace or crepe georgette.

The trend appears to be toward plain, snug-fitting bodices, elbow or three-quarter sleeves, and slender, straight line silhouette—although this is offset, in a measure, by many softly draped and bouffant effects, ornate with embroidery of oriental inspiration, or fine-thread laces.

Frocks of kitten ear crepe, $65
The charmingly simple, snug-fitting bodice and the favored short sleeves and graceful harem skirt, are dominant features in the ultra smart model pictured on the left.

New frocks of crisp taffeta, 39.50
The smartly draped model pictured in the center, with fitted bodice, and the graceful line of the new silhouette, is featured in our popularly priced frock section.

Misses' silk taffeta frocks, $55
The "youthful" style sketched on the right, with bouffant hips, and in navy, brown or black.

Separate skirts of silk, to be vogue —particularly skirts fashioned of fantasi, crepe milano, tricolette, georgette or baronette satin, in a wealth of fascinating colors; at 19.75 to $45. Fourth floor.

Calais laces, 28c, 65c

Beautiful edgings and insertions in various widths; fashionable for trimming lingerie, etc. First floor.

Lace remnants, 75c, 95c, 1.45 and 1.95 yd.; short lengths, odd pieces and discontinued patterns; novelty lace, metal laces, black laces, venise laces, etc.; half price.

Men's linen h'dk'fs., 35c

Full sized handkerchiefs with ¼-in. hemsitched hem. No more at 35c when these are gone. First floor.

Women's novelty h'dkerchiefs, colors guaranteed, 35c.

Fleur de France corsets of silk flowered brocade—at 7.50

Uncommon value in corsets with rather low bust, and long skirt with elastic insert over the thighs. Sizes 22 to 30. Fifth floor.

LaVida corsets de luxe reduced
Corsets of imported silk brocade or broche, in white or flesh tint; model for average figure—sizes 23 to 30; originally $25 to $35; reduced to $18.

Mousquetaire cape gloves

—pique sewn, 8-button length, with fancy emb'd back; in golden brown or African brown; 4.95.

Women's strap wrist capeskin gloves, in beaver, brown or gray, 4.95.

One-clasp capeskin gloves in gray, tan or brown, are priced 2.85. First floor.

Parisian blouses of silk—February sale

Captivating styles of both French and American origination; "elegantes" for afternoon and evening—"tailleurs" for street, business and outing; many ideally suited for southern wear. Prices, 5.75 to $85.

Georgette crepe blouses at 9.75
Blouses with quaint frills, bib collar or high neck; white, flesh and Deauville shades. Two pictured.

Cossak blouses of georgette at $15
Jaunty "slipovers" with deep tucks and flowing castle sleeves. White, flesh and Deauville shades.

Silk pongee blouses at 5.75
Slipover styles with sailor collar and black ribbon cravat; or tailleur model with box plaited front. Third floor.

A seasonable blanket sale

Plaid wool mixed blankets, 7.45 pr.
—in good winter weight, and made with a good deal of wool. Size 66x80 inches. Eighth floor.

Block plaid blankets, 9.35 pair —woven from clean, fine wool and cotton yarn, so finished that the cotton is hardly noticeable. Size 68x80.

White wool mixed blankets, 12.60 pair
—finished with soft, fine nap, which gives greater warmth than the regular nap. Pink and blue borders. Size 68x80.

Figured silkoline comforters, 7.85
Finished with a plain mull border. Size 72x84.

10-yd. piece nainsook, 3.75.

—woven from Sea Island cotton, and in the soft finish desired for undergarments and children's frocks.

38-in. imported colored organdies, 85c
A delightfully crisp, sheer fabric in a fascinating assortment of the new season's desired colors. Second floor.

Tapestry table scarfs, 2.95
Table scarfs of closely woven tapestry in softly blended colorings, trimmed with antique gold braid; size 16x48 inches. Monday only at 2.95—a third below regular. Third floor.

Women's novelty silk hose, 1.65
—drop stitch, two-tone hose, in black and white, navy and green, or black and red; semi-fashioned.

Women's heavy weight pure silk hose in black only; $2. Women's pure silk hose in broken sizes, 1.50. First floor.

Nursery furniture—February sale

Furniture that ministers to baby's comfort and health—furniture that conserves mother's energy and strength—is decidedly "special" during February.

White enameled wicker bassinet, 13.50
Mounted on wooden wheels with rubber tires and fitted with rods for trimming hood. Style pictured.

Infants' dressing table, with canvas top, two large pockets for toilet articles, and towel bar; 4.95.

Infants' white enameled costumer, with six pegs, 1.95. Infants' white enameled toilet chair, with tray, at 3.95.

Small children's dresses at 2.95
Voile, lawn, organdy or dotted swiss dresses, adorned with hand stitching; others with colored collar, cuffs and sash. Sizes 2 to 6 years. Two styles pictured.

Small children's nainsook petticoats, lace trimmed, $1

Infants' hand tucked, hand stitched slips, 1.95. Hemstitched pillow cases, 58c. Crib blankets, pink or blue, $1.
Down pillows of pink, white or blue sateen; 1.25. Third floor.

Thousands of pairs women's shoes are very substantially lowered in price

in order to acquaint a still larger public with the unexcelled fashion and value resources of our greater shoe shop, on the fifth floor.

Group A—2,349 prs. at 8.50
Brown kid, tan calf, gray or black kidskin lace shoes, with louis, Cuban or military heels; walking or dress soles.

Group B—1,321 prs. at 9.50
Brown or black kidskin, leather louis heels; maple kidskin, military heels; all-brown with junior French heels. Fifth floor.

Uncle Sam Mighty Curious When You Want to Get Away

By Mme. X.

HAVANA.—[Special Correspondence.]—A few observations on the requirements and difficulties of foreign travel may interest those Americans who are contemplating such an undertaking, and, perhaps, reconcile to their lot others whom harsh fate keeps at home.

If the United States is a hard country for foreigners to enter it is even a harder one for natives to leave. You have to have a passport from Uncle Sam and to obtain that passport you have to answer an infinite number of questions on all subjects.

One of seemingly supreme importance is as to your age. You have no idea how many different kinds of people ask you how old you are. First there's a man on the fifth floor of the federal building in Adams street; then there's a man in the revenue department who asks you. The consuls representing every country in both hemispheres want to know this bit of strictly private family history. There's a government official at the port of debarkation who insists on this piece of information before he gives you your permit to go on board your ship. Even the restful peace of life on the steamer was broken for us by repeated requests from the ship's purser, via the room steward, that we come to his cabin immediately. When finally we reported it was to find that all he wanted to know was when we were born.

Taxes Must Be Paid.

It is easier to remember the year of your birth—the official year—than the number of intervening decades. Leave that to the inquisitive inquirers. What is the odds to the U. S. A.? Is it an attempt to allow only those of useless age or undeveloped youth to deposit and to conserve the nation's vigor within the nation's boundaries?

Another obstacle placed in the path of all, save stowaways, is the requirement that the would-be wanderer must present receipts for income taxes paid in 1917 and 1918, and guaranties for the prompt payment of 1919 taxes.

It is lucky for those whose travels lead them to Cuba that these guaranties are provided by trusting folk or concerns who know nothing of the possibilities of Havana hotel bills. Few income taxes are as formidable as the daily charge for accommodation in a hostelry in Cuba's capital. The writer gives this warning to all Americans to whom "Cuba libra" looks alluring: Stay away unless your money has burned its way through your pockets to your very epidermis!

Beyond the Three Mile Limit.

The trip across the Gulf of Mexico from New Orleans to Havana reveals certain national traits among our U. S. citizenry that make one wonder whether we Americans are not the youngest, callowest people on the face of the earth. The passengers on the ship were an average lot of cheerful, prosperous, friendly folk from southern and western states. They seemed decent and self-respecting. From noon until evening, after leaving New Orleans, the steamer slipped quietly and quickly through the thick brown flood of the Mississippi, striking the waters of the gulf about 9 or 9:30. The passengers sat about in groups or strolled in couples, making easy acquaintances. So tight was the bar closed that not even a bottle of mineral water could be got from the dining room steward.

As the three mile limit was reached the women all departed swiftly for their cabins, while most of the men got quickly and completely drunk. It was a squalid orgy which lasted quite late into the night. One could hear the colored stewards refusing to help the white men any more to their cabins; wives calling to husbands; songs, jests, hiccoughs.

Next day the air was full of floating phrases: "My, but my head aches!" "Gee, I feel bum this morning!" "No, mamma," said one fat youth, "it isn't the candy makes me sick; I got drunk last night."

And we claim to be the finest, most civilized people on the globe today!

No Sugar Shortage There.

The sugar situation is one that claims the attention of every American. From Cuba, the greatest sugar growing country in the world, one gets another angle on the question—several angles, in fact. One thing seems certain, unless our government takes some action the price of sugar will not come down; it will go up to any height the American sugar refiners choose to push it.

Cuban warehouses are bursting with sugar. Our government bought the entire 1917 sugar crop for 4¾ cents a pound; that of 1918 for 5½ cents. It could have bought the 1919 for 7 cents a pound, but declined to. Now this sugar is selling in the open market at 12 cents, and will probably go much higher.

The American sugar refiners already are said to own 60 per cent of the Cuban sugar plantations, and are seeking to get a strangle hold on more, their intention being to build a powerful monopoly which will enable them to limit the output, and boost the price to any extent which seems to them desirable. A pleasant prospect to a sugar loving nation!

Our per capita consumption has, for many years, exceeded that of any other people. In the dry times at hand this is bound to rise still higher. Should sugar barons press too hard on a people denied liquor any kind of explosion may result.

Pockets Full of Money.

The rising price of raw sugar is filling Cuban pockets so full of money that students of affairs here are troubled for the effect on Cuban character. These people are incorrigible gamblers. It is their one besetting passion. They drink [illegible] quiet enough for a tobacco producing country—smoke less; but they bet furiously over everything—at the races, at the various sport, cock fighting, at their great national game, jai-alai [pronounced hyerly], a most exciting game, by the way.

Everywhere you see men—shabby men as well as well dressed ones—flourishing fistfuls of the filthiest money ever used as a medium of exchange. Cuba makes no paper money; it uses American greenbacks and gold and silver certificates, which acquare here a greasy consistency and foul quality impossible to describe. Design and texture vanish in the overlay of thick, oily dirt. Hundred dollar bills seem to be as common here as ten dollar bills with us, and a quite poor looking man will pull one out nonchalantly and thrust it, with an inarticulate shout, at the bookmakers on the race course.

As for men, there seem to be millions of them here. They swarm the streets, cafes, and parks night and day. Women are seldom seen, unless one catches glimpses of them peering through the ornate iron grills, which protect every Havana house, however humble.

Keeps Many Pets.

Among Havana women, however, there is one striking personality. She is an extremely rich and great lady, who lives in a large and handsome place on the outskirts of the city. Were she living in America or England she would undoubtedly be a strong suffragist, an ardent advocate for reforms of every kind. As it is, she devotes her excess vitality and intelligence to the harboring and cherishing of monkeys. On her really beautiful estate she has over forty of them at large and in cages. She has bred the only chimpanzee ever successfully born in captivity. When we told her of Cy De Vry's accomplished young lady chimpanzee, who takes tea, smokes, and plays cards, her dark, handsome Cuban eyes glowed as must the orbs of Balboa when first he gazed upon the Pacific. I think she may attempt to buy or borrow our Lincoln park pet.

Three amiable chimpanzees live pretty much at large in her Cuban castle. They sleep in the room next to hers and have their own bathroom opening off their bedchamber. They greet her guests with an eager friendliness that almost disarms incipient fear. Their hands are soft and cool and damp and lingering in their clasp—also, a little hairy. They look at one wistfully, humbly, as if they would so like to escape from their speechless, inferior state and be with us and of us.

They walked, for the most part, erect, with a stooping, shambling gait, a quick, awkward shuffle, and were escorted by an undersized, over hairy Cuban, who seemed—well, just a little bit nearer akin to them than most of us. At any rate, the quartet walked off in the twilight with the Sierra Leone Chimpanzee's arm around his human companion's neck in intimate, confiding fashion, which, for some reason, was pathetic and not in the least ridiculous.

Charming Zoological Garden.

The senora says that her monkeys (like all other Cubans, only she didn't put it that way) are especially fond of Americans. They differed from real Cubans in that they didn't seem to want our money.

Other animals are also to be found in the bosky and tropical depths of this unique and interesting estate. Black bears, rabbits, guinea pigs, and birds of various kinds—all caged and apparently extremely well cared for. It is really a perfectly charming private zoological garden, set in a wonderful grove of palms, tree ferns, baobabs, bamboos, ilex, and other tropical trees, with a blaze of tropical flowers lighting the otherwise somber scene. A straight avenue over a mile long, bordered by close set, soaring giant palms, leads up to the massive wrought iron gates which at night shut in the senora and her pets.

To the picturesque little private chapel which nestles under the trees near the big castellated mansion a priest comes every Sunday and celebrates mass for her and her friends. The whole establishment has a patriarchal air that makes one feel as if he had met one of the old bearded prophets dressed in the rich and gaudy robes of an equatorial potentate. Its mistress exercises a hospitality as sincere and generous as any born in our early pioneer days, when the tradition was to leave the latch string hanging out and the demijohn on the hearth.

Even here, however, the domestic situation is, as with us, in a disturbed and acute condition. The senora shrugged her shoulders and said: "We know not when they stay or go. We only know we may not find fault. Perhaps they are a little kinder than yours, but they have not the brains—they have no brains at all."

One of the chief things one learns in travel is the similarity of peoples and conditions in dissimilar places.

Girls' City Club Planning to Have Series of Talks

An interesting series of talks has been arranged by the committee of the Girls' City club. On Tuesday evening at the mother club Miss Jane Addams will give a talk. On February 17 Dr. Rachel Yarros will continue a course of lectures on social hygiene. At dates to be announced later there will be addresses by representatives of the Juvenile court and the Court of Domestic Relations. Within a few months the members of the club hope to produce a play at one of the downtown theaters.

These are only the things one hears casually about in connection with the Girls' City club. Of its works and accomplishments there are human interest stories to fill a book, though the organization is still in its swaddling clothes.

Only last April five young girls of the northwest side met, and with the aid of friendly advisers laid the foundation of the most unique and what they declare will become the greatest girls' club in the United States, if not in the world.

Having for their inspiration the founding and successful carrying through of the Boys' Brotherhood Republic, these inspired young girls sought the advice of the prominent clubwomen of the city and named their organization for one of the clubs whose works and aims seemed nearest to what they intend some day to accomplish, the Woman's City club. Through the sympathy and actual help of Miss Laughlin of the Chicago Woman's club and Miss Carpenter of the War Camp Community service, resolutions were drawn up and principles impressed upon the minds of the members.

The aim of the club is to help girls who are in need of it through conditions over which they have no control; to analyze these conditions, and to take steps for their betterment. The club means to prove that in spite of all the criticisms of the girl of today, her dress and her conduct, there still exists the true type of real womanhood; that through sisterly interest and material help many otherwise "hopeless cases" will be directed into paths of usefulness and good citizenship.

Numbers of individual cases have been handled by the members of the club, none of which has been made public even to the club members. Help is given, confidence encouraged, and investigations made. In every instance the name of the girl who is being helped is withheld, and when she joins the club she has an equal chance with the others to hold an office and become a useful member.

The girls, all of whom are breadwinners, often lose time and consequently part of their salaries in following up a case and fulfilling their duties. They count this a gain in that it is helping them to realize a great and worthy ambition—to make their organization the best of its kind in America.

With their boundless enthusiasm, their high ideals and the interest of their advisers, they are bound to succeed. Their slogan that the Girls' City club is not complete until every girl in Chicago has joined will go far toward the final success of their efforts.

Miss Alta Sinelick of 2510 Potomac avenue is president and founder of the organization. The mother club and the branch club meet on Tuesday evenings, the former at 1243 North Wood street, the latter at the Douglas Park auditorium, Ogden and Kedzie avenues.

Any information will gladly be furnished upon application to the officers.

LUDEN'S GIVE QUICK RELIEF FOR COLD IN HEAD

Ideal Wrinkle Remover Easily Made at Home

If weather, worry or poor health has marred your face with wrinkles or furrows, here's good news for you. Every line, even the deepest, can be quickly removed by using a simple and harmless face lotion prepared by dissolving one ounce of pure powdered Saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This is not only a valuable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also. The firmer, smoother skin, the more youthful appearance, even after the very first application, will astonish and delight you.

If you will obtain some witch hazel and Saxolite from your druggist and make your own wrinkle remover as directed, you will find this far more effective than massage creams, pastes and other made preparations.

INFLUENZA

A Precaution That May Prove Valuable

Influenza often leads to deadly pneumonia. This is the real danger point of the disease. Pneumonia means congestion and inflammation of the lungs. Take this precaution. Get a box of Begy's Mustarine today and at the first sign of trouble—influenza often begins with a cold—apply it liberally over the throat, chest and back, then call a doctor.

Begy's Mustarine will completely relieve the congestion and inflammation quicker than anything else you can use. It's ten times better than the old-fashioned mustard plaster that doctors used so much last year because—while it is just as strong—it cannot blister.

Down East during the last year's epidemic there wasn't a box of Mustarine to be had. Dealers were entirely sold out. Make sure of your box today and be ready for the emergency if it comes to your home. Be sure it's Begy's, the original mustard plaster improvement. 30 and 60 cents. S. C. Wells & Co., Le Roy, N. Y.

TURPO Helps in Flu Prevention

One of the successful preventives used during the epidemic last year was Turpo, which is a combination of the old-time remedies of turpentine, menthol and camphor, in ointment form. Many physicians use and recommend Turpo.

Snuff a little Turpo up the nostrils several times a day as a preventive.

External applications will help relieve the congestion which is caused by influenza. Rub Turpo into the chest, throat, under the arms and between the shoulders. This stimulates the skin, attracting the blood to the surface and thus aids in reducing the congestion within. Buy a jar of Turpo of your druggist while he has a supply on hand.

PROGRESS IN THE CONVENTION.

The constitutional convention has organized and is ready for its work. We believe that an intent to get the best results from the delegates governed the distribution of subjects to committees. We believe that the convention's purpose is to prepare a constitution which will serve the needs of the state and be acceptable to the state.

Unless it is acceptable to the voters the labor of the convention is thrown away. The constitution cannot be opposition proof, but no fair and unprejudiced opposition can be organized and pressed now. The convention has not indicated a policy or framed a plan against which a justified criticism can be directed.

Criticism which precedes decision and action reveals an opposition designed in advance to oppose what is submitted. That fact will be kept in mind by fair minded citizens, who hope that the state will be able to operate better under a new constitution, and who hope for that reason that the state succeeds in getting one.

The check against the work of the convention is complete. What the delegates decide upon must meet the approval of the people. The people have delegated the power to submit a constitution, but not the power to make it the organic law of the state. The people have reserved the right to accept or reject. They cannot amend, but they cannot be delivered.

Any opposition which starts before the convention has begun its work is designed either to advance particular projects regardless of the will of the convention, or to defeat any document which the convention may produce.

The people of Illinois elected these delegates. They have done nothing to forfeit the confidence of the people who elected them. They are the chosen representatives for a work which must be submitted to the people before it can become effective. The opposition now developing is self-instituted and prematurely critical.

We suspect that many citizens have not aroused themselves to much interest in the convention and the constitution which it will submit, but we are sure that where interest has been aroused, and where it is intelligent interest, there is a hope that the state may be a more compact and effective state after a new constitution has been adopted.

In Chicago we believe that intelligent and interested citizens hope that Chicago will be joined closer to the rest of the state rather than made alien to it. Metropolitan life contains factors, necessarily arising from the close contact and varied activities of citizens, which are needed as a stimulus. Portions of the state not so compactly built up offer qualities which are needed to stabilize city ideas.

A more sympathetic connection between city and country will be beneficial to the state at large, and there is hope that causes of friction will be removed by the work of men from the city and down state in the constitutional convention.

AN INVITATION TO THE BRITISH.

Thomas Hope Floyd of Oxford, who wrote to the London Saturday Review suggesting that the United States join the British empire, becoming in the federation a self-governing dominion with a local president, has not given enough attention to the American constitution.

It was designed for the organization of a government which had established itself independently of the British crown and it does not permit our return to the crown. "What is the constitution between friends?" We know that question is asked sometimes, but it nearly always is in a spirit of levity. In a few respects the constitution has one meaning south and another north of the Ohio river, but, generally speaking, it is respected and holds good.

It will be impossible, we fear, for the United States to attach itself to the British empire, but the British empire can be admitted to statehood in the United States. We believe American opinion would favor granting, at first, a territorial government to Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Newfoundland, etc., and a colonial government to India, Egypt, and the various dependencies of the British empire.

Upon application to congress, later, any of the self-governing dominions would be admitted to statehood. We could give India, Egypt, etc., a colonial administration such as the Philippines have and treat the various insular possessions of the empire as we do Cuba or Porto Rico.

A union of the English speaking people, although impossible in the fashion proposed by Mr. Floyd, is possible, and may be advisable, in the manner suggested by us.

England, even without Scotland or Wales, would be the largest state in the union. It would be Democratic, we imagine, being so largely urban and industrial. The Bryan of England would enter the convention with the largest block of votes. The English boss' name probably would be Sullivan or Murphy, but whatever it was he would have to be seen before anything could be done.

This would settle the Irish question. Ireland not only would be a state in a system of free government perfectly adapted to Irish political genius, but the Irish naturally would rule England, their genius being given the play of real opportunity.

Sullivan of Illinois, Murphy of New York, O'Brien of England, and Finnerty of Ireland would be the big four in Democratic conventions and cut up the postoffices. The influence of England in congress would be as great as in convention, and we think we may promise the English very liberal consideration in the rivers and harbors bills and in public buildings.

We cannot accept the king and the British nobility in any other fashion than socially, but we think we are safe in guaranteeing an uninterrupted social success. To American society it will not matter whether King George and the Prince of Wales are, were, or had been. They will be received at Newport and points south and west with the greatest loyalty.

The English say that the king, in their democracy, functions only socially and as the tangible evidence of the continuity of British tradition, the token of national life, the palpable essence of what Britain has been, is, and will be.

Socially, we say, the king may remain unimpaired, but it is a condition of this proposed admission of the British states that the king be given up as a palpable token of the national imponderables. For that we have the flag. Mr. Floyd in his letter says that probably Americans crave something which will tower above the transitoriness of presidents in appeal to the imagination. In many cases transitoriness is a characteristic of American government greatly to be desired and devoutly stimulated.

If the English will give up the king, except for social purposes, we'll give up the eighteenth amendment. As a free people they might not like it, but we are not obstinate. We are willing to compromise. We'll give it up. Does the chair hear any objections? The chair hears none. It is so ordered.

There is a handsome proposition. Here is a mighty nation with the peace of the world in its hand. There could be no wars. There would be no one to fight. The league of nations would not be needed. The United States would rule the world.

MOTORING: THE FARM-CITY UNIT.

If the automobile does nothing else for its purchaser it at least makes him think of good roads. The prosperity of the nation depends upon good roads. Therefore the automobile carries its own conviction. It is bought to eliminate distance. Distance is best eliminated by efficient communication. Motor communication reaches the height of its efficiency when accorded the privilege of dispensing with friction.

A bad road is friction plus. It prevents speed. It wears out tires and breaks machinery. The bad road is reflected immediately in repair bills. It also is reflected in inefficient distribution.

A farm ten miles from town can be moved within five miles of town by a good road and a motor. Ten miles from town once meant a whole day's travel, embracing, as it did, the time needed to transact business. A farmer often lost a day from his farm work because he had to stop and drive to town for an insignificant repair. Now a farmer may drive ten miles in a motor, do his errand, and be back at his work in an hour. Thus is the city made elastic. It is drawn to the farmer's door. The farms no longer are remote. They have become the suburbs.

Good roads break down and scatter the city walls. Eggs and milk cease to be mysterious factors trickling into city homes through devious channels. They can be distributed within a few hours after they are produced.

Schools and churches and community establishments directly benefit from good roads. Rural free delivery service becomes efficient in fact. Transportation of building materials results in better homes, increased realty values and multiplied social advantages. Weather becomes a matter of indifference to the farmer who has a motor and a good road.

Here is a practical application of the good road idea, taken from the Mississippi Valley Magazine:

"It takes a farmer from Fenton driving a team over the present roads four and one-half hours to reach Union market, St. Louis. Over good roads he could reach it in three and one-half hours. Estimating his time at 20 cents an hour he would save on a round trip two hours, valued at 40 cents.

"In one week of six days he would save $2.40. If he made the trip 300 days he would save $120. In addition he would save on his team, which it is estimated over a good road would last ten years and over a bad road would last seven years, each year $10. His wagon and harness over a good road would last seven or eight years; over a bad road four or five years; showing a loss of $5 a year. The net saving would be $135 a year over a good road."

We have every reason for good roads. What we lack is the roads. We have cities and towns depending absolutely upon the country. We have the country isolated from the cities and towns. The bond of interest between them cannot be overestimated. We have the mechanical devices for making swift communication. We lack the routes of travel.

With the automobile and the good road the distinction between the city and farm disappears. The farmer becomes a resident of the suburbs. His interests become bound up with the interests of the city. Motor transportation distributes the farmer's products in the city and distributes the city's products in the country. The immediate liaison between city and country is the trunk line road. Each city and town in Illinois should have its radiating trunk lines. With good roads we shall see the city and country moving together.

Editorial of the Day

FIVE PERFECT GIRLS.

[From the Ohio State Journal.]

Five of the 1,200 co-eds at Ohio State university are physically perfect, sound as a dollar in wind, limb, and every organ. It seems like a small percentage—five in 1,200. But we presume the examinations were very strict and a minor, merely technical, defect barred a girl from the honor list. Considering the co-ed as she appears to the public, we are inclined to regard five physically perfect ones in 1,200 as not so bad after all. She bares her delicate chest to the boreal blasts, she wears almost nothing tangible from knee to ankle, she is heavily boned, as the corset advertisements phrase it, at the waist line, she throws herself out of plumb with her high heels to the displacement, we should think, of everything within her abdominal cavity, and she seems always ready and eager for chocolate luxurro and cream stack pie. Perhaps the perfect five eschew all these frivolities, but we doubt it, for we suppose they are normal in their girlish mental processes. We presume, rather, that they owe their physical perfection to dear Old Mother Nature's extraordinary powers of resistance, exerted for some inscrutable reason with special determination and vigor in these five cases. Mother Nature is good to us and we have faith that she never will let the girls die off and leave us alone in a sad and dreary world, no matter what they do to themselves.

MAGIC.

Earth has her seasons four, but man has five,
The four of earth and one that holds them all—
The mind's accumulations that recall
The season gone and make it seem alive,
If so he choose. For him the roses thrive
That long have slept within a sodden pall;
For him, at will, the ripened apples fall,
And golden honey drips from out the hive.
Most wondrous is it in the summer's heat
To press the snow of fancy to the brow,
To sail in thought around the Hebrides;
Or when from out a darkened sky the sleet
Doth sting the face, how sweet to see a bough
Whose blossoms flutter in a gentle breeze.

HINT TO CAR OWNERS.

Sir: In arranging for the thanksgiving services to be held on Sunday, Feb. 29, in gratitude for the escape of Mr. William Hohenzollern from an ignominious demise, one detail seems to have been overlooked. It has been suggested that owners of automobiles be requested to provide transportation for blind soldiers who may wish to attend. Veterans who have suffered the loss of not more than one leg will doubtless be glad to walk. E. C. W.

THIS IS NEW TO US.

[From the Volga Tribune.]

Prof. Carl Christensen, dean of music at State college, tells this one on himself. One day he received through the mail a letter from a young fellow who lives west of the Missouri, asking what he could use on the valves of his cornet that he recently purchased from Montgomery Ward & Co., to make them work without sticking. The professor immediately wrote back to the youth and told him that the best and only article to use on cornet valves is saliva. A few days later Mr. Christensen received a second letter from the would-be cornetist enclosing a quarter, and stating that he had looked all through the catalogue and was unable to find any saliva listed, and wished that the professor would send him a quarter's worth.

WAR AND BIRTH RATE.

THE figures which will give an idea as to the effect of the war on population are beginning to come in. The reports of the census office for 1917 on the mortality and on births are available and within a month the reports of the surgeons general of the army and navy for 1918 should be received. This data should make it possible to form some idea of the effect of the war on population.

By the end of 1917 several million men had been withdrawn from civil life for the formation of an army and many thousands had reached Europe. Most of the trouble was with measles and meningitis and the pneumonia following had been experienced.

The only serious disaster of wartimes not reckoned with was the influenza epidemic of 1918. During 1917 the birth rate in the birth registration area fell .3 per 1,000 as compared with 1916. The death rate rose .2 per 1,000 as compared with 1916 in the death registration area. Had the same rate of decline prevailed in a population of 100,000,000 this figure would have meant a decline of 50,000 in the prospective population based on the figures of 1916.

Since our population increases by about a million a year by reason of excess of births over deaths, the potential loss of 50,000 is not considerable. It can be predicted that 1918 did not make so good a showing. The birth rate probably was lower than that of 1917 and the death rate was much higher. There was some gain in population, but it was not great.

As there has been no immigration for several years the overcrowding of the cities is due to migration from the country to the city rather than to increase of population. The area in which the death returns were at least 90 per cent accurate in 1917 embraced all of the states, except Oregon, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, and West Virginia. The registration area embraced all of the northern states east of the Mississippi river, except Illinois, all of the southern states east of that stream except Delaware, West Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and Mississippi; all of the Pacific slope, except Oregon and a few of the states between the river and the coast. In addition forty-three cities located in nonregistration states are accepted in the area because their death returns are more than 90 per cent registered. Since 1917 some states have been added to the area.

In the registration area there were 1,066,711 deaths of civilians and 2,221 deaths of soldiers. Presuming that the same death rate prevailed throughout the entire country, the number of deaths was 1,470,417. Since, however, five of the states not in the area probably have death rates lower than the average, four have rates about the average, and nine above the average, the number of deaths probably is in excess of 1,500,000. The number of births in the birth registration area was 1,353,792. Since the birth registration area is much smaller, covering only the states in which 55 per cent of the population live, we can readily believe that the population did not decline.

The birth tables show that more boys than girls were born. The death tables show that more males died—the division of the sexes being as 54.9 to 45.1. Were there no immigration nor emigration in course of time the higher death rate among males would put the females into the ascendancy. Perhaps we may yet have a female national party with the latter carrying all the elections.

Only 37.3 per cent of the deaths were among natives of native parentage. Twenty-one and two-tenths per cent were among the foreign born. This would indicate that we need about 200,000 immigrants a year to offset the deaths among the foreign born.

Baby life becomes safer yearly in all parts of the registration area. In 1917 16 per cent of the deaths were of children under 1. This is to be compared with 17.3 in 1914, 20.2 in 1906, and 20.7 in 1900. In 1917 22.8 per cent of the deaths were of children under 5, as compared with 30.4 per cent in 1900. The number of deaths of babies under 1 year per 1,000 born show declines which confirm the opinion that even though life in general is not quite so safe within the last five years, baby life and child life is safer.

The honors for low baby death rate go to Washington, with a percentage of 7.6. Washington is the safest state in the union for young children. A part of this is due to climate. Truby King pronounces the climate of the upper Pacific Coast quite similar to that of New Zealand, a country with a very low baby death rate. Other states in the honor roll in the order named are: Minnesota, Utah, Colorado, Kansas, and Wisconsin. A factor in Minnesota's good showing is the large infusion of Scandinavian stock.

Among the cities, Seattle leads with the very low proportion of 6.9, followed by Spokane, Portland, Oakland, St. Paul, and Minneapolis. In this field, as in many others, the smaller cities show a wide spread. Some of them show a very low baby death rate and some a very high one.

During the years just prior to the great war the United States was not the healthiest country in the world. In spite of our heavy immigration of young people and the low average age of our population, there were several countries with lower death rates. These countries were: New Zealand, Australia, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Holland, England, and Wales. Belgium and Switzerland had rates nearly as low as ours. Germany and France made poorer showings. While health conditions in this country were improving we were improving no faster than Sweden, England, and Wales. Germany was improving much faster than any other country.

Comparing the death rates just prior to the war with those of 1881, we find that Ireland led with an improvement of 39 per cent. Other large gains were: Holland, 33.2 per cent; Germany, 30.8 per cent; Denmark, 25.5; Austria, 25; Switzerland, 24.9; England and Wales, 24.2; Norway, 19.8; Sweden, 13.3, and France, 12.5.

When we come to the bacterial diseases we reach the field of achievement. There still are people who ridicule the germ theory of disease, but the figures show that the money spent in fighting bacterial diseases on that basis is returning results. The decrease in certain disease death rates in ten years was as follows:

Typhoid fever, from 19.6 in 1908 to 3.1 in 1917.
Scarlet fever, from 12.9 to 3.3.
Whooping cough, from 9.4 to 3.3.
Diphtheria, from 21.6 to 18.2.
Tuberculosis, from 169.4 to 146.7.
Diarrheal diseases, from 99 to 61.7.

There has been no decrease in measles in the ten year period.

The important causes of death showing increases are:

Cancer, from 77.2 to 94.3.
Apoplexy, from 80.6 to 99.8.
Heart disease, from 159 to 198.4.
Bright's disease, from 92.2 to 118.5.
Pneumonia, from 136.4 to 164.

In 1917 the chief cause of death was heart disease, with pneumonia second, tuberculosis third, and Bright's disease and external causes not so far in the rear. Five years ago tuberculosis was first. It is headed for fourth place now.

The honors for low typhoid rates are carried off by the northern states. Minnesota led with 4.3. Other honor roll states were: Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Rhode Island, New York, and Vermont. Several large cities had rates less than one-half those of the states noted. Typhoid has become a disease of country people.

The malaria death rate was 3.2. Even in the registration area malaria is nearly one-half as important as typhoid from the standpoint of deaths. It is much more important from the standpoint of disability.

Smallpox in the country at large was not a cause of many deaths. It only caused three deaths for each million population. Among the states Montana made the worst record. Their smallpox death rate was more than four times that of the country at large. Smallpox is not a city disease. San Antonio, Duluth, El Paso, Worcester, and San Francisco had smallpox death rates far worse than those of the worst states. It seems strange that cities will tolerate smallpox after the army experiences have proved that the disease can be wholly avoided.

Health departments cannot postpone fighting measles much longer. In 1917, 10,745 persons died from measles in the registration area. This is about 1 per cent of the deaths from all causes. Of these 303 were soldiers and of these soldiers 150 came from South Carolina, 44 from Kansas, and 34 from California. Wisconsin had the lowest measles rate, New Jersey was second, Minnesota third, and California fourth.

The rule to which there are some exceptions is that the scarlet fever death rate is in proportion to the severity of the winters. The states with the lowest scarlet fever rates were Maine, Virginia, South Carolina, Washington, Connecticut, Maryland, and North Carolina. The states with the highest rates were Montana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Utah, and Vermont. The cities with the lowest scarlet fever rates were Oakland, New Orleans, Newark, and Richmond.

The states with the lowest whooping cough death rates were Utah, Minnesota, Maine, Colorado, and Massachusetts. Those with the highest were North Carolina, Kentucky, and Virginia.

The states with low diphtheria death rates were Washington, Colorado, California, Vermont, and Kansas. The cities with low rates were Seattle, Oakland, Nashville, Portland, and Spokana.

The lowest tuberculosis death rates were in Utah (43), Kansas, Washington, Vermont, and Wisconsin (98). All of these rates were much below the average. The highest were Tennessee, Kentucky, California, and Colorado. California and Colorado were high because they are resort states to a large degree. The lowest rates among the cities were reported from Spokane, Portland, Seattle, Scranton, Grand Rapids, and Pittsburgh. For some reason the Pittsburgh rate is rising.

The upper New England states have the highest cancer rates probably because of the large proportion of people over 50 years of age in the general population.

Infantile paralysis was not much in evidence in 1917. Vermont, Virginia, Ohio, and New Hampshire had more than their share. Chicago suffered much more than any other city.

The pneumonia rates were lowest in Washington, Minnesota, North Carolina, Kansas, and Utah and highest in Connecticut, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and New Jersey. The Connecticut rate was nearly four times that of Washington and more than twice that of Minnesota. Among the cities Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Los Angeles, and Oakland carried off the honors.

A striking fact is the increase in deaths due to certain types of accidents. Fatal automobile accidents are especially on the increase. The number of children killed is increasing. The low fatal automobile accident rate in New York City is proof that most of the fatalities are preventable.

HARD CASE TO DIAGNOSE.

S. L. writes: "1. Being afflicted with spondylarthritis for several years and having been under a doctor's care, without relief, I would like to know whether this disease is curable. 2. Is there any difference between spondylarthritis and tuberculosis of the spine? 3. What is a good treatment for spondylarthritis?"

REPLY.

Your disease is an inflammation of the articulations or joints of the bones of the spinal column or some of them. Such disease is due to some form of germ. It is not probable that the bacterium is the tubercle bacillus. That organism generally causes breaking down of bone and abcesses. It is more likely that your trouble is due to infection with some form of coccus—either a streptococcus, pneumococcus, or other kindred organism. I wish I knew what to tell you, but I do not.

TESTS TO DISCOVER FLU.

G. S. writes: "Is there any laboratory method of diagnosing influenza?"

REPLY.

Examination of the blood in a patient suffering from influenza shows the number of white blood corpuscles to be low. If there is pneumonia complicating the influenza the number of white cells will be above the normal, but the increase will be less than is customary in ordinary pneumonia.

MEDICAL DISCHARGE.

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 26.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Kindly inform me if a drafted man discharged for a minor disability is allowed any part of his uniform, and if he is entitled to a service pin? If so, to whom should one apply? Is he eligible for membership in the American Legion? J. K. K.

You do not make clear whether the man was actually inducted into the service or not. If he was, the medical discharge is not a dishonorable one and he is entitled to all privileges granted an honorably discharged service man. For the equipment he should make application to the sales and issues branch, zone supply office, 1819 West Thirty-ninth street, Chicago.

For the button he should send his discharge papers to the nearest army recruiting station, where a button will be issued to him.

For the American Legion membership he should affiliate with his neighborhood post.

BONDS.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Will you kindly advise me where I can get information regarding my Liberty bonds on which I completed [illegible] payments while I was in the army? I do not have any receipts to show that I made the payments. The bonds were two $50 ones. C. F. I.

There is a bond investigation section established at 120 West Adams street, Chicago, where these bonds will be traced for you. Or write full particulars to the zone finance office, bond section, allotments branch, Washington, D. C., giving your full name, rank, and organization to which you belonged when you subscribed for the bonds and your present address.

REGULAR ARMY MAN.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Could you tell me where to write to learn the address of a soldier who enlisted in the regular army Nov. 26, 1919? I would like to have his address, as I have good news for him. E. S.

If the man is still in the service his address will be on file in the office of the Adjutant General, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C. If he has been discharged, the adjutant's office would also have his address or home address.

CITY DOES NOT CLEAN VACANT LOTS.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—A vacant lot corner of Van Buren street and Kildare avenue has been and at present is being used as a dumping ground by people living in the neighborhood, burning rubbish and dumping cans and ashes, which is an eyesore to the folks living west side of Kildare avenue. Can the owner of said lot be held responsible for condition and for not using a warning and penalty sign to public? H. H.

The lot complained of has been cleaned by the city forces. Our appropriations do not cover the cleaning of vacant lots, and it will be impossible for this bureau to keep them clean without the cooperation of the surrounding residents.

THOS. H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

SOUTH SIDE ALL LIT UP.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Would you kindly let me know when the electric street lights will be connected in Auburn Highlands, Seventy-ninth to Eighty-second street, Racine to Ashland avenue? The poles were installed about a year ago, but the lights are not connected. What is the cause for delay? A. ANDERSON.

The street lamps in Auburn Highlands will be placed in service in March or April. The lamps are to be operated from a new station, now under process of construction at One Hundred and Third and South Racine streets. This station would have been completed last fall and the lamps now in service had it not been for the building trades strike, which delayed the work.

WM. G. KEITH, Commissioner.

OVERDUE ALIMONY.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. How long over-[illegible] must alimony be before one can start action?

2 [a] What action can be taken when defendant is in the state? [b] Out of the state? [c] Can an injunction against him hold him in the state?

3. Does nonpayment of alimony by any given time release one of obligation or accumulated amount? THANKFUL.

1. You can take steps to collect as soon as it is at all overdue.

2. [a] A "rule" can be issued and if he persists he can be cited for contempt.

[b] You would have to sue in the [illegible] court and enforce the judgment by ordinary process.

[c] If the facts warrant he can be held on a writ of ne exeat.

3. Alimony proceedings are largely within the discretion of the court. There is a possibility of the accumulations being released. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WHERE MILK COMES FROM.

Valparaiso, Ind., Jan. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The article in Voice of People Jan. 21 in regard to 17 cent milk signed M. L. I think was written by the most fair minded man in Chicago, very much unlike the women who boycotted the eggs and tried to kill the goose that laid the golden egg. He is right when he says if people demand service let them pay for it. I am a dairy farmer and have to get up these beautiful zero mornings at 4:30, hike with my wife and family to the cow stable to pail the cows while the aroma of the stable permeates your very soul, then trek to the milk train three or four miles distant, bucking snowdrifts, and probably get there just in time to see the hind end of the train fading away in the distance. Buying feed at $72 a ton, donating myself and family's labor, what a grand and glorious feeling when our milk check comes to find we received the fabulous sum of 7¾ cents a quart for our milk. M. L., you are a prince. Shake.

L. W. MILLER.

LET BE THE HERO'S GRAVE.

Winona, Minn., Jan. 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Noting in yesterday's news dispatches the story about the organization of Gold Star Mothers, headed by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, which will combat the movement to disinter the bodies of American doughboys in France and return them to the United States, I am thinking you may be interested in the views of one who was there. I served in the 74th company, 6th marines, 2d division, which company had an even hundred men killed and died of wounds in the course of its twenty-three months overseas. When we first heard of that plan in the summer of 1918 there were many discussions in the company regarding its advisability and the unanimous opinion of the men who were going into the front lines periodically and expecting each time that they might be killed was that the place for a soldier to lie was where he fell. L. S. B.

COME THE CLERKS.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Now that the professionals, namely, the teachers and professors, are being considered as human beings who have to live on their salaries, what about directing a little attention to the clerks, stenogs, and other office people who have to eat and drink also, and not only that, but have to dress up to the minute and whose salaries are remaining at a standstill? It would be quite all right if other things weren't galloping up the hill, but they are, and we are knocking out our letters at the same amount per as ever before. C. H.

EINSTEIN'S THEORY
By A. S. Eddington

Every one is talking about Einstein and his new theory of time and space. Very few—they say only ten or twelve—men in the world understand the theory, and, indeed, as the subjoined article makes clear, only those capable of thinking in abstruse mathematical formulæ can understand the theory. Still, this is as clear an account probably as can be given in popular terms. It is by Dr. Eddington, Plumian professor of astronomy at Cambridge university, England, and is republished from the Contemporary Review.

REVOLUTION in science—Newton and Euclid dethroned—bending of light—the fourth dimension—warping of space! The mountains have been in labor, and the experienced reader has perhaps concluded that the scientific world is enriched by the arrival of a hopeful young individual of the species mus ridiculus.

The judgment is too hasty. Newspaper reports have been accurate on the whole; and it is evident that scientific writers of experience have tried nobly to cope with the editorial demand for an account of a most profound scientific theory, embracing all nature, "in simple language in not more than 500 words." Perhaps the public has derived as impression that the new views of space and time are more weird than is really the case; but the fundamental nature of the change has not been exaggerated. The theoretical researches of Prof. Albert Einstein of Berlin, now so strikingly confirmed by the British eclipse expeditions, involve a broadening of our views of external nature, comparable with, or perhaps exceeding the advances associated with Copernicus, Newton, and Darwin.

The immediate cause of this turmoil is the fact noted by the observers at the eclipse of May 29, both in Brazil and in the Isle of Principe, that the images of certain stars as their photographs are shifted about one-fiftieth of a millimeter from where they might be expected to be. A trivial discrepancy! But it was such a trivial discrepancy which led to the discovery of argon and the inert gases of the atmosphere. On displacements smaller than this our whole knowledge of the distances of the fixed stars was established. An astronomer once rashly said to Sir David Gill, "there is no such thing as a hundredth of a second of arc." Gill proceeded to convince the world that there is; and a hundredth of a second is now well within reach of refined measurement.

In the present case we have a displacement of a whole second of arc; and if the observers had indeed made such an error, their mistake could scarcely be condoned by the limitations of a temporary installation of apparatus in remote parts of the globe, or the time limit of five minutes (the duration of the eclipse) in which to settle the problem. Of course, the observation was not an accident; the expeditions were planned exclusively for this purpose, and all precautions that forethought could suggest to guard against error were adopted.

The deflection of the star images means a bending of the ray of light as it passes near the sun, just as though the light had weight which caused it to drop towards the sun. But it is not the bending of light that threatens the downfall of Newton. On the contrary, were Newton alive he would be congratulating himself on his foresight. In his "Opticks" we read:

"Query I.—Do not bodies act upon light at a distance, and by their action bend its rays, and is not this action (ceteris paribus) strongest at the least distance?"

Weight of light seemed less strange to Newton than to us, because he believed light to consist of minute corpuscles, whereas for us the bending of a wave of light is a much more difficult conception. This confirmation of Newton's speculation is in itself a striking result; it might perhaps be described as the first new thing that has been learned about gravitation in more than 200 years.

The great upheaval in ideas arises because the bending is twice that which Newton would have predicted on the basis of his law of gravitation; but it agrees with that which Einstein predicted according to a remarkable theory of space and time put forward by him in 1915. This theory had already aroused great interest among astronomers because it explained quantitatively a well known anomaly in the motion of the planet Mercury. The double confirmation by experiment will convince most scientists that the theory must have strong elements of truth in it; but no one will assert that it is yet proved to be necessarily true in the form in which it is stated. As the matter stands at present, there appears to be no doubt that Einstein, whether his arguments are true or false, has given the correct law of gravitation—more accurate than the Newtonian law—and some at least of his ideas, which led him to the new law, are substantiated.

The public has probably been surprised at the unanimity with which leading scientific men have hastened to confess that they do not understand Einstein's theory. The reason is because the theory employs a hitherto little used branch of mathematics, which most mathematical physicists have either forgotten or more often omitted altogether from their equipment. Founded by Riemann, and developed in recent years by the Italians Ricci and Levi-Civita, it seemed most unlikely ever to have any physical application. I believe that Einstein himself was ignorant of this subject when he began these epoch making researches. It is not the least part of the romance of the discovery that it depends on the investigations of pure mathematicians in a field of abstract thought which seemed unlikely ever to be contaminated by a mundane application.

THE main difficulty in giving an account in simple language is that the whole theory is a revolt against "simple language." If the theory is right, simple language involves very confused ideas. What ideas are more elementary than those of space and time? "If only you would tell us what it is about in terms of space instead of talking about tensors and differential invariants, we should understand you immediately." No, you would not. In space you have two essentially distinct ideas mixed up; and until these are separated no progress in understanding Einstein's theory can be made.

Let us take a simple proposition about space. Euclid says that the sum of the lengths of two sides of a triangle is always greater than the length of the third side. There is no mathematical or other purely logical reason for believing this to be true; and nowadays we are giving up trying to persuade schoolboys that there is. Our sole reason for believing it is that, whenever we measure lengths with the most perfect appliances, we have hitherto always found it correct. But is that what we usually understand the proposition to mean? Are length and measured length quite the same idea? We have to make up our minds between two views of space:

[a] The properties of space are those which are revealed by measures. In that case geometry—the science of space—is really a study of the behavior of material measuring scales, and therefore a branch of mechanics.

[b] Space is something independent of material measuring appliances, so that its properties are not necessarily revealed by measures. In that case physics is not directly concerned with space, because it has no interest in things that cannot be measured.

In ordinary life we try to have it both ways. We think that space is something preëxisting with uniform properties, in which the material world is, as it were, an accident; if measures did not come out as we expected, according to this preconceived idea of what space must be like, we should say that our measuring apparatus had been made untrustworthy by something—strainee by a gravitational force, for example. At the same time, we assume that this preëxisting space is identical with the space that we measure—not only with scientific apparatus, but in common life with the eye and with muscular effort.

In Einstein's view, since the space [b] is not revealed by physical measurements, there is no conceivable reason for believing in its existence; and in any case it does not concern us. Hence for him space is always and solely measured space. We cannot predict a priori what will happen to measuring appliances in a strong field of gravitation, hence we cannot predict what kind of space will be there. It turns out that it is probably non-Euclidean, or, as it is popularly expressed, warped. But all the metaphysical implication disappears when we remember that this is merely a statement about the unusual behavior of measuring appliances in unusual circumstances.

THE reader may perhaps think that it is a bathos that all the talk of the warping of space should come to nothing more than this; but he must remember that the space that is warped is actually the space of his perception. The judgments of his senses are physical measures, though crude; and the appliances of the laboratory merely assist and refine these judgments without altering their character. We are inclined to overlook the channel of sense measures by which external nature is presented to the mind, and to think that in some way the mind is directly acquainted with things outside us. So far from this being true, two of the most essential features in our mental picture of the external world—viz., space and time—are not actually in the external world, but are introduced into the picture in the course of transmission through sense channels to our brains.

In every observation the observer has a share as important as that of the thing which is observed. With the observer I include any measuring apparatus he may use to improve the judgments of his senses. In many cases we automatically abstract the observer's share; we notice four minute funnels on the horizon and announce that we have seen a leviathan Cunarder; from our carriage window we see a cow glide past at fifty miles an hour, and remark that the poor creature is enjoying a rest.

Einstein's achievement is a separation of the shares of the observer and of external nature far more complete than hitherto, and opposed to the separation which through long generations we have instinctively adopted. He assigns space and time solely to the observer; in nature there is left something which for want of a better name we may call space time. In a sense it is a combination of space and time, but it has lost the more familiar qualities of both. It arouses curiosity because it has four dimensions.

The observer himself is in nature and he is passing through this four dimensional "something." Let us see what he makes of it. He is sitting in his armchair making no conscious effort to change position; nevertheless, he perceives that he is not stationary in the great world—he is progressing along time. He makes a conscious effort; now he is progressing in space. Thus he splits up this four dimensional thing; direction in which he progresses without conscious effort is time, other directions are space.

But, says the astronomer, he is also borne through space without conscious effort by the earth on its journey round the sun. Our observer listens respectfully and says he will bear it in mind, but he forgets. Someone asks him how far he walked in the last ten seconds. "About ten yards," is the reply. "You mean 200 miles," says the astronomer, "that was the distance between your starting and finishing points." It is the same in the laboratory; when the physicist measures the speed of a sound wave he never worries about the motion of the earth. And he is justified; the separation into space and time is his affair: it is not in nature; it is part of his own consciousness, and why should he make a separation which is not related to his consciousness and contradicts his natural experience?

AND so it comes about that each observer takes that direction in the world in which he himself is involuntarily progressing to be the direction of time; and the time direction being chosen, the space directions settle themselves automatically. Another observer, taking a different course through the world, will have a different time and a different space. This would long ago have led to confusion were it not that all observers with whom we are acquainted are tied to the earth and take practically the same course. It had always been thought that to allow for the motion of an observer it was only necessary to subtract a constant velocity; and it is true that this is generally sufficient in practice in all but a few exceptional and refined measures.

But in reality the effect of the observer's motion is more far reaching and involves a rotation of time direction. Contemplated by an observer moving with a great speed, the rotation of time direction is large, and terrestrial phenomena will appear most extraordinary; a man six foot high might suddenly contract to three feet, or time might appear almost suspended and Mr. Wells' romance, "The New Accelerator," could be actually enacted. There is no illusion in these phenomena, except in so far as all our acquaintance with nature is illusion. But they do not imply that anything extraordinary is happening in the external world, because the length of a man, or the duration of an action, are not in the external world, but are something superadded by the sense-processes or the measuring appliances of the particular onlooker.

Relegating space and time to their proper source—the observer—Einstein bids us contemplate the residuum of what we observe. This residuum is the true world. It is shapeless, because we have abstracted space; yet it is metrical and has quantitative properties which can be expressed in mathematical terms. Clearly we cannot describe this true world in terms of familiar things, because the whole point of Einstein's theory is that we must abstract the ideas which we ourselves have added in order to form familiar things. Mathematics is the only language in which the inherent qualities of this unfamiliar world can be described. But though it seems unfamiliar, nature is left simpler by this purification. A closer unity is perceived in the bases of phenomena apparently diverse; and, for example, the effect of gravitation on light is clearly foreseen. Further, the laws of nature must relate to this four dimensional residuum, and the space and time we ourselves introduce cannot be relevant. This led Einstein to the conclusion that Newton's law of gravitation, which refers to one particular separation of space and time, cannot be exact law; and he proposed a new law applicable to a four dimensional world, which has now been strikingly justified by observation.

It is not necessary to picture scientists as prostrated by the new revelations, feeling that they have got to go back to the beginning and start again. The general course of experimental physics will not be deflected, and only here and there will theory be touched. If our common view of nature is a dream, still our business is with the fabric of our vision. Search for truth may reveal that there is underlying the dream a real world, and the true laws of the phantasms are to be expressed in terms of—let us say—indigestion. The discovery is epoch making, and much that appeared inexplicable in the dream world is now traceable to its source. But the dreamer goes on dreaming.

EINSTEIN

This is Albert Einstein, the 41 year old scientist whose theory of relativity has upset the entire scientific world. His discoveries regarding gravitation and his theories about time and space, according to scientists, are as epoch making as the discoveries of Copernicus, Kepler, and Newton. An article about the new theory, by Prof. A. S. Eddington, former assistant at the royal observatory at Greenwich, England, is published in an adjoining column.

READING COURSE FOR PARENTS

Leading to a Certificate of Well Informed Parenthood Issued by the United States Bureau of Education and Signed by the Commissioner of Education.

THE United States bureau of education in inaugurating its series of reading courses has had in mind that education in parenthood in the training of children is perhaps the most desirable of all educations. It has, therefore, given as its third reading course a list of books designed especially for parents. For each person who gives satisfactory evidence of having read the books on the list a certificate will be issued by the United States bureau of education and signed by the commissioner of education.

Life is a school which never ceases to educate its pupils. "The learned," it has been said, "are those who have studied in books; the thinkers, geniuses, enlighteners of the world, and liberators of the human race are those who have read direct from the pages of life itself."

Every mother is reading direct from the pages of life itself in bearing children and rearing a family. She is learning lessons as valuable as any she may give, for every woman who has experienced motherhood has a glimpse of life's great meanings—wider and deeper than is possible without this experience.

Every child has the right to a happy, joyous childhood. Parental understanding of the child—of his normal conditions, of the laws of health and growth, of the inner life—is necessary for those who fulfill the sacred trust of parenthood and for the perfect development of children for good citizenship and life.

Blighted lives, physically, mentally, and spiritually, are often the result of mistaken methods in bringing up children. Good but weak parents with aimless, drifting methods may have as bad influence on their children as parents whose characters are positively bad.

The science of child nurture is the most important of all sciences. Infant mortality may be reduced more than half by education of mothers in baby hygiene. The home is the greatest educational force in the world, but it has never been fully equipped to carry on the great work for which it is destined. The home has the child entirely within its care for the first six years of life, and fully nine-tenths of the time after school days begin.

A shelf of books on child care and nurture should be part of every mother's equipment for her work. The lawyer with his library, the physician with his medical library, the teacher continually studying how to teach, are examples for the mother, the greatest teacher of all. She, too, should have her library for study and reference.

The list of books given here is not intended to be exhaustive. Many books helpful to parents in the care and education of their children are not included in it. Some of those not included may be much better than some that are in the list. However, the list is typical, and these books cannot fail to be helpful.

The home education division of the bureau of education, Washington, D. C., will gladly give information about other books upon request and will also attempt to answer briefly any specific questions in regard to the physical, mental, and moral education of young children. Communications should be addressed to home education division, bureau of education, Washington, D. C.

READING COURSE NO. 3.

[A certificate, bearing the seal of the United States bureau of education, signed by the commissioner of education, will be given to each person who gives satisfactory evidence of having read all the books on the accompanying list. You are invited to join the great national reading circle, making your own selection from the reading courses provided.]

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW
By Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"The Great Impersonation" [Little Brown], by E. Phillips Oppenheim.
"The House of Baltazar" [John Lane], by William J. Locke.
"A Man for the Ages" [Bobbs Merrill], by Irving Bacheller.
"Slippy McGee" [Century], by Marie Oehlmer.
"Mrs. Marden" [Doran], by Robert Hichens.
"The Strong Hours" [Houghton Mifflin], by Maud Diver.

NONFICTION.

"The Emancipation of Massachusetts". [Houghton Mifflin], by Brooks Adams.
"South" [Macmillan], by Sir Ernest Shackleton.
"One Hundred Seventy Chinese Poems" [Knopf], by Arthur Waley.

"THE GIDDY GLOBE" [Doran], by Oliver Herford, is one of those good old fashioned books of nonsense that, much more than sleep, is chief nourisher in life's feast. Our old friend Holmes said something when he opined that a little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men. Such a book as "The Giddy Globe," a nonsense geography, would delight the high and low brow alike. There are the most amazing illustrations, from Noah—recognized by any one who ever owned a Noah's ark as a perfect portrait—various well known animals (crackers), partially eaten owing to the H. C. of L.—to photographs of a steamship battling with the marcel waves. There are such solemn questions at the conclusion of each chapter as "Is it notoriety that makes the weather vane? Where does the winter resort in summer?" And at the end of each chapter devoted to the lands occupied by the allies and the neutrals there is the tactful paragraph, "The inhabitants of ——— are the most Moral and Patriotic people in the world, and their army is second to none in bravery and won the World War." The only other humorous geographical book that I have seen to compare with "The Giddy Globe" is "A Short History of Discovery," by Hendrik Willem Van Loon, a book presumably for children, with exceedingly funny pictures drawn with a burnt match by this very solemn (?) professor of history at Cornell. It is, as a matter of fact, made for nonsense loving grownups. It isn't a new book—it was published a couple of years ago by David McKay.

"A Tarpaulin Muster" [Dodd Mead], by John Masefield, is not a new narrative poem but a reprint of Masefield's first book, the record of his life in New York twenty years ago, when he was chief bottle washer and nursemaid in a barroom with hotel attachments.

Maxim Gorki's "Night Lodging," which created something of a sensation when Arthur Hopkins produced it in New York, can be had in book form. It is titled "Submerged" and is published by the Four Seas company.

For those who like to revel in the sentimental notion that a small town is a place where everybody loves his neighbor and no one's for himself and there's no devil to take the hindmost Zona Gale's short stories "Peace in Friendship Village" [Macmillan] is nectar and ambrosia. Myself, I wonder how she can write 'em—and sell 'em.

A call for help in the Tabloid Book Review rarely goes unanswered. A few weeks ago, in speaking of a book of poems by Leonard Lippman which had been published in England and to which Edmond Rostand had written an introduction, I asked, "And in the meantime does any one know Leonard Lippman?" Posthaste came this reply: "Yes'm. He wrote pretty verses, facile, graceful, imitative, correct in emotion tone; in a word, the sort of poetry a gentleman would write. An American publisher I know turned his book down awhile back partly as a rebuke (!) to Rostand for permitting his appreciation of a man's gallantry to lead him into an error of literary judgment. It is to be hoped that no American publisher will issue this. We've enough negligible stuff on hand already." So THAT'S settled.

Nina Wilcox Putnam, who writes with clocklike regularity for the Sat Eve Post and whose short stories about a circus born society dancer, "Believe You Me" [Doran], were a prosperous investment for the author and the publisher, has recently contracted a modern marriage. Although Putnam was the name of her late husband, she elects to be called Miss Putnam and she has retained her independence by refusing to be known as Mrs. Robert J. Sanderson by maintaining a separate establishment in Madison, Conn., from her new husband's in Bridgeport and by sharing fifty-fifty in the expenses of the apartment in New York where she and Mr. Sanderson spend their week ends. It was Nina Wilcox Putnam, too, who was one of the ardent ones who want to unionize the middle classes into a League of Brain Workers. She has already organized some of the authors. The theory is that each small group shall be autonomous and shall be federated into one large group on the same principle as the American Federation of Labor.

"The Secret Battle," by A. P. Herbert, comes to the public with Mr. Alfred A. Knopf's passionate assurance that it is one of the best books he has ever published. "Not every one—to be sure—will like it," he says, "though few, I think, will be found to deny its impressive power. However, I have published it more for the pleasure of bringing forward a novel that to my mind is really great than in the hope of any considerable immediate profit—and yet, and yet—I have too firm faith in the Borzoi following me to believe that they will long pass by Mr. Herbert's fine effort." London seems to have laurel crowned it as one of the great novels of the war.

Lieut. Geoffrey Malins, who took moving pictures for the British government, has written of his experiences in "How I Filmed the War" [Stokes]. There is a tale about how he had a great operation postponed so that he could get a picture of it. It was early in 1915, when the Britishers had completed the mining of the Hohenzollern redoubt. Lieut. Malins had photographed the whole process, and when everything was ready he heard, to his horror, that the big works would be at 4:30 the next morning. He protested to the officer in the front line that he couldn't take pictures at that time, and the officer sarcastically suggested that he ask the general to put off the show. "That's a brainy idea," said Lieut. Malins, and he did. The general blusteringly asked, with expletives, who was running the war and sent the movie man, a trifle cowed, back to his post. But later in the day an order came that the redoubt would be blown up at 7 and not at 4:30.

WHAT AMERICA HAS DONE FOR ME

The Tribune will pay $5 for each letter printed on the subject, "What America has done for me." The contest is limited to American citizens of foreign birth. The letters should be helpful; they should relate personal experiences; they should speak of direct and material benefits found in the United States. They should be concise, 300 words at the most. The contestant should give, not for publication, his age, address, occupation, name of the country from which he came, and the length of time he has been a citizen. Address letters to the Loyalty Editor, Chicago Tribune.

I CAME to this wonderful country in 1907 from Denmark, a youth of 18, filled with ambition and enthusiasm, determined to make good, knowing the unlimited possibilities it offered. Think not for one moment that I did not experience hardships. Oh, yes, indeed, lots of them; but, after all, that is what puts the backbone in a man. But what kept me determined was the fact that I soon realised that in this country a man is judged for what he does and not for how long he has been doing a certain thing, as is the case in any European country, regardless of his ability.

The knowledge of that fact is sufficient for any man to succeed, and if the United States had nothing else to offer but that one policy it would be well worth while for any ambitious foreigner to make this his future home. I took out my first citizen papers the year after my arrival and my second as soon as it was possible, and I dare anybody to say to me that there lives a more loyal American than I.

It matters not how much I am worth in dollars and cents. Money is made and lost over night and if I were to lose everything I have I would still have my citizenship and my good American family, and that in this country is sufficient for a new start toward success and happiness. I thank God that he guided my steps toward the United States, that it was my good fortune to come here to work and be able to grasp one of the many opportunities that is within the reach of every man who is determined to live an honest and upright life. May it be my privilege to live my life on and on as a good American citizen, in peace with God, in harmony with my fellowmen, in reverence for the Stars and Stripes, that I may be able to say, with Stephen Decatur, "Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country right or wrong." J. H., Wisconsin.

IN September, 1907, I arrived in New York after an uneventful trip from Antwerp, Belgium, my native land. Eleven years later, day for day, I landed in Liverpool, England, after a trip full of events from New York, U. S. A., my land of adoption. I made the trip aboard an army transport in company with some 3,000 more U. S. Yanks to prove to my new land that I was willing to defend some of the liberties I was enjoying.

I enlisted in the early part of 1918 after being a civilian instructor of French at Camp Grant for six months, and, with the help of my dear wife, whom I left behind taking care of our two babies, I set forth to do my part in the great struggle against autocracy.

When I first arrived in America I worked in the shops, studying the English language at night, until I soon became employed as a bank bookkeeper. This was the first benefit I derived from the conditions as they exist in the United States, because in Belgium it is not permitted that a poor boy should enter any banking institution, a profession reserved for the sons of the wealthy. I kept studying and improving myself and soon became assistant postmaster of our local postoffice, another position that class distinction would have closed to me in my native land.

I had now been five years in this country, so received my final naturalization papers, having previously studied the political organization of our government and learned about my rights as American citizen. Then came our declaration of war against Germany, and I offered my services at once to the government. But, being in the postal service, I was not given the chance to enlist. There being a great need for French instructors in the camps, I was accepted as teacher. I tried to enlist at different times, but, being in class IV. of the draft, I was rejected on the grounds of dependents. Finally I managed to squeeze in the army and get attached to the Eighty-sixth division.

Back in the United States, I have again learned to appreciate this land better after being again brought face to face with the living conditions in Europe, where every human being except a few privileged rich is constantly struggling for a mere existence without any hope for a better future.

GEORGE E. VANDER BEKE (Native of Belgium).

ALTHOUGH I don't speack very good english, I like to say what America has done for me, what America has done for my dear first country.

In 1914 I was an french girl anxious for her nation. One day the brave American army came and with her the sublime American red cross and that was our victory.

I saw thousands of children, of women, of old people saved by the generosity of the American people; I saw many french soldiers cured with an admirable devotion by your nurses; and that nobody over there will forget never.

When after the armistice, one of those courageous soldiers asked me to marry him, I was proud to come in that great big country. Now I am happy in your beautiful country, all my heart is American.

I make wishes for the prosperity and the happiness of my beloved new nation, the more generous in the world.

MRS. A. TEMPLE.

P. S.: I hope you could understand my very poor english, but I learned it in 9 months. I am 23 years old, and native from Paris, France.

AS a Russian "Jew," my gratitude, admiration, and love for "Uncle Sam" is twofold. The country I was born in and where my ancestors have lived for generations past has treated me like a stepchild. Although I left Russia at the age of 16, at that age I felt that I was a stranger in the country of my birth. America has treated me like one of her own sons.

My education, my success in business, my bright views of life, all—all and a great deal more—I owe to America. America the land of opportunities, land of freedom. I find it so and any foreigner will find it so if he is willing to make an effort to become Americanized.

The only excuse I have for Reds is that they do not know and do not understand the laws, customs, and habits of America; if they would learn about them they would turn to Red, White, and Blue.

My first two years in this country were spent in the Socialistic movement; not understanding the language of this country, I took to reading newspapers and magazines of foreign languages which were feeding me on the abuses of the present system of society. But as soon as I learned the English language a new world of knowledge opened its door for me. I have learned to know and understand America—its history, its spirit of fairness and square deal. I have learned the real meaning of "democracy" and received my benefits in health, wealth, and happiness, which I realize no other country would have given to me in as full measure as did America.

Poultry in the Suburbs

By Frank Ridgway

SUBURBAN flocks of hens have been multiplying rapidly in all of the big cities during the last two or three years and interest in the poultry raising business is still increasing. The day old chick business has done away with some of the breeding pens and the hatching of chickens, but most of the small breeders would rather put the old setting hen to work or operate the incubator themselves. While many are in the business for pastime and get a great deal of pleasure out of the work, most of them regard it as a serious problem. More eggs and more broilers will be the goal of most poultrymen in the future.

February, March, and April are the best months for hatching. The hatching should be completed by the first of May, except where a few late chickens are desired for table use in the fall. For beginners, particularly those who live in the suburbs, the safest plan is to start in a small way with a few fowls. The size of the flock will determine somewhat whether it is best to use an incubator or set the eggs under an old hen. When only a few hens are kept it is doubtful whether an incubator would be found profitable. The incubator may be used successfully on a cooperative plan where two or three own small flocks.

It is often necessary to use an incubator for the early hatch where hens brood late, or are not good brooders, such as the white leghorn. The Orpingtons, Rhode Island Reds, Rocks, and Wyandotts are good brooders.

When the hen is properly cared for she is in many cases the most valuable incubator for the small flock in the city. Unfortunately they do not always become broody at the most convenient time, especially if an early hatch is desired. A hen is rather temperamental and must be handled accordingly. Her first requisite is a quiet, comfortable corner. Before setting with expensive eggs test every hen with a nest egg to be sure she can be depended upon, for many of them leave the nest after twenty-four hours. It is best to wait twenty-four hours before putting the eggs under her. If the hen can be handled after that time without leaving the nest, she will probably give little trouble.

It is advisable to have the hens that are to be used for incubation purposes in a separate compartment where they will not be disturbed by other fowls or infested with lice and mites. The place should be ratproof. It often becomes necessary to transfer broody hens to a new location. This should be done at night. Where several hens are set in the same room the nests should be a few feet apart, particularly if the hens are allowed to leave their nests and return at will. Where the nests are built in tiers or rows and a large number of hens are set in the same room, doors must be provided so the nests may be kept closed.

The nest should be at least fourteen inches square. It may be built so the hen can enter from the top or front. It should be so constructed that the hen can enter easily, or there is danger of breaking the eggs. A door in front or a lid on top made of wire screen is an excellent means of providing plenty of ventilation and protection for the hen. It has been found a good plan to place a layer of sand or loamy soil in the bottom of the nest. This furnishes the necessary amount of moisture, and it can be shaped so the eggs will not be broken. Wheat straw placed on the soil makes the best nesting material. Deep nests should never be used, as the eggs will pile in the center, and are often broken. Then, too, those in the bottom will not get a sufficient amount of heat and will not hatch.

Eggs that are being saved for hatching purposes should be kept at a temperature of not less than 50 degrees Fahrenheit. They should not be kept longer than is absolutely necessary; two weeks is the limit with most poultrymen.

If the nests are left open the feed, water, and dust bath may be provided and little attention will be required, but this method is not always the most satisfactorily. When the hens are fastened in the nests they should be attended to regularly each day. They must be taken from the nests and fed and watered and returned after the eggs have cooled properly. Do not allow the eggs to chill. The hen may be allowed to exercise for several minutes and returned when the eggs are just slightly warm.

Normally hen eggs hatch in twenty-one days. It is best to have three or four hens on eggs at the same time. All eggs should be tested on the seventh day and the infertile ones removed. Place the good eggs under one hen and reset those left without eggs. The hens should be watched carefully at hatching time or many of the chicks will be killed.

The War's Greatest Victory

A New and Wonderful Antiseptic

40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid, by U. S. Laboratory tests. Yet it is not poisonous, doesn't burn, and is perfectly harmless to the skin and mouth.

The greatest victory of the war was the triumph of medical science over infection. Thousands of lives were saved.

Early in the war, nearly all wounds became germ infected. All the old standard antiseptics proved inadequate. Trench fever, lock-jaw, and other complications often set in, causing soldiers to die like flies. Surgeons fought desperately to stay the ravages of infection but with little success.

Help came from America, whose ablest scientists went to France, and there, after many experiments, invented a new, safe, chlorine antiseptic—the most wonderful foe of infection and disease the world has ever known.

It destroyed germs in wounds at the moment of application. Healing took place with amazing rapidity—often in one-fourth the usual time.

Its success in the military hospitals was remarkable. Later it was placed on every ship of the U. S. Navy.

Since then, leading physicians and dentists everywhere have tried it, proved that it has many more uses in peace than in war, and are advising it for a wide range of mouth, nose, throat and skin infections.

Now Available for Home Use

This wonder-working war antiseptic is now presented to the public, at very moderate cost, in the form of Kloria Tablets. For most purposes, simply dissolve one or two tablets in a half-pint bottle (or glass) of water.

Proven by scientific tests, Kloria is 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid, over 100 times more effective than peroxide and other weak antiseptics, and 50 times more rapid than bichloride.

Yet Kloria is pleasant, soothing, doesn't burn or irritate and is perfectly safe and not poisonous.

Deadly poisonous antiseptics are no longer needed in any home or for any purpose. Protect your children and yourself by using Kloria instead.

Don't Swallow Disease Germs! Use a Real Mouth Wash

Millions of germs breed in the mouth. They are swallowed, enter the system and cause most of our ills.

These germs may produce tonsilitis, tooth-decay, tender, bleeding and shrunken gums (pyorrhea) and many dangerous contagious diseases. A daily mouth wash that really destroys these germs is therefore most important—even more important than brushing the teeth.

Doctors and dentists have long known this. You also must awake to this important fact.

Peroxide and weak mouth wash antiseptics seldom destroy these germs. They merely prevent their growth for a time.

For years doctors and dentists have sought a safe, yet powerful antiseptic that would really do the work.

The war produced it. Kloria actually destroys germs at the moment of application.

Clean—Colorless—Stainless Costs but a Trifle

Kloria is worth its weight in gold, yet costs so little that no family can afford to be without it. A 50-cent bottle of the tablets will usually last a whole family for many months and being in tablet form, there is no water to pay for.

Kloria solution keeps perfectly; is clean, colorless and stainless. It leaves no odor of its own—doesn't give your home or your person any offensive smell. Yet it destroys all offensive odors most remarkably.

Germs, the Cause of Most Human Ailments

Kloria destroys germs. Wonderfully healing.

Germs are the little invisible microbes which cause so many diseases, infections, inflammations, itching, swelling, pus, etc. So Kloria has dozens and dozens of uses, wherever germs can be reached in the mouth, nose, throat, skin or about the home.

Its quick healing effect is truly amazing. Once tried, you will never go back to the best ointment, lotion, or liquid antiseptics you ever used.

Wounds, Cuts, Sores, Boils, Burns—Often heal in one-fourth the usual time. Kloria doesn't burn or injure the raw surface, but destroys the harmful germs, thus preventing blood poison.

Skin Eruptions—Eczema—Itching—Kloria relieves the burning and itching almost instantly and conquers the infection with astonishing rapidity.

Dandruff—This scalp germ cannot live in the presence of Kloria. The first application usually removes every trace of dandruff, and itching stops instantly. Kloria cannot injure the hair.

Throat Gargle—For sore throat, tonsilitis, etc., Kloria has no equal. It is far superior to peroxide and other feeble antiseptics. The results are positive, quick and remarkable.

Household Disinfectant—As a general disinfectant and deodorizer for home, store or factory, nothing else can compare with Kloria, and it is very inexpensive to use.

Mouth Wash—Kloria destroys the bacteria which cause tooth decay and gum infections. No other antiseptic is so effective.

Pyorrhea, Bleeding, Tender Gums—Leading dentists everywhere are now advising the chlorine treatment for gum troubles with the utmost success. The bleeding and soreness usually disappear within a week, and soon the shrunken gums begin to tighten around the teeth, holding them firmly. The results are prompt and really amazing.

Nasal Douche or Spray—Used in time, Kloria will usually ward off a cold entirely by destroying the germs. Promptly checks the discharge, inflammation and congestion in colds and other nasal troubles. The relief is almost immediate, and the improvement very prompt. Greatly superior to internal remedies.

Offensive Odors—Kloria destroys offensive odors anywhere—armpits, feet (and soreness), etc.

Personal Hygiene—Kloria is far superior to other antiseptics for this purpose.

Your druggist has Kloria Tablets or will gladly get them for you on request. If not, send us 50 cents for a bottle of 50 tablets by mail prepaid.

The genuine has the name "Noll" stamped on each tablet and is guaranteed to do all that is claimed or money promptly refunded. Avoid the disappointment of substitutes.

Pillsbury's Pancake Flour, a new member of Pillsbury's Family of Foods, is the outcome of much labor and research in our great modern laboratory. Many formulae were tried out with varying results. Nothing, however, could be found that would come up to the high standard that Pillsbury demanded. Finally, being no nearer a solution than when we started, all recipes and formulae were discarded, and our laboratory experts went to work to create a pancake flour regardless of other recipes

Using first quality wheat flour as a basis, the Pillsbury laboratory produced a pancake flour which makes pancakes with that satisfying flavor you enjoyed when mother prepared the batter. Pillsbury's pancakes have that "Mother's pancake taste" because Pillsbury's Pancake Flour is made as mother made her pancake flour—from the best ingredients obtainable.

Now you can make tender, light pancakes, with a real lingering flavor, without the trouble of mixing several ingredients. You need only add water to Pillsbury's Pancake Flour, and your pancakes will be ready in a minute—and they are real pancakes.

Remember Pillsbury's Family of Foods and ask your grocer for Pillsbury's Best Flour, the all-purpose quality flour—Pillsbury's Wheat Cereal, a splendid breakfast food, and Pillsbury's Health Bran, a wholesome food and laxative.

Church Council to Rule Work of 16 Denominations

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

ORGANIC union of the evangelical churches will be greatly advanced by the meeting of the conference of the ad interim committee of sixteen denominations which meets in Philadelphia, Pa., this week. The committee has been working since its appointment at a similar conference in December, 1918, called at the instance of the Northern Presbyterian church. It has made a careful survey of the field and is prepared to give its findings. The conference will meet in Witherspoon hall Feb. 3-6.

"The plan, briefly, provides for the association of ourselves into a visible body to be known as the United Churches of Christ in America, for the furtherance of the redemptive work of Christ in the world," writes Rev. Peter Ainslie, a member of the committee, in the current Christian Century. "This body would exercise in behalf of the constituent churches only those functions delegated to it by the council and by subsequent action of the constituent churches, the churches retaining the full freedom at present enjoyed by them all in matters not so delegated. There would be complete autonomy in purely denominational affairs.

"The basis of representation would be two ministers and two laymen for the first 100,000 or fraction thereof of its communicants, and one minister and one layman for each additional hundred thousand or major fraction thereof.

"In order to prevent overlapping, friction, competition, or waste in the work of the existing denominational boards or administrative agencies, the council would undertake to unify and harmonize the work of the united churches, such consolidation to be progressively achieved as by the union of churches of any two or more of the constituent denominations."

Many fields of service, such as religious education, evangelism and social service, will be operated in common under the direction of the council. Special efforts will be made to win over bodies not at present interested in the move for organic unity. The blue book which will be published for the conference will present the full program. It is likely that alternate plans will be presented and such are asked for by the committee.

The Rev. John Thompson, D. D., superintendent of city missions of the Methodist church, is the chairman of the sixteen delegates elected to go to the annual conference of the Methodist church which will be held in Des Moines, Iowa, next May.

A graduate of Garrett Biblical institute, he has been pastor of several important churches in and around Chicago, Grace church, McCabe Memorial, Hyde Park, Wheaton, and Rockford. He was district superintendent for two years and in 1914 was elected superintendent of the Chicago Home Missionary society. He is a member of the Methodist national board of home missions and the interchurch world movement committee, which recently met in Atlantic City. He was elected chairman of the delegation by the Rock River conference last October, the highest honor the conference can pay any of its members.

The Rev. Frederick J. Budlong, rector of St. Peter's church, celebrates today his fourth anniversary and he asks in the parish paper that "every member of the parish endeavor to be present at one of the morning services to join in asking God's blessing and guidance for the days which are ahead."

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's auxiliary of the Episcopal church will be held in Washington hall, the State-Lake building, on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. Miss Elizabeth Mathews, secretary of the Church Service league, will be the speaker. A conference of officers will be held at 2 p. m.

The united choirs of the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, will give a music festival Feb. 3 to 8. Goring Thomas' "Swan and Skylark" and the "Inflammatus" and "Qui Est Homo" from Rossini's "Stabat Mater" will be given on the evenings of the 3d and 6th. On the 5th and 8th Haydn's "Creation" will be presented. Prominent soloists and organists will take part. George Tenny is director of the choirs. Tickets may be obtained at music stores and are free.

Next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in St. Mary's of the Lake auditorium, Sheridan road and Buena avenue, the Holy Name society will hold an open meeting to which men and women are invited. An illustrated lecture on Rome will be given by Anthony Matre, who was given the title of Knight of St. Gregory by the pope.

On Monday at 12:15 Dr. Joseph Claire, former pastor of the English Congregational church of Petrograd, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. noonday meeting on "Snapshots of Americans." Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age and an authority on railroad matters, will speak on Tuesday on the subject, "What Shall Be Done with the Railroads?"

The last of six regional conferences of heads of the new era movement of the Presbyterian church with Presbyterial chairmen will be held in Chicago on Wednesday and Thursday. The meeting will attract about 150 men and women of Illinois and Wisconsin, invited by Dr. Charles Ryan Adams, district secretary of the new era movement. The conference will be held in the Hyde Park Presbyterian church. There will be a stereopticon lecture on missions open to the public on Wednesday evening in the church. The seven departments of the new era to be represented are spiritual resources, every member mobilization, stewardship, missionary education, gospel extension by boards and agencies, social service, and publicity. The heads of the departments will instruct the presbyterial chairman in each department how to stimulate local churches to work.

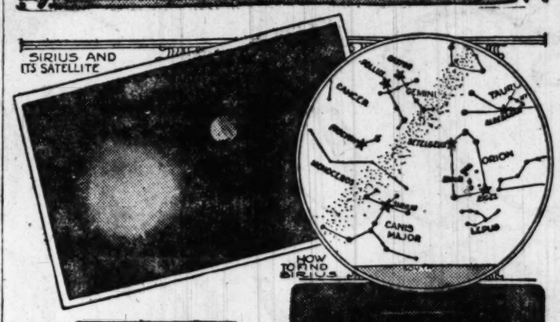
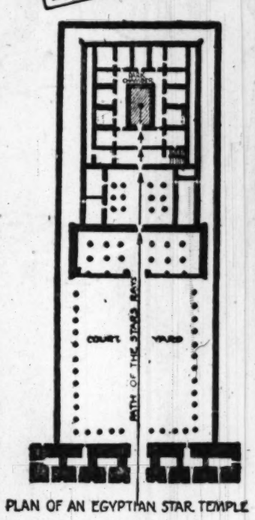
ASTRONOMY





PLAN OF AN EGYPTIAN STAR TEMPLE

THE DARK PASSAGE FOR THE STAR'S RAY
FROM THE TEMPLE OF DENDERAH

SIRIUS
BY S. F. MAXWELL

THE KING OF STARS.

THE mighty star Sirius can be found in the southern sky tonight. It is the brightest star in the firmament. When the air quivers its light pulses green, blue, and red with rapid scintillations. Sirius is so bright that the least breath of wind sets it twinkling. There can be no mistaking it, for excepting the bright planet Jupiter in the east, there is no light in the sky that is its rival.

Ancient astronomers describe Sirius as red. They do not say whether they mean its flashes of red or a general red color. To us it appears a greenish white. Its color is due to enormous clouds of incandescent hydrogen gas which envelop the globular form of the star.

To the ancients Sirius was an important cynosure. In Egypt, in particular, it was called the "king of stars" and the year began at the moment when Sirius rose with the sun. A great many of the Egyptian temples were built for the express purpose of observing Sirius, it has been found.

Such temples were ideal for the purpose for which they were built. The narrow entrance is flanked by two immense stone pylons. A straight, narrow passage extended down numerous rooms and courtyards, and terminated in a dark chamber. It was here that the idol stood, with its face so set that it received the first flash of the star. The priests, standing in the deep gloom, could look down the long nave and see Sirius the instant it topped the horizon.

The moment of the whole year when Sirius and the sun came into view at the same instant was the one of supreme importance to the Egyptians. We can imagine the scene that was reacted hundreds of times during the centuries when Egypt was a living nation.

A vast crowd is collected about the temple to Sirius in the fast gathering dawn. All classes of people are represented—lawyers, merchants, priests, soothsayers, and soldiers—for the event at hand touches the lives of all. There is none so lowly as to be unaffected by the coming of a new year. Calendars and clocks were not so common then as now.

The sun is coming. The whole eastern sky over the desert is a mass of flame. Murzim, the announcer star, leaps over the rim of the earth. When Murzim rises the watchers know they must be ready. A shout bursts from those above. The sun has risen. Below the watchers are straining their eyes at the blue patch of earth and sky cut by the entrance, and noting the seconds as they are told off on the water clocks. A blue green jewel flashes on the distant hills. Sirius is up, and a new year has begun.

We now have better means for telling time than by Sirius, but the king of stars still remains an object of great interest. There is a dark star going around Sirius, a quarter as big as its primary, but so faint that it can hardly be seen. Its presence was known for a long time before it was observed, on account of the way it disturbed its master and pulled him about. It takes a big telescope to see the dark attendant sun. Close in the blazing glare of Sirius a deep purple star is gleaming.

INFLUENZA PROTECTION

When you follow the instructions of the health authorities, viz., eating well, sleeping ten hours and keeping the intestinal tract free and clear, you are using the most effective measures to avoid influenza. Eating and sleeping well are merely matters of leading the simple life, but as an aid to keeping your system clear, you will find "Partola," the internal antiseptic laxative, decidedly helpful.

PARTOLA

"The Doctor in Candy Form"

Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Office

This is the "Doctor in Candy Form"

is not an ordinary laxative, but a sweet peppermint candy, delicious as bon bons, easy to take and equally effective for young and old. It is an internal antiseptic that helps to remove constipation and tends to eliminate impurities from their breeding places in the digestive organs.

The slogan by which Partola is known throughout the United States. Partola is used by thousands of representative families in practically every city, town and village of the country. Its many years of successful results establishes it as superior and entitles it to a place as your family laxative.

Buy a box of Partola today, eat several tablets tonight and you will be delighted with that feeling of freshness they exert on your system. 25c, 50c, $1.00 boxes at all druggists.

THE VIOLET BLUSHES

By Guy F. Lee.

Dear highbrow dames, when you invite
Me out to tea, please don't expect
A dissertation recondite
On how the Muse is being wrecked.
Don't Walpole* me, or ask me what
I figger extraordinary
In Dunsany*—for I am not
The least bit literary,
(*I don't read 'em.)

Don't think because I throw the best
Poetic stylus within sight,
That I am eager to contest
With Bodenheim's* or Yeats'* flight.
If you must talk, discuss my stuff,
I'll listen then, attentive, very!
But I am not, on others' guff,
The least bit literary.
(*I can't see 'em.)

Riley and Field, Twain, Kipling—praise;
And Tarkington, master of the pen;
I'm with you also if you raise
A little Dickens now and then.
But of Joe Conrad's* mess of words,
And Jurgen Cabellgrams* be chary—
I do not like to mix with birds
So golderned literary.
(*They make me sick!)

Two Delicious Fish Meals

Gorton's Codfish, Creamed

Let the fish stand in cold water, to freshen, for several hours. Then put into stew-pan with fresh water, and let come to a boil. Pour off nearly all the water, add milk, and thicken with flour to make a cream, stirring well to prevent burning. After cooking, remove from fire, stir in slowly one or two eggs well beaten, add butter. Serve with boiled or baked potatoes.

Gorton's Codfish Balls

Let codfish stand in cold water for several hours, to freshen. Then put on stove in pan of fresh water, and boil about 15 minutes. Remove, chop fish and boiled potatoes together, using one part fish to two parts potatoes. Add one egg well beaten, and form into balls. Flour lightly, and fry in hot pork fat to a nice brown.

Gorton's Codfish comes packed in one-half and one pound sanitary cartons. Practically ready to cook. No bones. No waste. No trouble to prepare. For sale by all grocers.

THE MOST WIDELY KNOWN ART ORGANIZATION IN THE WORLD

NOW TEACHES PRACTICAL COMMERCIAL ART

Now you can get practical, resultful training in Commercial Art. The Meyer Both Company, known the world over as the largest art organization in the field, is training students the practical way. Meyer Both studies are based upon 19 years of most successful experience. The Meyer Both Company pays to artists in its employ hundreds of thousands of dollars a year—among them Meyer Both trained artists earning $6,000, $8,000, $10,000 and more per year. You constantly see Meyer Both illustrations in the leading newspapers, magazines, posters, mail order catalogs and in other direct advertising all over U. S. and Canada. This training has brought success to some artists who have failed to make good after studying elsewhere.

The Meyer Both College teaches you the fundamentals of art, and more—it teaches their practical application to commercial purposes. Commercial Art is Dollar Art—practical art for practical purposes. When you take up your studies in the Meyer Both College, you get the benefits of active contact with the dominant organization in the very field you are seeking success. Who else could teach you so well and so resultfully?

The demand for commercial artists is greater every year—the shortage today is acute. It's a highly paid, intensely interesting profession. The opportunity is equally open to men and women.

Meyer Both Company conducts its school in its own name—positive evidence of thoroughness and sincerity. You can reap the benefit of its practical teaching and individual instruction without disturbing your present occupation by HOME STUDY METHOD

Send 4 cents for our special book, "YOUR OPPORTUNITY." It contains a wealth of information regarding Art in advertising and its market. It tells in pictures and figures what Meyer Both artists are doing and what you can expect to do.

Prepare Yourself FOR A Better Job

If you are determined to be more than a mere wage-earner and really want to get ahead, the way is open to you by preparing yourself for the better positions.

Industrial Opportunities Are Looking for Men who have or are training themselves for the "job higher up." The demand for men who can produce results and the necessity for men with a knowledge of factory management are growing greater every day. The requirements for men who enter this field call for a sound understanding of the fundamental principles of organization, administration, production, and the relationship between employer and employe. The man who gets the job must know the "how" and "why" of these things. Men trained in the science of factory management and the calls for men to this field are practically unlimited. It is the trained worker who succeeds. Knowledge is power, independence, influence, and a firm stepping stone to the important executive positions.

Command Large Salaries

Are You Prepared to Take Your Rightful Place in the Industrial World?

The Industrial Extension Institute provides an organized course of home study and training in factory management that is simple in its application and positive in its results. It is

The Only Course of Its Kind Ever Offered and is being used today by such organizations as the General Electric Company, National Conduit & Cable Company, General Motors Corporation, and many others throughout the United States and Europe as a means of training their men for the "bigger jobs."

If You Are Awake to the new opportunities which are open to you, a postal card will bring you detailed information as to the Factory Management Course and Service and a free 100-page booklet entitled "Thinking Beyond Your Job."

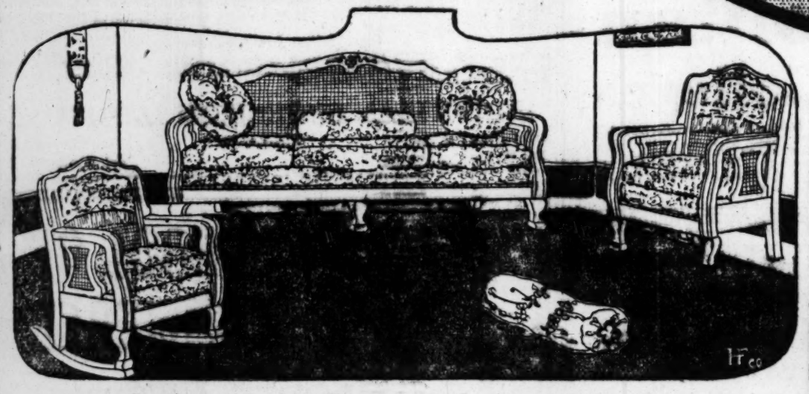
HARTMAN'S

SALE

Mid-Winter Clearance

Don't be skeptical—come to this great bargain event tomorrow and let us convince you that we are offering bargains that mean hundreds of dollars saved on complete outfits, and many an odd dollar saved on single pieces. The merchandise shown in this advertisement was purchased at prices that make it possible for us to undersell every store in Chicago—a comparison of the prices we quote with those quoted elsewhere will go a long way toward proving to you that now is the time to buy—and Hartman's surely is the place to do that buying.

All great events must come to an end—so it is with this greatest furniture sale that Chicago has ever experienced—the end is in sight—you have only a few more days in which to decide to come and save money—soon, very soon, the Mid-Winter Clearance Sale will be history. We're featuring Parlor Suites for this week—featuring them at prices that will make our readers smile with delight. We are doing this for two reasons; the first is to prove to all Chicago that we can undersell every Chicago furniture store; the second reason is to demonstrate that there is no scarcity of good furniture at Hartman's.



Our Greatest Special for Tomorrow

A parlor suite that embodies the utmost in style—a suite that is built to give years and years of satisfactory service. Mahogany finish frames with cane panels, upholstering comes in a variety of figured velours as well as art tapestry. All three pieces have the "Spring-Filled Loose Cushions" and come complete with bolster roll and pillows. At the Mid-Winter Sale Price.....

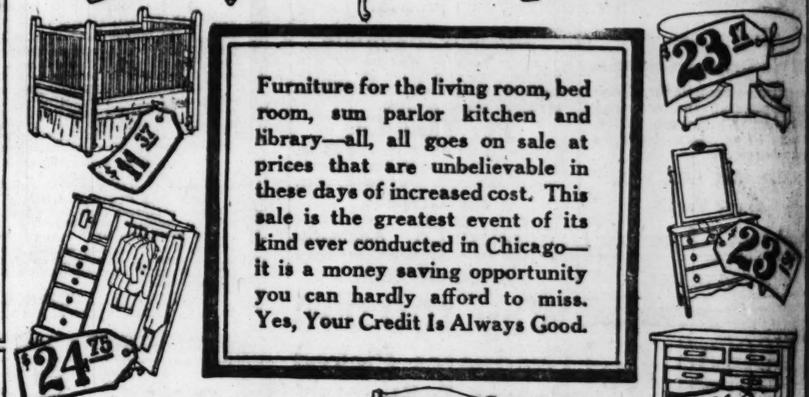
Davenport.....$142.44 Chair or Rocker.....$71.88

You Can Not Duplicate This Bargain

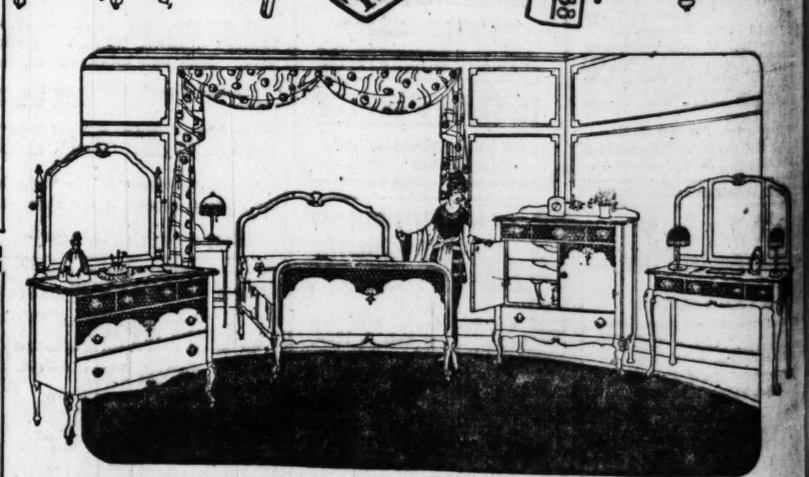
Take the picture of this suite and try to duplicate it—go anywhere in Chicago—go even to your wholesaler, and you can't duplicate it for $299.60. The frames are of mahogany with cane paneled backs and arms. The upholstering comes in a variety of rich patterns in figured velour. All three pieces have "Small-Spring filled loose cushions" and come complete with bolster roll and pillows as shown here. Buy all three pieces at Hartman's tomorrow at.....

$299.60

Davenport .....$143.36 Chair or Rocker $74.36



Furniture for the living room, bed room, sun parlor kitchen and library—all, all goes on sale at prices that are unbelievable in these days of increased cost. This sale is the greatest event of its kind ever conducted in Chicago—it is a money saving opportunity you can hardly afford to miss. Yes, Your Credit Is Always Good.



Milady's Suite De Luxe—Now Priced

Comes in dull mahogany or walnut. The darkened portion of the illustration shows the exquisite "Burl" panels on each piece—the illustration also displays the graceful lines of each article, and gives an idea of how it would appear in your home. We want to impress upon your mind the fact that here is a suite for people of discerning taste—a suite of unusually high quality, even though the price is decidedly low. All four pieces as shown go on sale at.....

Rug Bargains

Months ago we predicted a big raise in the price of Rugs—that raise has taken effect and it means that from now on you will be obliged to pay tremendously high prices for your floor coverings. However, during the Mid-Winter Clearance Sale we continue to sell rugs of the highest quality at prices greatly lower than old retail prices, so if you need rugs don't hesitate.

9x12 Foot Brussels Rugs

Perfectly matched mitered Rugs of unusually fine quality—rugs suitable for use in any room of the home, in a variety of patterns that is most gratifying. We have a limited quantity to sell at this low price, so please be here when the store opens at 8:30 a. m.

$23.85

9x12 Axminster Rugs at $49.69

Away they go—remember you'll wait for many a day to see such a low price quoted on the finest quality of Axminster rugs. Select from a variety of very desirable new patterns.

9x12 Seamless Brussels Rugs $31.67

Don't overlook the fact that these rugs are seamless, and they come in patterns that are new to this season, in color combinations that make it easy for you to follow out any color scheme.

9x12 Seamless Velvet Rugs at $44.64

For a long wearing rug—a rug that will give unlimited, satisfactory service, we recommend this bargain. Make your selection from a number of patterns that are most appealing.

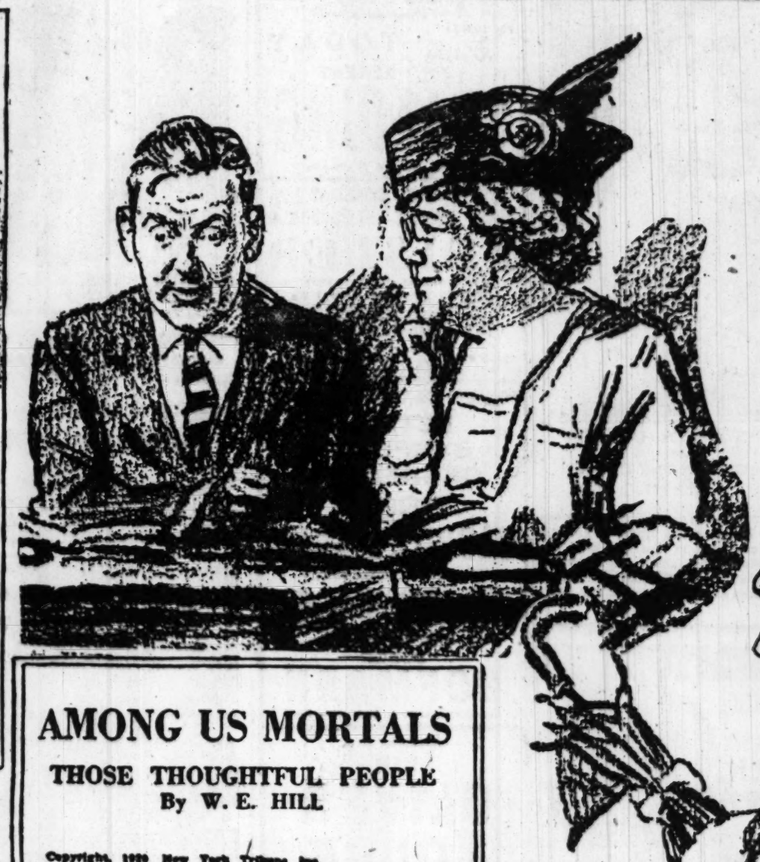
Aunt Nell is one of those good hearted people with a single track mind. Carrie has just asked her for a nickel to phone with, seeing that the coin box can't make change of itself, and Aunt Nell, minus any small change, is insisting in her efforts to be some help that Carrie accept a 50 cent piece.



The lady caller who is so thoughtful of others that she just won't hear of their stopping whatever they happen to be doing. Mrs. Wickes has just tiptoed into the study to see what dear Cousin Fred is up to. Cousin Fred is busy with a brief and Mrs. W. "won't hear" of his stopping on her account. She will sit and "peek over his shoulder and be just as quiet as a lil' mousie."

AMONG US MORTALS

THOSE THOUGHTFUL PEOPLE

By W. E. HILL

Copyright, 1920 New York Tribune Inc.

Mrs. Mudge is one of those extremely thoughtful persons who are always looking sad-eyed at one and saying "You look so tired, Bertha," or, if it's a man, asking if you haven't been working too hard lately. "Remember," she will add, "all work and no play——" Mrs. Mudge is here shown urging her hostess to go upstairs and climb right into bed. "I know your guests will excuse you!"

The man who is so thoughtful of everybody's comfort but his own that he is never happy in any but the most difficult chair in the room. Behold him in baby's high chair! "Yes, indeed," he will tell you, "I like a hard, narrow chair!"

The thoughtful lady who insists at the slightest indication of rain that you borrow rubbers, raincoat, and the umbrella "that is so old you needn't return it." She won't hear of your going without the rubbers, anyway!

The man who is always helping you on with your coat. Usually, after pawing in the air in hopes of finding the sleeve, it is discovered that he has the coat upside down or wrong side out.

Miss Zimm's one thought is to put one at one's ease. If you try her out on a funny story, long before the point is reached she will be so awfully appreciative that you will be drowned out in little shrieks of "Not really!" "Oh, my dear!" "Oh, you don't mean it!" And she will begin laughing long before you reach the point, which is apt to make one a bit worried lest you may have said something you shouldn't.

Mr. Babg, the super-optimist, who is always "cheering people up." The most awful things may happen to one — and the worse they are the stronger this male Pollyanna will come back at you with "Oh, you mustn't mind a little thing like that —think how much worse off," etc., etc.

Joe is so thoughtful of old people! He is always helping strange elderly ladies over curbs. Most of the ladies don't feel a bit elderly, and fail to appreciate Joe's chivalry.

Cousin Belle is forever thinking up something to add to other people's happiness. Something she makes with her own hands is what Uncle Roland will value most as a birthday gift. Cousin Belle is making him a little flowered cretonne bag to carry soap to and from the bathroom.

THE THEATERS

By Percy Hammond

AFTER the cold and selfish British legislator in "Tiger! Tiger!" succumbs to the cosmic urge through Sally, the skillet-nymph, he embalms their carnal association in the luscious amber of poesy. Here are the lines he addresses to her as she sits, happy and mystified at his feet, in the second act:

We met a night of wind—
The mad, March weather
Blew our hearts together,
And if we sinned—we sinned as doth the spring
When striding o'er the fields
To whom the yearning earth her beauty yields.

Now floods the ripened moon, our moment's over;
Now Love, the drunken rover,
Flings off his cap too soon.
Till silence and the veiled eyes of sleep
Make foam-born magic once more from the deep.

A poet to the end, he sends to her the following rhymed reflections, written from a dying soldier's pallet, somewhere in the theater's battlefields:

I know but this: that far beyond the strife
Of mortal passion looms another life,
Where slavish might fades evermore away
Before the freedom of an undreamt day.
There shall we meet again; no earthborn lie
To set the union of our souls awry,
There shall the true in us flame on as one
Eternally in Love's immortal Sun.

ONE of Dean Linn's "promising pupils" at the University has examined Mr. Knoblock's "Tiger, Tiger" with the fretful scrutiny of the serious, though intelligent, undergraduate, and he wishes to know if it would be presumptuous for him to suggest an amendment to the story of the play.

His bright idea is that the piece might be made popular and almost as good as it is at present, were the proud and radical Mr. Knoblock to pay some attention to the old-time rules. He thinks that the tale, though rather perfect otherwise, suffers from an absence of the traditional "conflict"—that throughout it is a languorous surrender with not enough combat in it to reach from the stage to the box office. One of his observations, by the way, is a contribution to the economics of the theater. "A play is a failure," he says, "if they don't go to see it twice."

This timid crocus suggests that there is in "Tiger, Tiger" a good chance for battle. Clive Couper, scrupulous and superior M. P., is fond of, but not in love with, Evelyn Greer, the handsome and attractive daughter of an old and sentimental friend. She is the tinder, he the flint, yet there is no spark. Couper lolls under the influence of a bust of Somnus which dominates his mantelpiece, and he dawdles on the edge of things, comfortable and chill, a ripe Camembert meaning as much in his life as a pretty woman. He is a salamander, and passion's fiery raptures are but tapers to his impervious cuticle.

But from the forest of the night springs the Tiger, burning bright, in the fearful symmetry of Miss Frances Starr feigning the inscrutable allurements of the flesh. Out of the Apocalypse she comes, a strange and a gentle beast, her main redolent of potages and the Brussels sprout. She is merely a cook-woman, but she is presumed to have, in the words of Mr. Jolson, "that something." Mr. Couper takes her in his arms and causes her to be his own.

Here is where Mr. Linn's pupil would insert the conflict. Sally, the Tiger, is hid in the kitchen, against the coming of Miss Greer for supper in Mr. Couper's apartment. Miss Greer's feeble father has gone to the piano in another room, and they talk of marriage. The music stops, while Miss Greer and Couper are at table, and she says, "Something has happened!" and hurries into the other room.

Now, says the young critic, is the place for the wallop. If she would come back and say, "He is dead, and what am I to do?" Clive Couper would have a struggle. He is in love with the flesh of Sally, who is hid in the kitchen, but he recalls his promise to Evelyn's father always to care for her. Which shall it be, duty and a lovely girl, or passion and a cook-lady? But Miss Greer, according to Mr. Knoblock's story, returns, saying that her parent is convalescent, and they go away leaving Couper to bask and drift, his spars up, and with no contradicting winds to blow against them.

It is, of course, presumptuous to suggest a change in a play; and it is equally as futile; for no dramatist or no actor, so far as I know, has ever taken the advice of an audience, after the first performance. They know their business better than we do, and—hence the large crowds, paying large prices for all the current exhibitions upon the stage.

The play, they say, was written in "the trenches," though, of course, it was not. In a rest area, perhaps, it was composed where Mr. Knoblock, fed up with conflict, omitted that quality from his composition. At Powers' it is well performed. Of Miss Starr's art I am not qualified to speak, because I do not understand it. But Mr. Knoblock's distinguished lines are spoken with distinction by Mr. Atwill, Miss Mary Moore, and Mr. Lloyd, and his characters, I suspect, are well interpreted by them. Mr. Belasco's background is a marvel in the art of accuracy, and he gives us rooms that fit the people who inhabit them, and even doors through which the characters come and go, rather than enter and exit.

In a letter to America Mr. Barrie traces a greater symbol in "Dear Brutus" than that commonly found among its persuasive emblems. He says that if he were ever to appear in public he would be content if the first and only speech of his life was on the passionate desire of his heart—a closer friendship between America and Britain. He would, he says, make his speech from under the table—Lob's favorite position in "Dear Brutus"—and he would voice his longing for an international amity knit by wisdom and experience, thus:

The play of "Dear Brutus" is an allegory about a gentleman called John Bull who years and years ago missed the opportunity of his life (like Bacon when he did not write Shakespear). The Mr. Dearth of the play is really John Bull—as Mr. Gillette cunningly indicates by his figure. Margaret, the Might Have Been, is really America. The play shows how on the fields of France this father and daughter get a second opportunity of coming together; and the nightingale is George Washington asking them to do it on his birthday. Are the two now to make up permanently, or forever drift apart? Second chances come to few, and as for a third chance, whoever heard of it? It is now or never. If it is now something will have been accomplished greater than the war itself: democracy will have sown its noblest seed, the fruit whereof America was created to give forth, that every child born into the world should have an equal chance. The future of mankind is listening for our decision: if we cannot rise to the second chance, ours will be the blame, but the sorrow will be posterity's. We shall have to say sadly enough:

"The fault, dear Jonathan, is not in our stars
But in ourselves, that we are underlings."

Richard Harding Davis' "The Dictator," has been turned into a libretto by Frank Craven, and, with music by Silvio Hein, it will be produced by Charles Dillingham.

They say that George White's net winnings from "The Scandals of 1919" are upwards of $200,000 this season, and that he plans to invest much of them in "The Scandals of 1920."

The Frohman company desires Miss Marjorie Rambeau to act Robert Hichens' "The Voice from the Minaret," which Miss Marie Lohr is playing in London. Miss Rambeau and A. H. Woods, her manager, disagreed not long ago concerning his plan to send her on tour in "The Unknown Woman," but she has surrendered, and may be expected in Chicago before long.

John Golden announces the premiere of his "Howdy, Folks!" a comedy of "faith, feuds, and fun," in Indianapolis on March 1. Thence it will come to the Olympic theater for an indefinite run.

James K. Hackett announces a production of "Cyrano de Bergerac" next spring with himself in the leading rôle. The enterprise is made possible by arrangement with Mrs. Samuel Eberley Gross, widow of the author of "The Merchant Prince of Cornville."

Miss Alexandra Carlisle is to return to the stage next month in John Masefield's "The Tragedy of Nan," in which she will be associated with Philip Merivale, Miss Beatrice Noyes, and John Harwood.

Fritz Kreisler's prodigious intake as composer of "Apple Blossoms" inspires another fiddler, Mischa Elman, to write the music of an opera. Title, librettist, and producer are as yet a secret.

"Jacques Duval," so the theatrical newspapers say, is deemed not good enough for George Arliss' appearance in New York, and it will be discarded for "Poldekin," a new play by Booth Tarkington.

"Twelfth Night" will be the opening play in the Sothern-Marlowe engagement at the Studebaker, beginning Feb. 18. "Hamlet" will be given on Tuesday night, and "The Taming of the Shrew" on Wednesday. Among the players in the Sothern-Marlowe support are Frederick Lewis, Roland Buckstone, Henry Stanford, Malcolm Bradford, Miss Alma Kruger, Miss Leonore Chippendale, and Miss Ursula Faucit.

While the Greenwich Village Follies is on tour Miss Bessie McCoy will remain stationary in New York, save for the dancing on Mr. Gest's Century roof. When, and if, the Greenwich Villagers reach Chicago, Miss McCoy's place will be taken by Miss Frances White, who made so much news not long ago while performing occasionally at the La Salle.

Miss Rita Weiman, author of "The Acquittal," confides to the New York pressmen that the famous Molineux murder mystery was the genesis of her play. After Molineux was acquitted Miss Weiman tried to interrogate Mrs. Molineux for a newspaper, but failing, she imagined an interview and made a short story, a one act play, a novel and a drama out of it.

A Good One from Harvard

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Dear old Hahvahd figures again in the drama of the day. Rachel Barton Butler's "Mamma's Affair," selected by a group of experts as the best of the plays submitted in Oliver Morosco's recent contest, is a reviewer's hit at the Little theater, and the public is threatening to indorse the writers' judgment. The author is a student of the drama, studying with Prof. Baker's "English 47" group.

"Mamma's Affair" is a brightly written comedy, with farcical leanings, which makes sport of those dear, exasperating ladies who "enjoy poor health" at the expense of their devoted families; the neurasthenic sisterhood with whom symptom analysis becomes a passion; whose subconscious minds are weighted with Freudian complexes, and their pathetic pessimism the despair of their intimates.

The mamma of this play has driven her frail daughter to the breaking point by sapping her dry of both energy and sympathy, and all in the sweetest, most affectionate, and most considerate manner. Finally she has decided that daughter shall marry the son of her best friend, forced the engagement, and brought the young people to her old home that their wedding there may be a crowning climax of sentimentalism. At which point daughter's nerves snap, she has an attack of hysteria, and a doctor native to the place is called.

This young man, knowing little of the practices of the fashionable physicians who have been attending mamma for years, immediately and correctly diagnoses the situation. He separates mamma from her too sympathetic child, prescribes a diet of fresh air, sunshine, and wholesome food for the girl, gives mother her demanded sugar pills (she is happy so long as there is "something to take"), and effects the expected cure. In six weeks daughter is a normal girl again—and in love with her physician. He is twice her age, however, and balks at the thought of being called a "cradle snatcher." He overcomes this touch of vanity, when there is real danger of his losing the girl, and the conclusion is in line with its foreshadowing.

The dialogue is unusually good, the satiric shafts skillfully aimed and firmly cast, and the characters true, though somewhat extravagantly emphasized for the good of the comedy. Effie Shannon, playing mamma; Ida St. Leon as the devoted daughter, and Robert Edeson as the sane physician, have each scored individually, especially Miss St. Leon, who adds one more to the constantly lengthening list of charming and capable ingenues. There has been a perfect flock of them this year. Katherine Kaelred, Amelia Bingham, and Gorge La Guerre assist. Amelia trussed up like a Christmas turkey, but in good comedy fettle.

The serious production of the week was that of Tolstoi's "The Power of Darkness," written some twenty years ago and now finding its way to the local stage for the first time in English through the agency of the Theater guild. It is not a cheerful work, as might reasonably be surmised. The "sin that fastens on sin" is its dramatic base, and "if a claw is caught, the bird is lost," a subtitle. But it is a work of art, by the standards of those who believe they know art, and a powerful sample of dramatic writing for those who confess they are not sure whether they do or not; an impressively depressing drama.

Written originally in five acts, with enough dialogue and action to occupy the time of a numerous company for five or six hours, it has been shortened to three acts and four scenes by the guild. Through these three acts the voice of Tolstoi is the voice of "Daddy" Akim, a muddle-headed but honest old man who thunders his warnings to a sinful people that God alone can save them, and that either they must give heed to God's way of doing things, or suffer the consequences.

His young son, the handsome Nikita, loved of the ladies and frequently filled with vodka and the joy of life, does not think much of his father's advice; as a result of which he connives at the murder of an old man whose wife and money he covets. With this sin to build upon, he forsakes the girl he has seduced, marries the dead man's widow, and deserts her in turn for his stepdaughter. Then, to make a good job of it, he lends a hand in the smothering of the stepdaughter's infant son, of which he is the father, and is contemplating the advantages of suicide when "Daddy" Akim's voice reaches him and he confesses his sins. The play leaves him with his soul purged, though the hand of the law is upon his shoulder.

It is a drama that may freely be recommended to those newer citizens who are now flirting with deportation. It might do them a world of good to ponder the conditions, the ignorance and poverty, the filth and the gloom of that phase of Russian life which was its inspiration. As a production, it reflects great credit upon the Theater guild. Emantiel Reicher directed the staging, and Frank Reicher, his son, plays Akim with impressive force. The outstanding performances include also those of Helen Westley, Arthur Hohl, Ida Rauh, and Erskine Sanford.

MISS MARY MOORE
in "TIGER! TIGER!" at POWERS'

Miss Moore, who impersonates Evelyn Greer in "Tiger! Tiger!" is an American woman with but four years' experience in the theater. Most of her drama adventures have been in the film studios—with Mary Pickford in "Less Than Dust" and "Pride of the Clan,"—with E. H. Sothern in "The City of Mystery" and in plays with Mrs. Castle and Molly King. David Belasco discovered her discoursing for a Liberty loan, and engaged her for Miss Starr's play. "Cast your bread upon the waters," says Miss Moore, "and it will return—cake!"

Miss Hackett is the pretty murderess in "A Voice in the Dark." Though she is captured in the last act, the ending is happy, since the audience knows that she is good-looking enough to convince any male jury of her innocence.

WHY PICTURES ARE BETTER.

By Mae Tinée.

I WONDER if you've realized that the reason—one reason—there are so many better pictures nowadays than there used to be is that we're having so many all star casts?

There was a time, you know—and it isn't entirely past yet—when all the producers, directors, or stars thought about was the star. Get somebody with a name. Give her all the clothes, all the scenes, all the publicity, and let everything else tag along as best it might.

There were a few people big enough to get a picture across because of their personality. Not many, however. And gradually the movie people have seen the light. They realize that audiences want a realistic lady in the kitchen just as much as they want a realistic lady in the drawing room or boudoir. They realize that audiences know quite well that the heroine's sister should logically wear much the same sort of clothes as does the heroine. And that audiences get tired and sick of seeing important characters in a story shoved any old place in order that a spotlight may rest unflaggingly on the beautiful brown or golden or russet head of the heroine.

So we're getting better pictures. We have good reliable actors in minor roles—men and women who know life and do things as they should be done—many times making a success of a photoplay that, left to the star, would have surely been a fizzle. Am I right?

You who maintain an attitude of cynicism on the subject of moving pictures may have a change of heart when you hear that Maurice Maeterlinck declares motion pictures to be America's most original and significant contribution to art. "Americans do not esteem the really great art of the movies," he said. "I find that artists here look down upon the moving picture theater. They regard it as raw and inferior. I do not think so. I thing that the moving picture is a great and truly artistic means of interpreting life. It expresses the life of all the people. Some of the movie actors are great artists. Of all the cinemas I have seen the American are incomparably the best. They are enormously superior to Italian or French movies. In technique, in mechanical equipment, American producers are far ahead. In this respect there is really no comparison between American and European pictures."

You'll say they're good to the school children in Chillicothe, O., when I tell you that they dismissed the schools early on the first day "Huckleberry Finn" was shown in the town so that the youngsters might attend a matinée performance of the picture.

"Why Change Your Wife" will be Cecil De Mille's next picture for Paramount. A great little change artist, Mr. De Mille!

Universal was put to considerable expense and the trouble of taking over again several scenes of a picture just because Wallace Beery forgot to take off his shoes. His excuse was that he hadn't been raised in a mosque, so how was he to know? Which did, of course, put it pretty much up to the director.

Remember Lewis Stone? He's coming back to the screen in a Marshall Neilan picturization of the story by James Oliver Curwood, "The River's End."

The press agent says that "Douglas Fairbanks and his big malamute, Rex, fought off a pack of a dozen coyotes that they encountered during a walk on the mountainside in southern California. The coyotes fled, leaving three of their number dead in the arena." As a nature note this is something to take note of. As a rule coyotes frequent plains and not mountains and are known to be the most cowardly animals there are. The coyotes attacking Mr. Fairbanks must have been some peculiar breed of super-coyote and somebody ought to capture one and put it in a zoo. Capture it alive, of course. Dead, it would probably act like any other coyote.

Zazu Pitts has taken up the study of monkeys. [I dunno.]

If you're sort of keeping an eye on Harrison Ford you will be interested to know that he is soon to be seen in "The Young Mrs. Winthrop," with Ethel Clayton.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

CHOP STICKS: Sorry you've had to wait so long, Chop Sticks. Your letters must have been lost in transit. The last I heard of Alice Hollister she was with Famous Players, 485 Fifth avenue, New York. The last pictures in which Vola Vale appeared were Ince-Artcraft productions. Write to Sessue Hayakawa, care of the Haworth company, Brunton studios, Hollywood, Cal. I have no other address for the Chinese actress than the Goldwyn studios. Sorry.

CINEMA JANE: If you think I look like Edna Purviance you should see me. Such a shock as you would have! Ruth Roland is not married to Henry King. You like Frank Mayo's dimples, do you? If he's married he hasn't told me about it. If you will address Priscilla Dean in care of the Universal company, Universal City, Cal., she will receive your letter. I think Cinema Jane is just as good a name as Beefsteak Ann.

M. B.: The author wrote and said she'd "used me." I assure you, however, that I am not the author.

AMELIA M.: Address Mae Tinée of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE as follows: Mae Tinée, care of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago. (Going to write a boost or a knock?)

L.: Good reason why you joined the drys—and you can't make me believe that I was it.

READER: No, I wouldn't be so commonplace! It was just a cold. Glad you missed me. That's worth getting sick for.

MAXINE K.: Maybe some time we'll reprint the photograph you mention, though I rather doubt it. Both Miss Sweet and Clara Kimball Young have smiled at you from the rotogravure section. Too bad you missed the papers.

J. N. D.: If you don't know what to write about to the man I'm afraid I can't tell you. You might ask him who he is and what he does—since you say you don't know. Usually the ladies who send epistles to the movie stars are quite well informed as to who they are and what they do. One usually mails a letter after it is written, I believe.

A. VIATOR: I was in Columbus once. Just between trains. I'd love to see the house with the organ! Tom Forman is back in pictures, Paramount. Write again some time.

MARY G.: Write to Douglas MacLean in care of Ince, Culver City, Cal. Y'wekkum.

Colleen Moore, the cunning youngster, will play opposite Sessue Hayakawa in his coming release, "The Bleeder."

SLAMS OF LIFE By J. P. McEvoy.

OUIJA, LIL' OUIJA.

Ouija, lil' Ouija,
Is it true them spirits needja,
All them spirits what has went to yonder shore?
Are you friendly with such geezers
As the Scipios and Cæsars—
You, who look just like a lil' hunk of floor?

Do you pal with Jessie Jimmie,
Do you do a psychic pshimmy
With Napoleon and Brian Boru and Saul?
Do you share across the Jordan
An amorphous room and boardin'
With Demosthenes, Virginia, and Paul?

Ouija, lil' Ouija,
Shall I not or shall I feedja
To the hot and hungry furnace in my home?
Is there food for rumination
In your sly equivocation—
Ah, an inspiration permeates my dome.

Words with Thomas I desire,
Likewise words with Jeremiah;
And I'd speak with old Jim Crowe and Hennessey.
Let them spirits dear departed
Speak to me or you'll be carted
To the furnace where I feel you ought to be.

AN HOUR HAS ELAPSED.

Rumor of Opera Combine Bobs Up Again in New York

By W. L. Hubbard.

MRS. FANNIE BLOOMFIELD ZEISLER

She has been absent from the concert stage for many months, but accomplishes her reëntrance next Tuesday evening in Orchestra hall, when she will be assisted by the complete Chicago orchestra under the direction of Mr. Stock and will play three piano concertos.

THE frisky, healthy old rumor as to the impending re-approachment and coalition of the Metropolitan and the Chicago Opera companies has bobbed up again. It is due just about the present time, when the Chicago company visits New York. Telegraphic reports of Mr. Harold McCormick being seen in "earnest consultation" with this impressario and that manager and "advising" with this agent and the other artist have been industriously sent Chicago-wards. But like all such reports they almost invariably emanate from the impressario, manager, agent, or artist who is especially and personally interested in getting the dear public to think that Chicago is crying aloud for his or her services.

Mr. McCormick and the Chicago Opera association have had experiences with the New York operatic forces which are not likely soon to be forgotten, and it is safe to believe that the time is far distant when there will be any combining of managements of the Metropolitan and the Auditorium, or any "business arrangements" entered into which will result in making the Chicago institution a more or less negligible tail to the New York kite. There is no wish, to say nothing of need, of having Mr. Gatti-Casazza direct the destinies of the Chicago organization, even though it be suggested that the astute and skilled Henry Russell would be willing to become his personal representative here. Mr. Russell's record as opera destroyer, in Boston is too sufficiently and generally known, to make his connection in any way with our home organization desirable.

Chicago may rest safe in the thought that Mr. McCormick has no wish and entertains no thought of again putting the Chicago Opera association under the domination in any way of Mr. Otto Kahn or any of his favorites or any Metropolitan managers. The farther Chicago keeps from the eastern organization, and the sooner it puts all thought of aping it and its ways out of mind the better.

There is only one way in which the Metropolitan and the Chicago companies might safely and with advantage to opera in this country coöperate and combine. That would be in the matter of translated librettos. The Metropolitan has commissioned Henry Krehbiel, the eminent New York critic, to prepare an English version of "Parsifal," which is to be used at the Metropolitan this spring. It is understood that Mr. Krehbiel is also at work on a version of "Tristan and Isolde." What these versions will be and how satisfactory they may prove is of course as yet unknown, but it is reasonable to suppose that they will be good.

However decisive Mr. Krehbiel may have been up to the period of the war in his opposition to all translation of opera or song into English and to most things American in music, he nevertheless is an excellent musician and linguist, is a painstaking worker, and now that he is converted more or less willingly to the advisability of having German opera done in English, he undoubtedly will give of his best.

Should these translations and any others which the Metropolitan company may order, prove adequate, they should be stamped at once with the approval of the eastern house, and be made the authorized and official English translations of these especial works. The Chicago company and every other opera company in the United States, in Canada, and in England, should be not alone permitted, but induced to accept and use them, and thus standardize the version. By this arrangement the artist who wishes to learn rôles in English, will know what translation is standard, and what he must study in order to be acceptable in those houses where opera in the vernacular is used.

By agreement or arrangement between the Metropolitan, the Chicago, and the Covent Garden managements a standardization of translations easily could be brought about which would be of distinct and lasting value to each of the organizations and to the artists and students throughout the world. The agreement could also include the giving of advance information as to what operas were being translated for each company, and thus duplication could be avoided, and at the same time accomplishment of a great and important task expedited.

Here is a way in which the Chicago company can with safety and profit "combine" with the Metropolitan. It can by doing its part in the securing of adequate translations and stamping them with its official approval retain its place as one of the important and independent operatic organizations of the country and at the same time share the good work done by the Metropolitan and the English companies.

The chief objection raised by opponents of foreign opera and song being sung in our vernacular is that the English translations are bad. That they do not faithfully convey the foreign idea, and that they are unsingable. Be it admitted at once that both of these divisions of the one objection are well founded in fact. They present the main obstacle to the use of English, but the obstacle is not unsurmountable. Desire coupled with the proper skill could produce translations which would avoid both of these difficulties. It has been done in other languages; it can be done in English.

The trouble heretofore has been that English translations have usually been made by men or women who, while they may have been competent linguists, were not musicians and therefore did not know how to meet the musical needs which this particular kind of translation work imposes. In continental European countries the translators of operas and songs have in the majority of instances been men or women who were able not only faithfully to transfer into their vernacular the ideas and fine shades of meaning of the foreign author, but also saw to it that the words they used were the singable ones of their language and were so arranged that the musical phrase to which the words were set was not broken or distorted. The results are German versions of French or Italian operas that are true to the original and entirely singable, and French or Italian versions of German works that are similarly satisfactory and usable.

There are men and women in the United States wholly capable of accomplishing the same transformation of the foreign operas and songs into English, if they be but induced to undertake the task and if there be created a demand for such translations. So long as publishers feel their patrons will be content with any kind of gibberish printed under the foreign text in publications, just so long will they hire literary hacks to make the translations and shove the hopeless stuff into print. But when the public asks for correct and better product, the correct and better product will be forthcoming.

What constitutes an adequate and usable translation of opera or song? Three factors enter in. The sense of the original must be conveyed, the words must fit the music, the words must be singable. As to conveying the sense, this may be secured either by virtually literal translation or by paraphrase. The more nearly literal the English version can be the better it is apt to prove.

The preserving of rhyme unless the line be short and the rhyming markedly evident can if desirable be sacrificed. It in the majority of instances is the most negligible of all the literary quantities involved. The rhythm is of true importance, however, since the music phrase springs from text, and only by securing similarity of accent and of length of line can the English words be made to fit the music. Rhythmic prose is in many cases fully as effective and acceptable as rhymed poetry would be.

The words, however, may fit the music and yet be unsatisfactory. For the words have to be sung, and in the adjusting of the word to the tone lies the difficult and fine part of the translator's work.

He must recognize that certain vowels can be sung with ease on tones within certain ranges in the voice, but not on tones within ranges higher or lower. He will, therefore, not put words containing unfavoring vowels on tones where they can with difficulty to the singer be used. He will also realize that different voices—tenor, soprano, contralto, or bass—have their own peculiarities as regards vowel values. That a tenor, for example, can sing certain vowels on a high tone which a bass can handle only with difficulty. The words, therefore, must be chosen and arranged according not only to the tones but to the voice that is to sing them. And yet all obscuring and distorting of the sense of the original must be avoided. Words, too, with as few consonants between syllables as possible will be preferred, thus bringing the English as near as can be to the Italian in predominance of vowel values.

It will be seen that the task is not a light one and that only by constant reference to the musical phrase itself can satisfying translation be made. But the task is not impossible, and when a text thus involved has been brought into being it will be found that not an accent of the musical phrase is disturbed and that the singer is as comfortable in his using of the English words as he is of the Italian, the French, or the German. It is for this standard of translation that demand must now be made, and nothing less should be accepted by singers or by our opera managements. If such demand be made and insisted upon publishers will soon respond, and the adequate and usable transformation of foreign song and opera into our vernacular will become an accomplished fact.

The first assembling of the Students' orchestra for rehearsal last Tuesday afternoon in Orchestra hall was cause for sincere and unqualified satisfaction. The Civic Music association issued some weeks ago call for registry of all students who wished to become members of a symphony orchestra, meeting for regular rehearsal under leadership of Mr. Stock or Mr. De Lamarter, and later playing in public wherever and whenever desired. The response for such registration was liberal, the young applicants were examined by the leaders, and last Tuesday eighty-six players had been enrolled, some sixty-five of whom reported for first rehearsal. Thirteen of these sixty-five were women.

After informing them as to their duties—the obligation to rehearse two hours the first four days in every week, to attend all rehearsals, to be ready to play in public whenever called upon, and to submit to regular orchestral rules and routine—Mr. Stock put the young musicians to performance. Portions of the Fifth Symphony of Tschaikowsky, two movements of the first "Peer Gynt" suite of Grieg, the Adagio Pathetic of Godard, and the "Queen of Sheba" march were played in course of the two hours, and remarkable and surprising results were obtained.

Every section of the symphony orchestra was represented, with single exception of the bassoons. Two bassoons and three more horns are wanted, and then the orchestral forces will be complete.

That such material should be available here in Chicago, and is now for the first time to be utilized and actually trained for future symphonic work, is as astonishing as it is gratifying. The movement is the most important and most vital that the Chicago Orchestral association has undertaken.

It means the utilizing of our own material, the training in actual orchestral routine and work of our young talent, the encouraging of the study of orchestral instruments, and the ultimate supplying of new and skilled material to our orchestras throughout the United States. It means the Americanization of the symphony orchestras of our country, and it means incidentally the having of an organization here in Chicago which in a few weeks will be able to give concerts in outlying towns and in different sections of the city—concerts of musical worth and of true educative value.

MISS VIOLET KEMBLE COOPER
IN BARRIE'S "DEAR BRUTUS" AT THE ILLINOIS

Concerts and Recitals

Guiomar Novaes, the Brazilian pianist, will appear in recital this afternoon at 3:30 in Kimball hall. She has arranged a program including the Handel-Brams Variations, the Liszt B minor Sonata, the Evocation, Seguedilla, and Triana of Albeniz, a Nocturne, two Mazurkas, and a Scherzo of Chopin, and the Moskowski "La Jongleuse."

The last concert in the Flonzaley quartet series in the Blackstone theater will take place this afternoon commencing at 3:30. The program consists of the Beethoven Quartet in F Major, opus 135; the Andante Sostenuto and the Moderato Assai from the A minor Quartet by Felix Borowski, and the Dvorak American Quartet, opus 96.

Albert Spalding, violinist, will be the recitalist in Orchestra hall this afternoon commencing at 3:30. He will play the Handel D major Sonata, the Prelude, Loure, and Gavotte from Bach's Sixth Sonata for violin alone, Bruch's Scotch Fantasy, the Perosi Theme and Variations, the Chabrier-Loeffler Scherzo-Valse, his own Caprice "Castles in Spain," and the Paganini "Campanella."

Mrs. Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler will accomplish her feturn to the concert platform next Tuesday evening when, assisted by the Chicago orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Stock she will play three concertos for piano—the Mozart C minor, the Chopin F minor, and the Tschaikowski B-flat minor.

Monica Graham Stults, soprano, announces a song recital in Kimball hall for next Wednesday evening.

The next concert in the series at Medinah temple will take place next Thursday evening and will enlist the services of two singers high in popular favor, Florence Macbeth and Lucy Gaveure. Miss Macbeth will sing the Shadow Song from "Dinorah," two Handel selections, a folk song by Wekerlin, "Tes Yeux" of Rabey, Vidal's Ariette, and a group of American and English songs. Mr. Graveure will be heard in six Magyar folk songs, arranged by Korbay, three French songs, the Prologue to "Pagliacci," Elgar's "Pleading," Foster's "My Menagerie," Treharne's "Corals," and the Cadman-Taylor "Five and Twenty Sailormen."

Clarence Loomis, composer-pianist, is to be heard in his annual recital in Kimball hall next Thursday evening.

The Edison Symphony orchestra, under leadership of Morgan L. Eastman and with Giordana Pellonari tenor soloist, will give its fifth concert in Orchestra hall next Thursday evening.

Mabel Garrison, coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera house, will be soloist with the Chicago orchestra next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening in Orchestra hall. She will sing the "Queen of Night" aria from Mozart's "Magic Flute" and the "Bell Song" from "Lakme." The orchestral selections are Bach's Concerto No. 2 in F major, Schmitt's "The Tragedy of Salome" Suite, and the Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn.

Kingly Shirts Dare to be Different

Appreciated by Young Men

Kingly Prep Shirts

Well built young men in high school and college appreciate the comfort and style of shirts designed especially for them.

Formerly all shirts were made for older men—on the settled lines of the average man. Kingly Preps are for youthful figures. Smaller at the waist and cuffs; more snug in the yoke and chest; roomier at the elbow for free movement. Young men's smart coats fit smoothly over Kingly Preps.

The Kingly Line

Kingly shirts for men, Kingly Preps for young men, Kingly Yuthbuilts for boys—all show specialization and the improvements that specialization produces. Kingly shirts are refreshingly new and different. They are originated by artists. They show the modern spirit—its dash, its daring—its cultured refinement! Kingly shirts improve men's looks—they flatter their wearers.

ART

Pleasing Pictures in Exhibition of Chicago Artists

By Eleanor Jewett.

There is a forest glade I might have trod—
Had I but known—
But Fate, the tricky maid, flitted her scarf,
Left me alone
To make, as best I could,
My own path round the magic of the wood.

Trees there grow tall and purple shadows cast
On the smooth ground.
Flowers born of moonbeams by the night forgot
May there be found.
And through the wind that sings
Weaves the warm melody of fairy wings.

Yet all I missed, because I did not know,
Or having known, forgot—
Blind that I was, and dumb, to leave to Fate
The search of such a spot.
Be thou in turn more clever—
Seek out the wood and leave its wonder never.

"The Break in the Fence," by Jessie Arms Botke, in the Chicago artists' exhibition at the Art institute.

THE twenty-fourth annual exhibition of works by artists of Chicago and vicinity opened last Thursday afternoon in the east wing of the Art institute. To those of us who may occasionally be attacked by doubts of the reality of either beauty or art in Chicago, the pictures will bring relief. There is to be found in this exhibition much that is charming, much that is lovely, much that is pleasing. Dissatisfaction will only be expressed by those who look for a new sensation, a stirring of a fresh emotion, or such cataleptic shock as the impressionists and futurists were wont to spring upon us.

Fortunately lovers of cubism are rare, and never more rare than today, when the real commotions of the world war have forced minor mental disturbances into a not too early retreat. The exotic yearning for effect, the prismatic searching for weird tone, has been shuffled into the discard. The present passes too swiftly to waste one golden minute in endeavoring to pierce cryptic messages writ in paint. The clear crystal call of simple things, simply expressed, is that to which we listen most eagerly now.

In the current exhibit at the institute it is this call which is heard. The paintings form a group of intensely pleasant pictures. Warmth, bright color and joy rule. Perhaps it is for this reason that an ordinary criticism is a trifle difficult. Any striking of an innocent bystander must be repugnant to a sportsman, in cold blood. Though a bit exaggerated, it is with something of the same spirit that I, sure of myself, regard these canvases. They are, most of them, innocent bystanders, offending neither taste nor tradition. And, in many cases, they uphold the best traditions and exemplify the best taste in painting, though I must still lay claim to the feeling, and that feeling a strong one, that there is no one dominant note struck in the entire exhibit. No one canvas stands out. No one picture will admit of a finger pointed at it with the words, "There—that is great." Greatness does lack, but we can enjoy ourselves immensely among these pictures, notwithstanding.

One of the loveliest paintings is that to which the verse at the beginning of this discussion refers, "A Forest of Eucalyptus," by Cornelius Botke. It is a magic wood, a California version of the English fairy forest of shining beech seen in "Dear Brutus," where tall, straight trees stretch up from a velvet sward darkened and outlined with witchcraft plants, beautiful with flowers. In the attention to detail, particularly of the petals, one surmises a trace of the influence of Mrs. Botke.

Mrs. Botke, or more familiarly, Jessie Arms Botke, is represented by four paintings in the style which lovers of her work have come to recognize instantly as hers. They deal with birds, mostly, and flowers as accessories after the fact. The proudest, most disdainful fowl undoubtedly is the gander in "The Break in the Fence." The scorn of such material limitations as boards imply shines from his red eye and fairly thrusts itself at you with each full swelling of his spotless chest.

Possibly the most beautiful painting is "Banks of the Gasconade," by Carl R. Krafft. Yet I heard the criticism, and give it for what it is worth, that the picture is too photographic. It is true that the perfection of the landscape does hint of the camera. But no camera ever made could capture the color or the marvel of the purplish haze with enfolds these hills and woods.

Paul Bartlett shows five pictures. "Janice" is a gay little girl. "The Harbor at Noon," "Grizzly Day," and "Idle Boats" lead one to think that last summer may have been spent on the coast. Particularly does "Drizzly Day" remind me of some place or event which will persist in dancing at the frontier of memory, but refuses nearer approach. It shows a town, a fishing town, on the harbor front, dingy, comfortless, real, in the dull drip of one of those monotonous rains that now and then the Atlantic coast can so easily supply.

The prize awards are as follows:

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal, carrying with it the sum of $500, to Paul Bartlett for his painting, "Drizzly Day."

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal, carrying with it the sum of $200, to Carl R. Krafft for his painting, "Banks of the Gasconade."

The Edward B. Butler purchase fund of $200, to Pauline Palmer for the painting, "The Sunny South."

The Mrs. Julius Rosenwald prize of $200 to the painting, "Arranging Flowers," by Marie E. Blanke.

The Joseph N. Eisendrath prize of $200 to Jonas Sileika for the portrait, "Zemaite—Lithuanian Writer."

The Harry A. Frank prize of $150 to "The Young Hostess," by K. A. Buehr.

The Clyde M. Carr prize of $100 to "The Last Snow," by Cornelius Botke.

Honorable mention was awarded to "Silent Spaces," by C. Raymond Johnson.

The Mrs. John C. Shaffer prize of $100 to "The War Orphan," by Gilbert P. Riswold.

The Mrs. William O. Thompson prize of $100 to "The Break in the Fence," by Jessie Arms Botke.

Neither the Municipal Art league prize of $100 for portraiture nor the silver medal of the Chicago Society of Artists has been awarded yet.

At the Arts club is now an exceedingly lovely exhibition of flower paintings by Mabel Key. With the feeling of spring that has been alive in the air for the last week, these paintings, showing as they do spring's fulfillment in summer, make one long for the coming days of slush and snow to be gone and warm days really with us. Some how the intrinsic value of summer from the standpoint of beauty is rarely recognized and remarked on as such. One takes flowers for granted. Miss Key teaches the fallacy of this.

In an adjoining room are a group of interiors, sketches in color, by Ethel Folsom. They appear to me rather flat, a bit unimpressive, not particularly appealing nor inviting, and—from the standpoint of modern convenience and taste in arranging of furniture—a trifle crowded with trivial possessions.

A new exhibition of prints is scheduled for the Camera club. Pictures by R. W. Rosendale and Gordon C. Abbott will be hung in their gallery this week.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

The Car That Fulfills All Promises

The sense of satisfaction in owning a seven-passenger Paige Essex "Six-55" is two-fold.

Primarily, of course, the owner of a Paige Essex is gratified because his good judgment in choosing it is confirmed by the car's sterling qualities of reliability, sturdiness and luxurious comfort.

But there is an added satisfaction in owning the Essex because of its impressive appearance. It has all the distinctive beauty of higher priced cars, and none of the expensive disadvantages.

As a practical vehicle, free from the burden of excessive "upkeep," the Paige-Essex is given quite general preference among cars of seven-passenger size.

Essex, Six-55; Larchmont, Six-55; Glenbrook, Six-45. Complete Line of Enclosed Cars.

Own a Farm in Canada's "Success Belt"

The Land of PROVEN Prosperity

NO such thing as competition here—everybody prospers in Canada's "Success Belt." It took nearly two hundred and fifty years of exploring, pioneering, pushing back frontiers, making way for settlers — to prove that prosperity lay hidden in the rich prairie Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Here living has been made pleasant and farming profitable—here success has become a performance instead of a promise—here wealth is passed around so that everybody shares in it. And you may share in it—

The Hudson's Bay Company Invites You

Oldest Company in the World

The search for a passage from the Atlantic Ocean to the Western Sea (now the Pacific Ocean) led Henry Hudson to discover the Bay that bears his name. Explorers who followed some years after Hudson's death, found the country inhabited by Indians with rich furs to trade for things they wanted.

Incorporated A. D. 1670

This news, brought by the explorers to influential friends in England, induced them to ask the King, Charles II, for permission to trade in the new land. A charter was then granted to "The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England Trading into Hudson's Bay." Thus was born in 1670, the Company, commonly called the Hudson's Bay Company, although the original corporate name is still officially retained.

The chief business of this Company was fur trading—as it still remains today. The charter granted them absolute ownership of practically all the land on the North American continent not claimed by any other Christian nation. To facilitate trading over so wide an area (it extended up into the Arctic regions, down to the shores of the Mississippi, and into California) it was necessary to establish trading posts, and stores for supplies.

Many of these trading posts exist today for the Company continues its fur trading operations on a large scale, while its stores have grown into large and prosperous institutions conducted on modern lines in Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Winnipeg, and at other points in the Canadian West.

Opened Way for Civilization

The history of the Hudson's Bay Company is one long series of daring exploits in which the Company's men conquered the wilderness so that peaceful trade —the first stage of civilization—could enter in. Thus the frontiers were pushed backward.

Other companies, much smaller of course, came upon the scene, and either joined the Hudson's Bay Company or disappeared. Civilization crept in. The United States had long since come into being; Canada was organized and becoming settled.

Gave Up Valuable Rights

In 1870, in order that Canada might develop and grow, the Company gave up to the young Dominion, its entire territory (called Rupert's Land, after Prince Rupert, the Company's first Governor) retaining one-twentieth, not in one block but in sections in every township of what was properly called The Fertile Belt—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta —from Lake Winnipeg and Lake of the Woods west to the Rocky Mountains, from the U. S. Boundary to the North branch of the Saskatchewan River.

Now—Your Opportunity

These are the lands the Company is offering. Part of them have been sold, more are being sold daily—the activity is great. Your opportunity is here now. With the certain increase in value to follow, the new owners of these lands will soon realize their good fortune. Look at the experience of the United States' great West. This—Canada's "Success Belt"—is the last great West.

Grain and Stock Highly Profitable

The world already knows of the stupendous grain crops of Western Canada that relieved the food situation when the strain of the war was hardest. Your farm in Canada's "Success Belt" will be in the heart of the very country that produced those banner crops. Those records can be equalled and exceeded. This is your opportunity. Wheat, oats, barley, rye and flax, are the chief products of this wonderfully fertile region. Wild hay grown in vast tonnage without effort, supplies rich feed for beef and dairy cattle.

Think of the profits—at a cost of $10 to $25 per acre. Compare the investment and profit possibilities with farm lands near you. Then you will see why this has been named the "Success Belt."

Low Prices—Time to Pay

Land in the "Success Belt" is very low in price—$10 to $25 per acre. The usual terms are one-eighth cash and the balance in easy annual installments. Many settlers have paid for farms in much less time than they intended, out of profits on rich harvests—sometimes even from one crop.

Low Taxes—None on Improvements

That Western Canada is hospitable and encouraging to settlers can be seen in its system of taxation. A small levy is made on the land; and none at all on buildings, improvements, implements, machinery, stock, or personal property. Everything that can be done, has been and is being done to make this perpetually the "Success Belt."

Schools, Churches, Social Life

Good schools are assured by Canada's system. All over the "Success Belt" are sections of land held for school use. Many good public schools are already established. More are being established as rapidly as the need for them arises; both Provincial and Dominion Governments lend a willing hand, and supply funds.

Churches of practically every denomination are to be found throughout the "Success Belt," furnishing the centres of social communities that your wife and children will readily appreciate.

The Right Kind of Neighbors

The Hudson's Bay Company is not a real estate concern. It is—as it has been during its 250 years' existence—in the business of fur trading and conducting stores. Its land holdings embrace more than 3,000,000 acres, not in one group, but in sizable acreage scattered over the entire "Success Belt" so that your selection is not limited to any one locality, or any one set of climatic conditions. It has time and again declined to sell lands to the wrong kind of people Its interest in you as a farmer is not limited to its sales agreement. It is interested in proper upbuilding of Western Canada, and this invitation is extended essentially to the individual—to real, honest-to-goodness sincere people who come to make good. That is the kind of neighbors you want; such are the people you want your wife and children to associate with. In the "Success Belt" you may be sure of such neighbors.

Write Today—Send the Coupon

You will want a farm in the "Success Belt" just as surely as you want success. You will want to farm in the midst of men who have made good. You will want to buy it from a staunch and reliable Company like this one—the oldest in the world—and feel absolutely safe in every step you take. Then write today—send this coupon to Land Department of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Remember this is not a land operating organization or a real estate concern. Write now—without cost or obligation in any way! No agents will bother you!

Closing of Shows Attended by Good Outlook for 1920

Production This Year to Set New Record, Makers Declare.

BY JOHN L. SPELLMAN.

CHICAGO'S annual automobile and motor truck shows and automobile salon ended last night. All the new cars and models are now before the public, and it was predicted that this year would hang up a new record for sales.

The car and truck buyers attended the exhibitions in numbers which far exceeded any previous attendance. It was a buying crowd, according to all accounts, and the manufacturers declared that 1920 would see a new high record on production established.

The shows brought out these facts:

Car and truck prices are going to be raised.

Deliveries will be slow for the next few months.

Every effort will be made by the manufacturers to place their plants on a pre-war basis.

Shortage of labor and the steel and coal strikes retarded the making and delivery of cars and trucks, also affected their prices.

Present day buyers of cars and trucks want utility and sturdiness rather than mere beauty.

The war caused thousands of persons to learn how to operate cars and trucks.

Car and truck buyers have given up all desire for "freaks," and now want practical conveyances.

Even the few pessimists who attended the shows had to admit that this year probably will see more car and truck sales than ever before. Even if prices are on the upgrade, it was asserted, there will be no falling off of the demand for all classes of motor vehicles.

A few manufacturers were willing to venture the opinion that some of the smaller manufacturing companies would have to drop out of the game or be absorbed by larger companies. They declared that because of the keen competition which now exists, and which will continue for several years more, the smaller and financially weaker companies will have to give way to the larger and wealthier concerns.

The local dealers and distributors were gratified at the success of the shows. Not only in Chicago, but in all its surrounding territory, they claimed, intense interest in motor vehicles and appliances was stimulated.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. Make a copy and keep it if you wish to preserve what you have written.

Driving to Moon.

While in the army as a chauffeur, one night I took several officers home from a dance held at the field. The last to be taken was not sober and was becoming worse. When I asked him where he lived, he rudely commanded: "Follow this road and take the road to the right." Obeying these orders took us to a paved, hilly road. His last order was to go to the light which showed just above a steep hill. I, myself, knew that he pointed to the moon, but followed his orders as it was my duty. When I reached the top of the hill, I asked for further directions. He wished to know where the light was, and when I pointed to the moon his astonishment caused quite a marked change in his manner. He politely told me to turn back and take a different road, which I did, we being only eight miles out of the way. F. B. Z.

Honest Injun.

While taking a trip through the Black hills we camped out one night and in the morning our car was gone. We looked all around, but with no success, and at last one of the party started to walk to the nearest town. On the way he saw a car coming that looked very much like ours, so he waited until it drew near, and on stopping it found the driver to be an Indian. "Why did you steal our car?" he demanded. "Ugh," was the reply, "me no steal. Me good Injun. Me just borrow 'mobile. Me lose two calves. Little ones. Me find um. Me take 'mobile to bring um home. Me bring back. Ugh!" His explanation was accepted. B. G.

Not a Flirt.

A friend of mine while motoring in the east had an amusing experience which he related to me recently. Driving through New Hampshire he stopped pityingly when he saw a woman beginning the climb of a mile long upgrade. My friend is considerably under thirty and the woman was sixty or more, sallow, squirrel toothed, crooked and bony. He raised his hat and asked: "May I give you a ride, madam?" She glared and snapped, "No, sir, you can't. I'm none of your city flirts, I'd have you know." K. S.

Not Nutty.

We were riding in the country last fall when some distance down the road we saw a girl standing watching her companion in a car. We, too, watched as he backed the car up several times and drove headlong into a street at the side of the road. Being curious, we drove up and asked the girl what the man's was doing. "Why, he's shaking nuts out of the tree, of course," she replied. Of course! F. G.

Good Sign Work.

There are ninety-nine tons of metal auto guide signs on the highways of southern California covering an area of 70,399 square miles, according to a report just issued by the Automobile Club of Southern California for the year of 1919. For the purpose of guiding resident and visiting motorists over this road system this organization has erected a total of 66,133 enameled metal signs, each weighing three pounds. If all the posts on which these signs stand were laid end to end, they would reach from Los Angeles to Santa Barbara, a distance of ninety-nine miles, as the report of the club's sign posting department shows that it has placed over 48,000 posts, each twelve feet in height. There were 8,929 new signs erected on the roads of the southern part of the state alone in 1919, as no transcontinental work was undertaken by the organization during the year other than to make preparations for an unusual 1920 road marking program. During the year just passed the club set 4,200 new posts. In the desert regions the posts are of metal because automobile parties thoughtlessly cut down wooden posts for firewood. The metal posts on the desert are anchored in the sand with heavy redwood blocks.

1c For a Hair Cut Instead of 50c

Cut Your Own Hair. Save Time and Money.

$1.00 Cash Allowed for This Ad

COMFORT SPEED ECONOMY

Cut your hair twice and the Duplex is paid for. By using the Duplex stropping attachment, at least 100 hair cuts can be obtained from the four cutting edges, making the cost per hair cut only one cent. Quite a difference from the barbers' heavy charges, isn't it? It makes a clear saving of $13.00 every year for each male member of the family. Besides this cash saving there are many other advantages in owning a Duplex. You can cut your hair in less than five minutes, instead of an hour at the barber's. No danger of catching dandruff or other hair diseases. You can cut your hair any hour of the day or night, any day in the week. Mothers can cut the children's hair. And you are sure of a smooth, even hair cut at a cost of 1c, instead of paying 50c for one that is uneven and jagged. You can't go wrong with a Duplex; the slanting teeth won't let you. The slanting teeth prevent pulling.

WORRY WASTE EXPENSE

A TRUCK'S DAYS-WORK IS NO JOY RIDE

ROUGH pavements—ruts—mud—snow—ice—overloads—long hauls—all are part of the day's job for a motor truck. The mystery is that trucks stand up the way they do.

There is a real reason for G-B stamina. Resistance to the ills to which all motor trucks are heir is built into these sturdy machines by workmen who know that only G-B Quality and Materials will stand the grind of present day conditions.

G-B Trucks have a habit of being out of the repair shop more than most others. They are famous, too, as possessing more than $500 worth of extras, for which others charge additional. Two big reasons for their increasing popularity.

Life of Bus May Be Doubled with Proper Handling

Some Pointers on Using Charity Instead of Careless Abuse.

BY HIGH SPEED.

It is an old saying that "charity begins at home" and wrongly applied the old saw would lead to the disappearance of all charity. It is a fact, though, that the average motor car owner is far more charitable toward other vehicles than he is to his own particular pet. The average motorist is careful to drive so as not to injure another car, but he seldon treats his own bus in the same way.

The treatment received by the average car is the reverse of charitable; in fact, it would come under the eyes of the society for the prevention of cruelty to motor cars, if such an organization were in existence. Let us examine some of the common and inexcusable abuses in detail, after which we may realize how easy it is to avoid them and resolve to do so.

Take for instance a bad case of missing. The average car owner knows that his engine has developed a miss by an unusual vibration, which is annoying certainly but scarcely more than that, and by a distinct loss of power. This latter may not be vitally important because most American cars have far more power than they need, except in emergencies.

So it happens that many owners regard a miss as simply a nuisance and say to themselves, "O, I'll fix the blame thing when I get time." They usually get time within two or three months, during the intervening period of which the engine has been missing with unwholesome regularity.

But in actual truth when the engine is missing many different parts of the mechanism are being subjected to unusual and injurious strains. When the engine misses it frequently happens that while the engine is part of the time propelling the car the rest of the time the car is propelling the engine. This sets up injurious strains on many parts. Every car owner has noticed the vibration that is set up by missing. This condition is due to the fact that when one cylinder misses, the engine as a whole slows down to a certain extent and then speeds up as the next cylinder fires. The car meanwhile is running along at nearly an even speed. It follows that when the engine slows down momentarily and then speeds up again an unusual strain is placed on universals, gears etc.

To explain this let us remind the reader that only one tooth of a bevel gear is completely engaged at any one time. When the engine is slowed down by missing and then speeds up again with more or less of a jerk, it is obvious that the single gear tooth has to carry a most unusual strain, which in time may cause breakage or chipping.

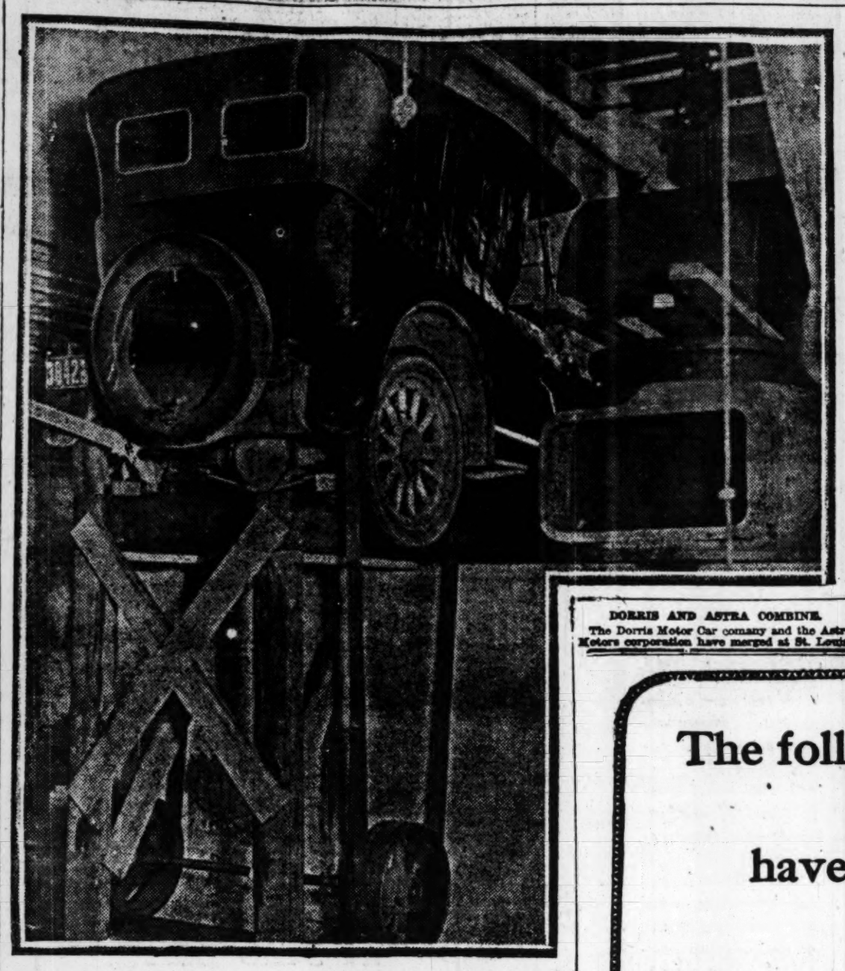
The net result of our investigation so far is the discovery that missing is not a mere annoying condition that may be tolerated until convenient to eliminate it, but an actual danger to the mechanism. Whenever a car owner detects a miss he should go after the cause and eliminate the trouble with as little delay as possible.

Very similar results when the accelerator pedal is operated unevenly. This will be almost obvious, and the driver who desires to be charitable to his own car will realize that pressure should be applied to the pedal gently. Incidentally when driving over very rough roads where it is not possible to keep the foot steady, would it not be more sensible to use the hand throttle?

The clutch, wrongly handled, is one of the most uncharitable units in the entire mechanical organism. When the clutch is thrown into engagement it is almost inevitable that the mechanism as a whole is subjected to certain stresses or strains. If the engagement is harsh or violent these stresses are magnified many times over. The lesson here learned is easy; accurate operation of the clutch on the part of the driver and adequate maintenance of the part so that it may not become harsh in application.

The instruction books that come with the various cars will tell the owner what grade of oil will give the best results with his vehicle and how much of the oil should be used. If the owner stops there he is making a great mistake. It is so easy to keep on filling up the reservoir as the oil is used up, that the average car owner is tempted to let it go at that. But that is not the proper way to handle the matter.

The oil used in the engine is subjected to great heat, particularly that which comes in contact with the upper end of the piston. Inevitably a certain amount of the virtue of the oil is eventually lost. If fresh oil is poured into the reservoir to bring the volume up to the proper point a considerable quantity of partly vitiated lubricant stays in the system. It follows, therefore, that the charitable owner will at stated intervals empty his reservoir of the old oil and refill it with fresh after the receptacle has been flushed out with kerosene.



TOURING CAR OPERATES PLANT—During the coal conservation period, which followed the strike of the bituminous miners, the plant of the G. M. Davis Regulator company in Chicago was facing a shutdown. One of the officials owned a Mitchell touring car. This was backed into the plant and placed over a system of shafting. The car operated the machinery of the plant and averted what otherwise would have been a shutdown. The automobile was used in the plant for twelve days. It operated a generator drive shaft.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

"PEOPLE came to the New York automobile shows to look and to the Chicago shows to buy," said John Tainsh, general sales manager of the Mitchell Motors company.

Two hundred and twenty-five drivers enrolled for the first 1920 Packard truck drivers' instruction course at the Chicago branch.

M. F. Stapelton was made western sales manager for the radiator division of the Marlin-Rock company.

The Commerce Motor Car company of Detroit has acquired two additional acres of ground on which to expand its factory.

K. P. Drysdale has become associated with Theodore F. MacManus, Inc.

B. G. Koether has moved from Detroit to Newark, N. J. He was made vice president of Hyatt.

R. B. Fisher has been made general sales manager for the Buda company.

William W. McMahan has been made vice president of the Ajax Rubber company, in charge of the Sandusky division.

The general sales department of the Kelly-Springfield Tire company will be moved to New York City from Cleveland. The company will erect an office building at the eastern place.

The Star Rubber company has opened a distributing depot at 1841 South Wabash avenue.

Efforts are being made by the friends of Charles Goodyear, inventor of the rubber vulcanization process, to have him included in the Hall of Fame.

"The importance of ordering a car now for spring delivery cannot be overemphasized," said Harry Branstetter, local Kissel distributor.

The Marmon company has about completed work on its third new plant.

Charles C. Craig has been made sales manager of the Stewart Motor corporation.

A new sales and service station will be built at 3340-48 South Michigan avenue by the Indiana Truck corporation.

Hiram F. Harris is now president of the Bethlehem Motors corporation.

"If manufacturers make every car they plan on making this year, we'll just about fill one-half the orders that are coming in," said W. J. Boone, Chicago manager for the R. & V.

Furniture floor—the seventh

To Chicago, the supreme economic significance of the 30th February furniture sale is largely based on purchases made in 1918 a fourth to a third under 1920's market

We bought furniture by the trainload immediately after the armistice was signed—and have held much of it in reserve against Chicago's insistent demand of today, for better furniture at lower prices. Our 1918 purchases now constitute the nucleus of a million dollar furniture stock—the largest yet

—its comprehensiveness as convincing as its economies to the furniture-wise—who realize that savings are only real when applied to a selection broad enough to contain the very pieces they need and admire and want.

For two years there have been floods in the great forests of the South, just at the logging season, and this misfortune has occasioned a lumber shortage that today is becoming acutely apparent. Furniture manufacturers are feeling this shortage the more sharply because of unprecedentedly large lumber requirements for the myriad buildings now in process of construction. Decreased supply and increased demand, of course, have sent lumber prices sky high.

Louis XVI. bedroom suite in mahogany, walnut or old ivory finish

Dresser, 48 inches wide, with large mirror, at $132.
Vanity dresser, 50 inches wide, with triple mirrors, 158.25.
Chifforette, 38 inches wide, with roomy drawer space, $126.
Bed, full size, bow foot, $109. Chest of drawers, 38-inch, $112.
Toilet table, 42 inches wide, with triple mirrors, 98.75. Night stand at 23.25. Suite illustrated above. Same prices in all finishes.

The furniture of the near future, constructed of this higher priced lumber, must itself command a higher price. Hence our insistence on your advantage in buying furniture now—not merely ahead of this advance—not merely at an outlay that might reflect recent wholesale quotations—but at prices based largely on the far lower market of fifteen months ago—prices that underquote today's retail figures a fourth to a third—and tomorrow's much more.

A. J. KIRSTIN COMPANY,
Box H,
Escanaba, Mich.

THIS IS FOR the purpose of establishing communication with men who have advanced consistently with their opportunities, but who are employed where the highest places obtainable are not sufficiently attractive to wait for.

Ours is a young corporation making substantial progress in a field which has been less than 1 per cent extended. There is no place with us for the man who is habitually seeking a new connection, but there is a place for an American (Gentile) between 27 and 37, who has determined to change for the sole purpose of creating a lifelong association where he can increase his earnings and develop according to his capabilities. We will be interested in such inherent qualities as appearance, enthusiasm, loyalty, courtesy, cheerfulness, adaptability, and consideration for the opinion of others. If you have these qualities, a fair education, previous experience that has accustomed you to meeting various classes of people, and have resided in this district three or more years, write briefly and explicitly, giving telephone number of one reference. Others will not be consulted without permission. Address S 237, Tribune.

PHONOGRAPH CABINET SUPERINTENDENT.

We need a man who knows all phases of phonograph construction and can impart that knowledge to the help usually employed in a cabinet plant, to the end that a personnel of 300 will work as a unit and produce a phonograph second to none.

All the assistance necessary to accomplish the above will be freely given by a long established concern employing almost 1,000 men.

The position is excellent because we will pay the proper man a good salary to start and can assure him an opportunity to grow because of our continued growth in the past and splendid prospects for the future.

If you feel yourself qualified to hold the above position, write us fully regarding your past experience. Your correspondence will be treated confidentially.

ADVERTISING MAN.

A thoroughly established advertising service company is looking for a man to act as assistant to one of its executives. The company is not an advertising agency, although the character of its work is very similar to that of an agency. The man wanted will have responsible and important work to do. He should be a creator of good copy, both as a writer and as a designer. He should be a good correspondent. He should have a faculty for research work and for digging up interesting data in connection with advertised commodities. He should have a vision of marketing problems, and a strong sense of news values. He should have had at least five years' experience in advertising, and if that experience includes work in the copy service department of an advertising agent or a publication, it would be especially valuable. A spirit of teamwork, co-operation and exchange of ideas with his associates is essential. A man who has these qualifications in the main has here an opportunity not only for a congenial position, with an immediate salary commensurate to his ability, but also for making a place for himself in a business which is already large and growing rapidly, and in which he can participate in the growth. All replies will be held as absolutely confidential. Address G G 353, Tribune.

A BIG BOOM IN 1920 FOR SUBDIVISION LOTS.

AMBITIOUS MEN WANTED.

What is easier to sell than something there is a demand for? There is now an active demand for subdivision lots well located. The scarcity of homes and the high cost of living is compelling people to seek new home values and own their own homes. In view of this fact we have set up 37,000,000 worth of vacant lots during 1920. We now have $3,000,000 worth of excellently located property ready for sale. This means that we will pay an enormous amount in commissions this year to our salesmen. Those who join us now have the opportunity of cleaning an enormous income this year. Prompt cashing of sales insures immediate payment of commissions. Experience not necessary in our business. We teach you in our free school of instruction. Join us now for our free instruction. PROVE IT!
You know numerous ordinary fellows who are a BIG SUCCESS and you know they have no better brains than the average. Surely you are not BELOW average. Remember, success comes only by much thought and unswerving effort along a definite line of ACTION. You can forget H. C.L. and increase much needed production by getting into the position where your efforts will re rewarded in CASH and OPPORTUNITY. We have hundreds of positions for clerks, bookkeepers, salesmen, executives, and technical men. You NEED us—and we need YOU to prove it. In sixteen years we have placed 300,000—WHY NOT?
BUSINESS MEN'S CLEARING HOUSE,
1408 REPUBLIC BLDG., 209 S. STATE-ST.

TAKE IT.
The natural laws of self-preservation influence man to comfortably provide for himself—but something more is needed to prevent some fellows from having a WISHBONE instead of a BACKBONE. Wishing for SUCCESS is the old fable stuff of the open mouthed, lazy frog waiting for a juicy fly to hop into it. ASSERT YOUR MANHOOD. Success is yours for the taking. List below is but a few of the wonderful positions we have open. Get in Monday. WE HAVE IT FOR YOU.

TO YOUNG WOMEN
HAVING NO PREVIOUS BUSINESS EXPERIENCE

We have one of the most attractive working opportunities in Chicago to offer young women between the ages of 20 and 25.

The work is not difficult. We give you plenty of time to learn about our business. You can make $17 a week and very shortly you can make as much as $20 if you improve in your ability.

Applicants must be neat in appearance, come from good family, and have a high school or equivalent education. A certain amount of native aggressiveness to accomplish results is a desirable qualification.

Young women who have gone to private schools and who have never worked before will find ours a splendid place to work. The business institution which this advertisement represents is thoroughly reliable and one that you would be pleased to work for. In your application give details of age, schooling, address, and phone number. Address R M 419, Tribune.

TO RENT.

This is the bona fide advertisement of a Real Estate firm of high standing, managing about a score of buildings on North Side between Fullerton and Wilson-ays., ranging in rent from $55 to $95, heated and $12 to $15 unheated. THE RENTS OF THESE FLATS WILL NOT BE RAISED TO THE PROFITEERING CLASS; most of the tenants will remain.

We intend to get in touch with prospective renters who will prove NORMAL tenants for any vacancies we may have. This is done now owing to the existing desperation of so many people who will be forced from their present quarters by abnormal raises of rent, making them anxious to get anything, whether it suits them or not. This makes all owners liable to rent to families that are entirely unappropriate to them. WE WANT ONLY TENANTS WHO WOULD RENT OUR FLATS IN NORMAL TIMES, not those who might take them in order to get anything at all. IF THIS FRANK STATEMENT APPEALS TO YOU, entrust to us your name, address, and telephone and in the bare statement of the number of rooms you require, the general location desired, and the rent you want to pay, emphasizing the sum you can pay your special desirability as a tenant. If we have anything to fit, we will get in touch with you and if not you will not be bothered. Address Y E 871, Tribune.

SO DIFFERENT.

If you can wait until early spring to move into your new brick bungalow or two flat, I have a plan that will save you $1,000 to $1,500 and your monthly payments will be decidedly less than your rent is now. Elevated and surface transportation, stores, theaters, etc., located in the most beautiful residence section in Ravenswood.
This is the safest proposition in Chicago today, and if you are looking for a high grade neighborhood you should investigate at once, as I can only take care of a limited number.
Absolutely nothing in the city as astonishingly reasonable—nothing so convincingly good. Spring isn't very far away. Address Y G 471, Tribune.

You Can't Borrow a Nickel

on your rent receipts; did you ever think of that? I can offer you an opportunity to buy your own home in Chicago's choicest residence district, Albany Park (Ravenswood) elevated and surface transportation, on payments as low as $40 per month; will build 42 high grade brick bungalows and 2 flat bldgs., sun parlors, hot water heat with latest improvements on a plan never offered before; act quick; make your rent money work for you, not the landlord.

POWER

MIGHTY FORCES are at work in the world today. Among these are coal, iron, commercial, political, and financial power. But greater than any of these is the productive power of land, upon which all the other forces depend.

MAN POWER and horse power may die, and very rapidly, too. Mechanical power is affected by rust, wear, and breakage. But liteal and financial power may be swept away in a night, but the God-given productive power of land continues on and on to bless and bring joy not to a few but to all mankind.

GET SOME of this productive power of land for the good of yourself and your family. Mr. Wage Earner, get a piece of land now while acres are high and when work is slack, take yourself and family to the land and live in comfort. Mr. Farm Renter, this is the time to become a farm owner.

THE BEST PLACE to go is in the newly opened Swigart Tract of hardwood land in the great Fruit and Clover Belt of the Southern Peninsula of Michigan. The price is now only $10 to $35 per acre, on very small payments. Good productive land—mostly level; no swamps or stones. All the land is near towns, schools, and churches.

We have had 20 years' experience in helping people get a start on their land. Ask us how our insurance feature will help you and how we help you get started on a farm home your own.

WRITE TODAY for booklet and full information.

STATE STREET BON MARCHE FOR LOOP SHOPPERS

Novel Store to Open in the Siegel-Cooper Bldg.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago—the home of the largest department store in the world and also the tallest store building in existence—is going to have the most novel and lowest priced mechandise mart of any big city—if predictions of its backers come true.

Within four weeks the eight story building in South State street, between Van Buren and Congress streets, which for twenty-five years or more housed Siegel, Cooper & Co., will reopen its doors as "The Leiter Store," a full fledged up to the minute city department store it will appear to the casual visitor—but with innovations that will make even the jaded State street shopper take notice.

This Way for Po'k Chops.

For instance, if Mrs. Dearborn is looking for pork chops she will be directed down the big, wide stairway cut in the center of the main floor to the basement, where the entire 68,000 square feet of floor is to be devoted to food products. But instead of finding merely a meat market with pork chops selling at one price, and that might be a cent or two higher than she could buy at some other store, she will find twelve—yes, one dozen—meat markets, each owned and operated by different companies, stretched along the side of the big room for 400 feet. With twelve meat markets to choose from in one room, it looks as though Mrs. Dearborn ought to get those po'k chops at a fairly reasonable price. For they will all be competing for Mrs. Dearborn's trade.

This competitive idea will be carried out throughout the entire big basement food market. There will be fifteen fruit and vegetable firms competing with each other. At the south end there will be a restaurant.

She'll Probably Carry 'Em.

If Mrs. Dearborn bought those po'k chops she'll pay cash for them and probably carry them along with her, for free delivery has been sacrificed for lower prices. If she wants them sent it will cost her a minimum of 10 cents.

When she gets back to the first floor she'll notice that instead of a center aisle north and south and smaller east and west cross aisles, the store is divided by long, wide north and south aisles. On this floor all the ordinary lines of merchandise carried on the ground floor of department stores will be shown, but only one company has been allotted to sell each line. On the second floor will be various concerns selling women's merchandise. The third will be called the men's floor. House furnishings will occupy the entire fourth. There will be a restaurant on the fifth, and the balance of that floor will be devoted to furniture.

The sixth, seventh, and eighth will be given up to a brand new feature in department store merchandising, it is claimed, which will be made public later.

Enter the Brothers Doerr.

When Siegel, Cooper & Co. closed their doors May 1, 1917, Joseph Leiter began a search for tenants. He combed the country from coast to coast. No one wanted so much space. Later the government used part of the building for thirty-nine days and sold over $1,000,000 worth of supplies, with every dollar's worth "cash and carry."

And then two Chicagoans, Albert I. and George W. Doerr, took their cue from Uncle Sam and also a suggestion from the Bon Marché in Paris. They laid their plans before Mr. Leiter. He put a prompt O. K. on them. On March 1 the result will be made public.

Listen to the composite description of the project as told in a dialogue interview with the two brothers.

Eighty-seven Departments.

"We are going to have eighty-seven departments," they said, "and 200 separate concerns will operate them. We've received 1,220 applications to date, and about 15 per cent are manufacturers who will sell direct. For instance, a pickle maker is going to have a pickle shop. A baking powder manufacturer will have a little store of his own for his products. Twenty per cent will be small merchants, and about 40 per cent will be middle grade merchants.

"There will be no so-called rentals. Each applicant for space will be assigned a location, and at the end of the first month he will pay a certain percentage of his gross profits to the Leiter estate. It will range from 5 to 10 per cent. His heat, lights, janitor service, and other incidentals will be furnished him free, so you can see his overhead will be so light that he can figure to a cent the profits on his goods, and mark them much lower than the outside shopkeeper.

No Bargain Tables.

"And listen to this—there'll be no bargain tables. The windows will be open to view from the store as well as the street, with a wide aisle running along inside by the windows. Each department owner will be allotted space at certain times for window display. There will be an advertising fund, to which every firm has got to subscribe, and we're going to go the limit on advertising the new store. It'll be the biggest fund on State street.

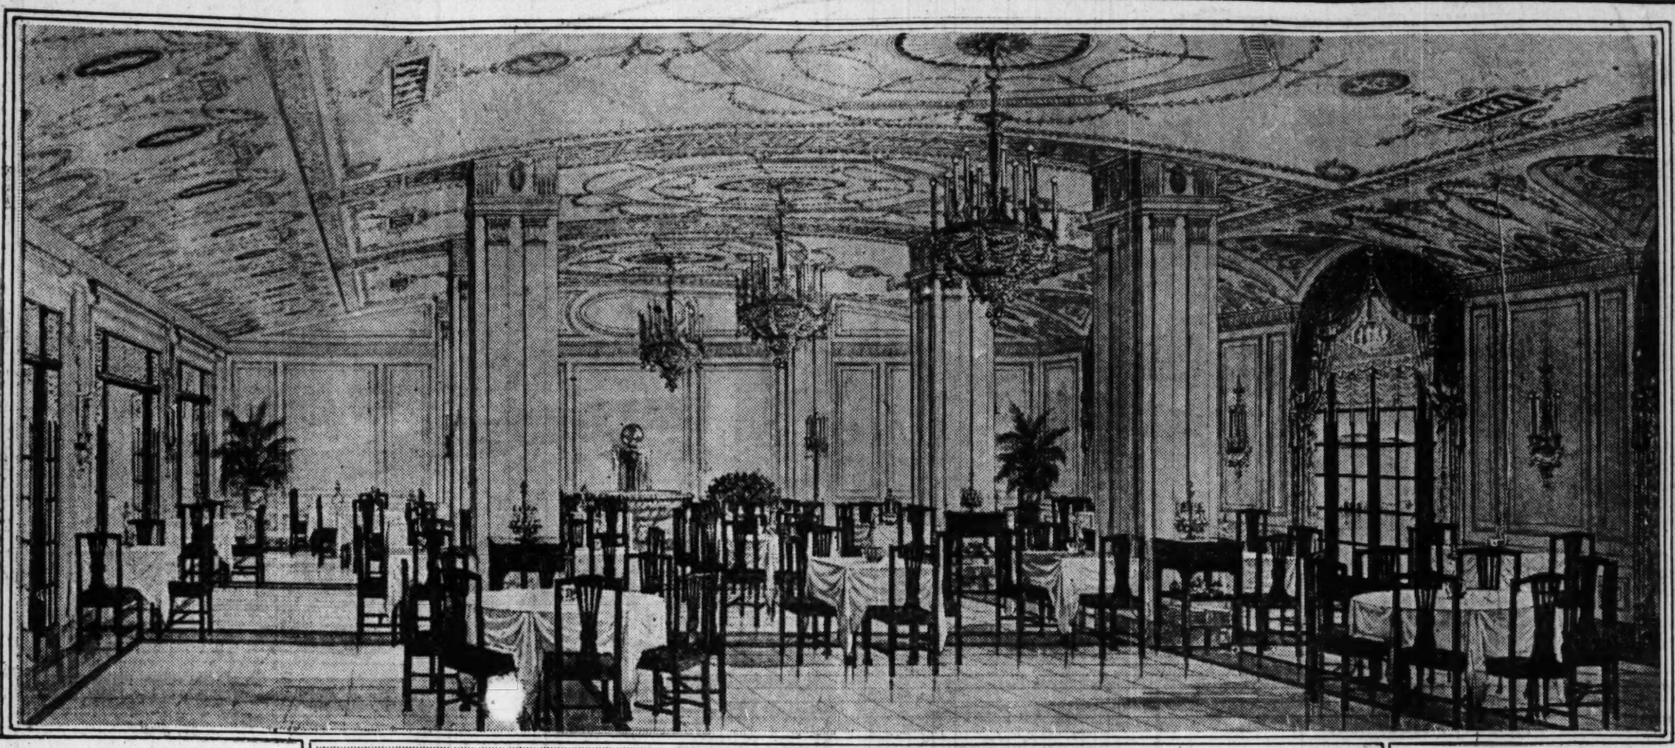
"A motor service company has the delivery concession, and each customer will pay a direct charge to it for delivery. But we figure that 75 per cent of our customers will carry their own purchases home. The store hours are going to be from 8 to 6.

"Each lessee, and leases will run from one to five years, will put in his own counters and shop fixtures, all subject to approval of the store superintendent to insure uniformity.

Courtesy Promised.

"We think one of the biggest points in our plan is that the shopper gets the conveniences of the city department store with the personal responsibility of the small town store. For in most cases the buyer will come in direct contact with the owner of the department and of course should get better attention and more courtesy than from an uninterested clerk."

And maybe if the Messrs. Doerr's promises of a combination of low prices with courteous treatment come true in Chicago's big new merchandise mart, both Father Dearborn and the missus may find a new way to hit old Hi Cost a darned good wallop.



The interior view shown above is the main dining room of the new Hotel Admiral. A feature is the vaulted ceiling. All of its east windows overlook the lake. The exterior view shows the Italian garden fronting on the lake. Half of the hotel is expected to be ready for occupancy by fall. Jan. 1 of next year is set for the formal opening of the entire hotel.

DEARBORN TO BE LOOP'S NEWEST WOODS THEATER

Chicago's newest playhouse, the Dearborn—its tentative name—to be built by A. H. Woods diagonally across the street from his first local theater, the Woods, will be the most luxurious place of amusement in America, it is claimed.

With the exception of a few shops on the Dearborn street side, it is planned to make it an exclusive theater building, with no offices other than those of Mr. Woods. It will seat around 1,200 and, as in the Woods, will have a balcony but no gallery.

$60,000 Ground Rental.

Mr. Woods was called to New York suddenly by the death of his secretary, who had charge of his affairs for fifteen years, and final signatures to the lease have not been placed. It is reported that the ground rental from the McCormick estate will be $60,000 annually. The property fronts 120 feet on Randolph and 100 feet on Dearborn street. The board of review valued the property at $787,798, on which $55,000 is in the building.

Marshall & Fox, architects of the Woods theater, are working on plans for the new playhouse. The Longacre Construction company of New York will erect it.

Plans a Third House.

Mr. Woods announced before he went east that before the year was over work would be under way on two theaters to be managed by him. The name Chicago, also Marquette, have been considered for one of the new houses.

The Shuberts are expected to build two or more houses during the next year. Their lease on the Garrick has only two and a half years to run and it is understood they won't renew it. They are now paying $45,000 rental a year. An offer of $...,000 by another manager has been turned down by the new owners of the property.

According to Marshall & Fox, the syndicate is still looking for sites for three new playhouses. Work will begin as soon as locations can be secured.

City Official to Discuss "Excess Condemnation"

Eugene H. Dupea, assistant corporation counsel and a delegate to the constitutional convention at Springfield, will talk on "Excess Condemnation" to the real estate men of Chicago at a luncheon to be given next Friday at the Morrison hotel at 12:15 p. m. by the real estate subdivision of the Association of Commerce. All realty men and others interested in the subject are invited.

Publishers Lease 7 Story La Salle Street Building

The Linden Bros. Publishing company, now at 720 South Dearborn street, has leased through E. F. Keeble & Co. the entire seven story building at 701-3 South La Salle street for fifteen years from May 1 at a term rental of $225,000. The building has a floor area of 40,000 square feet.

TICKET OFFICES TO STAY WHERE UNCLE SAM MOVED THEM

The question as to whether Chicago railroad ticket offices are going to scatter themselves about the loop when Uncle Sam takes his hand off the throttle, seems to have been settled with the signing by the Michigan Central railroad, as the holding road for eastern lines, of a ten year lease from July, 1918, on the eastern half of the main floor of the Insurance Exchange building. It is presumed that all of the eastern roads now occupying space there will remain.

The Burlington as holding road for the western lines, is expected to take the same action, although one western road, the Norhtwestern, is talking of going back to its old offices at the northwest corner of Clark and Adams. Most of the former offices of other roads have been taken over by retail stores or are to be supplanted by new buildings as in the case of the Grand Pacific hotel.

Gives Daughter $24,000 Residence in Winnetka

A belated New Year's gift, belated so far as the filing of the transfer of the property is concerned, is the presentation to Mrs. Helen Johnson Clark by her father of the stucco residence of Chester Walcott, architect, in Blackthorn road, Winnetka, north of Pine street. The lot is 100x300. The property was sold through J. L. Floyd for $24,000. Mrs. Clark is the wife of Dr. Elbert Clark of the University of Chicago.

River Forest Tennis Club Buys New Suburban Site

With the purchase of the block bounded by Oak, Jackson, Lathrop, and Quick avenues, River Forest, by the River Forest Tennis club, from Edward C. Waller for $34,800, Oak Park and River Forest tennis fans are assured a permanent place for their favorite recreation.

The new club site, four blocks west of the present one, is 368x435, or 5.17 acres, and will be improved during the summer with ten or twelve clay courts. In the fall the present club building, a low rambling structure designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, will be moved.

The club has made a $50,000 loan at the Oak Park Trust and Savings bank, twenty-five years at 5 per cent, to pay for the purchase and for improving the clubhouse. They have occupied their present site on a year to year lease. The club now has 125 members and will raise the limit to 175 later.

OPENS GLENCOE OFFICE.

Paul Schroeder & Co. of Wilmette have opened a branch office in Glencoe.

Columbian Co. to Build $1,400,000 Color Plant

One of the largest and most complete color printing plants in the world is planned by the Columbian Colortype company. It has purchased from the estate of Otto Young the Otto Young homestead, at the northwest corner of Calumet avenue and Twenty-first street, 123x177, for $50,000, and will put up a $600,000 building and will spend $800,000 in equipment, it is reported. The Columbian company has a large plant just south of the Young residence, at the northeast corner of Calumet and Twenty-second.

BUILD A HOME BEFORE YOU BUY A CAR—KRAMER

Realty President Warns of Extravagance.

This is the second of a series of articles by Adolph F. Kramer, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, written for The Tribune on the housing situation. A third will appear shortly.

BY ADOLPH F. KRAMER.
[President Chicago Real Estate Board.]

Chicago must build—houses, flats, hotels, warehouses, factories, theaters, garages, office buildings, transportation, boulevards, parks. You, Mr. Renter! You, Mr. Investor! You, Mr. Speculator! You must get busy now—today.

For today we stand on the threshold of our greatest era—the time when our population will be increased so rapidly that it will require the exercise of all our building strength, the employment of hundreds of millions of dollars and the extension of our housing facilities to the extreme limit to see us through successfully.

The man who is a renter today must, in self defense, build for himself. His Liberty bonds and his other savings will start him and he will finish on the money that he would have been paying in rent, and in from five to seven years he will own his own home.

Strong on Luxuries.

Flat dwellers don't hesitate about buying expensive automobiles and high priced pianos and other luxuries these days—but when it comes to buying a home, they balk. Advancing prices of motor cars seem to have no effect on our renters.

In a recent advertisement of the Chicago Automobile Trade association the warning is sounded to the prospective buyer of "a higher price before the first warm day of spring." The ad says "contrary to past experience dealers have not been able to accumulate cars for spring delivery." I quote this to show that manufacturers do not hesitate on account of high prices and the prospect of higher prices to warn the public that they should buy and to push their sales.

Then why should the people wait to build houses and flat buildings, even though prices are high and liable to be still higher? Folks are buying cars on a 100 per cent increase over a few years ago and not whimpering. And the minute you drive a new automobile around the block it depreciates from 25 to 50 per cent in values. Does this worry the public? Not a bit.

And Then He Howls.

But if a man builds a house and occupies it for a whole generation and then sells it at a comparative loss he sets up a howl that can be heard all over the neighborhood. Yet this house is his home, his castle, the best investment he can make in money, in morality, and in happiness.

I'd like to see a spirit of "owning your home" like that of the automobile fan who must have the latest and newest thing in cars in rivalry with his neighbor. It must be the best and most beautiful, regardless of price. The home should come first and the automobile afterwards—not the car first and the rented apartment—and perhaps poverty afterwards.

Build or buy your home—and then think about that car.

KELLY BROS. MOVE.

Kelly Bros. announce that owing to increase in business they have removed from 718 West Sixty-third street to larger quarters at 6504 Wentworth avenue.

ABOVE is Chicago's newest de luxe hotel, the Admiral, to be built at a total reported cost of $3,800,000 at the foot of Foster avenue and the lake, opposite the Saddle and Cycle club. The hotel grounds front 230 feet on Foster, 176 feet on the lake and 273 feet on the south, with an area of 40,320 square feet. The building will be 145x147 and contain 430 rooms.

A space of 100x176 feet fronting the lake will be used for an Italian garden with hundreds of feet of ivy and flower covered pergolas and promenades, a profusion of flowers and shrubs and a fountain. It will be flooded in winter for skating. There will be a private bathing beach with locker and shower rooms with connecting corridors from beach to elevator lobby.

A piazza, twenty feet wide and 160 feet long, will face the lake and Italian garden. It will be furnished with tables and refreshments will be served during the summer.

The main dining room will be, it is claimed, one of the most beautiful and unusual in the country. A feature will be the vaulted ceiling. It is designed in the Empire style and all decorations will be in white, blue, and gold. There will be an ornamental fountain at one end of the room. The entire east side will overlook the lake.

The suites will vary in size from one room and bath to seven rooms and three baths. Another unusual feature will be the mechanical ventilation furnishing fresh air to all apartments at all times. There will be a solarium and roof garden. It is claimed that 80 per cent of the rooms will have a view of the lake.

The architect of the Admiral is John A. Nyden. He has designed it in the style of the Italian renaissance. It will be of light gray brick with stone and terra cotta trimmings to match. The Admiral Hotel company owns the site and will erect the hotel.

Hool Realty Co. manage exclusively these 46 Chicago Buildings

Renting Department

A. C. Wendell, Manager and Secretary of Company

This department has charge of the leasing of the space in all the buildings under our management. At the present time all of these buildings are 100% rented. This department also does the largest brokerage renting business of any firm in the city. During 1919 this department closed leases involving a total rent of $14,000,000.

Loan Department

George Woelffer, Manager

We loan money on business or manufacturing properties in the loop, or adjacent to it. We finance deals of any amount where the property value, either in fee or leasehold, is at least twice the amount of the loan.

Rogers Park Branch

6735 Sheridan Road, Corner Columbia

Richard M. Johnson, Manager and Director of Company

The business of this department is rapidly expanding. It manages more apartment and store buildings in Rogers Park than any other Chicago firm. The office includes a complete sales department dealing exclusively in Rogers Park property.

Woodlawn Branch

1552 East 63rd Street

E. C. Holmberg, Manager

This branch has been recently opened for the better management of our south-side buildings.

Repair Department

Adam Spier, Manager

This department is maintained by the Hool Realty Co. for the benefit of owners and tenants entirely without profit to us. As a result of the operations of this branch of our service, repairs are made quickly and efficiently at the lowest cost consistent with good work. This department now has under way work involving the expenditure of $400,000.

Accounting Department

H. H. Grise, Manager

This is one of the most essential departments of any business and especially in real estate. The accounting branch of our organization is operated chiefly for the benefit of the owners for whom we collect over $2,000,000 annually.

General Supervision of the entire organization

Sales Department

P. T. Johnston, Manager

Operations of this department are steadily widening. In 1919 this department sold more than $3,000,000 worth of real estate, the value of properties sold ranging from $2,500 up.

Bond Sales Department

A. R. Aldendifer, Manager

This department handles First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds secured by Chicago buildings of which we have the exclusive management for the term of the loan. These bonds come in denominations of $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. They combine the highest grade of security and maximum interest returns, our bonds yielding 6 to 7 per cent. The bonds can be bought and paid for in ten equal monthly installments if desired, cash payments bearing interest from date paid.

Insurance Department

A. C. Wiehle, Manager and Treasurer of Company

During 1919 this department wrote more than $3,000,000 insurance. The department writes all kinds of insurance, which is placed with the Standard Companies. We attend to all details, ordering the insurance, obtaining the policy and delivering to our clients. In case of loss we adjust same without charge to you. We also give you estimates of cost of replacing damage and supervise re-construction.

Maintenance Department

E. R. White, Manager
H. S. Sullivan, Ass't Manager

This department has direct charge of all the buildings under our management. This includes the hiring of employes and their supervision, the purchasing of supplies and the testing of them, the ordering of repairs and the checking of the bills.

Multigraph Department

E. Saunders, Manager

The Hool Realty Co. organization has become so large that it has been found necessary to publish a house organ—"Realty Tips and Quips." This novel publication keeps all the members of our organization posted on the work of all departments. It is printed monthly in our multigraph department, and in addition to purely organization news each issue contains interesting information for property owners. It is the livest, most up to date real estate house organ in Chicago. It is free. Send for it. Our multigraph department also does printing for our owners, tenants and clients at low rates.
